CONCERNING ALUM IN BAKING POWDER.

During the month of January an important case was tried in the Dauphin county court, Judge Allison O. Smith, of Clearfield county, specially presiding. It was a prosecution instituted by Special Agent H. L. Banzhoff, of the Dairy and Food Bureau, against Myer Gross, a Harrisburg grocer, on the charge of selling a brand of baking powder containing an added substance—alum. The case aroused widespread interest, especially among the manufacturers of baking powder containing alum, and the understanding was that the alum baking powder people were the real defendants. Many of their leading men were on the ground. The defense was conducted by them.

The Commonwealth called Special Agent Banzhoff to the stand and proved by him that the sample in evidence had been purchased from Mr. Gross, properly sealed and shipped to Professor James A. Evans, of Erie. Professor Evans, who is a well-known chemist, followed Mr. Banzhoff on the witness stand. He received the sample, analyzed it, found that it contained alum and so reported to Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust. This witness was corroborated by Professor William Frear, of State College; Professor Floyd W. Robison, of Lansing, Michigan; Professor C. H. LaWall, of Philadelphia; Professor C. B. Cochran, of West Chester; Professor F. T. Aschman, of Pittsburg.

The defense attacked the constitutionality of the law. It likewise contended that sodium aluminic sulphate, which is the substance used in the baking powder in question, is not alum within the meaning of the act. Among the witnesses who testified on behalf of the defense were Professor G. G. Pond, of State College; Drs. Pennimen and Jorup, of Philadelphia; W. L. DeJawn, of the General Chemical Company, New York; John W. Bach, of the Superior Chemical Company, Joliet, Illinois; Thomas L. Parker, of Philadelphia; W. E. Bartlett, of the Pennsylvania Salt Manufacturing Company; William H. Watt, of the Providence Chemical Company, Providence, Rhode Island; Dr. Aram Ellsworth Smith, of New York.

Judge Smith over-ruled both points made by the defense, instructing the jury that the act is constitutional and that sodium aluminic is alum. The only question for the jury to determine was whether the samples contained this substance, and as this was not denied by the defense a verdict of guilty was quickly rendered.

Grocers and others dealing in baking powder should remember that Judge Allison O. Smith's interpretation of the pure food act of May 13, 1909, will be accepted and acted on by the Dairy and Food Bureau unless the higher courts should hand down a decision declaring the act unconstitutional. At present the act is in full force and effect, and it is the duty of Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust to enforce it. He has taken an oath to do this and will, by himself and his subordinates, the agents of the bureau, enforce the act. This is his duty. It is not his province or the province of anybody else to assume that the enforcement of the act would work hardship to certain interests. The Legislature in its wisdom saw fit to enact the law, the Governor signed it, a court has just pronounced it constitutional. It is the duty of every citizen of the State to obey.

Grocers should take particular notice to the fact that the presence of alum in any food product exposed to sale in this Commonwealth is forbidden by the Murphy act. The law leaves no loophole of escape. It means alum and declares that it must not be added to any article sold as food in this State. The court says the Legislature was clothed with power to make such a prohibition, regardless of the disputed question of the harmlessness or the danger of alum, and the duty of the Dairy and Food Division is simple and plain; just as simple and plain as that of the jury which tried this case and returned a verdict of guilty. That duty is to cause the arrest and punishment under the law of any and every person selling food products containing alum.

Some persons get the erroneous idea into their heads that the Dairy and Food Commissioner makes the laws. That is an error. There is but one lawmaking body in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania—that is the Legislature. Others imagine that the Dairy and Food Commissioner has the right to suspend the enforcement of an act during his pleasure. That is also a mistake. As is stated above, he has no alternative but to carry into execution the mandate of the lawmaking power. This he strives to do without reference to his own estimate of the wisdom of any act of Assembly, and this he will continue to do unto the end. This the people of Pennsylvania expect him to do, as is their right.

COMMISSIONER JONES ON FOOD ADULTERATION.

In his tenth annual report the Hon. A. H. Jones, Food Commissioner of Illinois, indulges in the following reflections:

"Properly labeled foods that are composed of pure and wholesome ingredients may cost a little more than the cheaper or inferior article could be purchased for, but in the end there will be a decided saving in the matter of preserved health, mental activity and actual effect of the genuine food, for it has been conclusively demonstrated that it takes much less of the pure and genuine article of food to make a wholesome and stable ration as well as to satisfy hunger, than of the 'drugged' or 'doped' or of the 'imitation' product.

"This is a fact which should commend itself to the serious consideration of every dealer and consumer, and this is one of the fundamental doctrines taught by every Pure Food Commissioner or pure food official, and the effects of its teachings and enforcement have convinced the people of our land that it is right and that the enforcement of the 'Pure Food Laws' is in the interest of the people.

"Food is, next to air, the greatest necessity of life, and the study of the various kinds of foods adapted to human existence, their relation to the needs of the human body, their influence on the health of the individual, their quality, their purity or freedom from matters foreign and injurious to health, is one of the essential studies in connection with pure food laws and the sanitary conditions pertaining thereto.

"When, as in ages past, nearly all the various food products were grown and manufactured by the consumer himself, or the consumer bought direct from the farmers the raw materials, such as grain, meats, fruits, etc., and prepared the foods himself, he was certain, or at any rate, had greater security that he was consuming the pure article.

"The food and food stuffs of former times were few and simple as compared with ours. Formerly the food markets were not filled with all manner of goods prepared and ready for consumption.

"The food materials that were formerly bought and sold were mainly of a raw, crude nature. Formerly they had neither potted meats nor canned vegetables, spices came to them unground and with none of their virtues extracted. Formerly the list of family groceries was a short one.

"Food adulteration as a great evil follows manufacture and commerce and flourishes in the train of broadening civilization. Adulteration is largely a matter of lessening cost in order that an extensive line of low-priced foods may be placed upon the market.

"We all recognize as a marked and creditable feature of the past quarter of a century the efforts of modern civilization to regulate by law sanitary and other conditions affecting the physical welfare of the race in order to add to the comfort of living and promote longevity.

"The entire question of the food regulation might be summed up in a few sentences, as the kernel of the entire matter is that the consumer shall be made acquainted with the true character of the food and drink offered for sale.

"The fundamental principle is that every consumer is entitled to choose as to the kind and quality offered for sale. For example, whether they shall receive honey when desiring to purchase that article, or a mixture of honey and glucose; absolutely pure eggs or some 'packed article'; absolutely pure fruit jelly or some questionable imitation; and this comparison is equally applicable and true as compared with all food and food products.

"The great trouble today growing out of the enforcement of these food laws is on account of the tendency of the population to concentrate in our cities and villages, industrial having proportionately outgrown rural life; it consequently becomes a necessity that food products be bought in greater quantities, and under such conditions adulterations become more difficult to detect.

"Today in our large cities the foods are manufactured, prepared, cooked and served in the 'flat districts,' and thousands of our people are served in this way, consequently it becomes more necessary that greater care should be used, not only as to the preparation and sanitation of these articles of food, but that their ingredients should be wholesome and embrace a stable ration.

"Chemistry, with its amazing progress and its manifold resources of substituting the artificial for the natural, has offered to the student of its mystery greater facilities for effecting numerous falsifications, but at the same time let it be understood that chemistry furnishes ample means of detecting them."

A PIONEER PURE FOOD CRUSADER.

Napoleon Bonaparte was a wonderful man, his biographers being the judges. They tell us a great many singular stories about his career. Just now the statement is made that he was the pioneer in the pure food movement. He inaugurated a crusade on behalf of fit food, and in so doing brought about a revolution in natural canning processes. In somewhat improved form the methods for which credit must be given him are now in use in the United States to-day. Records of the French Academy of Science, but recently unearthed in Paris, have laid bare the whole pure food history.

There was strong objection to the manner in which the "Little Corsican's" soldiers were compelled to carry food and eat it while on the march. So strenuously did the French nation voice its disgust at the methods then in vogue that Napoleon directed that the Academy offer a prize of 12,000 francs to the man who could devise a plan whereby foods could be kept indefinitely in their natural condition without added preservatives, such as were then believed to be in use, and which included salt, sugar, vinegar and smoke.

Nicholas Appert won the 12,000 francs. He discovered what has since been perfected into the present day method of canning, for he simply enclosed the food in air-tight containers and subjected the whole to such a degree of heat that the contents received thorough sterilization. The vessels which Appert used were clumsy. He was handicapped in his efforts by poor utensils. However, he originated the fundamental principle which is used in American canneries today.

When the editor of the Bulletin was a small boy the housewives of the small town in which he lived had adopted Nicholas Appert's idea and canned their own fruit and vegetables. For the first few years they prepared the articles for canning and sent them by the boy of the household to the shop of the village tinner, who soldered the cans shut. Later on each housewife superintended and operated her own domestic cannery, having learned how to perform the entire operation. Under the original principle the village tinner was a very busy man during the canning period and added quite a sum to his frugal income. But that didn't last. What with our mammoth canneries in all sections of the country there has been a tremendous advance since the days of Nicholas Appert, or even since the time, a little over fifty years ago, when our mothers prepared their own foodstuffs by primitive methods against the winter's need.

CONCERNING BLEACHED FLOUR.

Speaking about bleached flour, no longer lawful in the United States, Dr. Harvey W. Wiley is quoted as saying:

"It is just to please the eye. No good can come from making flour white. You cannot find any great amount of bleached flour going into interstate commerce at all now. I can tell the change by the bread. Every time I cut a loaf of bread I rejoice, because, instead of having the whiteness of a corpse, it has that beautiful delicate amber tint that all bread ought to have. The electricity was the agent which produced the bleaching material.

"Several cases are pending against millers, and I do not betray any confidence of the millers when I say that the fight on this case is made chiefly by the men who are selling the machinery. The millers themselves would not fight it for a moment, but the men who have been making the bleaching machinery have been hurt. The bakers of the United States were always opposed to bleaching flour. They knew the flour was injured by the process."

The first of fifteen cases instituted by the government to prevent the bleaching of flour was scheduled to come up in New Orleans January 26. At the moment this is written no information has been received concerning the result of the trial. If Dr. Wiley is right there should be little difficulty in bringing about general obedience to the rules and regulations of the Federal Department of Agriculture concerning the manufacture of flour. If the millers are not specially interested, and if the bakers believe that bleaching injured the flour, both the millers and the bakers should be on the side of the government, leaving the manufacturers of the bleaching machinery alone in their glory.

It is to be regreted that anybody should be injured in any way by the enforcement of law, but if the law is right and meant to protect the health and prolong the lives of the inhabitants of the country, nothing remains to be said. The security of the many is of infinitely more importance than the convenience or profit of the individual. That principle has been carried into practice since the beginning of civilization, and it is likely to survive until our planet encounters its fate, whatever that may be. The federal government will win no censure from the rank and file for any proper efforts it may make to protect them from the greed of manufacturers of milling machinery—if any such thing exist—or from the injurious effects of flour that has been artificially whitened.

CONCERNING THE PRICE OF BUTTER.

The Detroit Free Press has been talking to a prominent dealer in butter and eggs in its city. He predicts that the price of butter is likely to increase as long as 5 per cent. of the population tries to supply 95 per cent. He asserts that three times as much oleomargerine is sold today as was sold a year ago, and declares this is the natural and inevitable result of the continued advance in the price of butter. He goes on to say that the butter and egg market is a supply and demand market. He is convinced that it is all nonsense to talk of a butter and egg trust. He adds that a prohibitive price decreases the demand and makes business slow.

This dealer puts part of the responsibilty for the growing scarcity of butter upon conditions on the farm. He says, "The situation will never be remedied, so far as the farmer is concerned, until a perfect milking machine is invented. Milking is hard work. Men don't like it, and it is almost impossible for women to do it. The fault is, however, in part with the farmer. He thinks nobody ought to be idle on a farm. A hired hand cannot plough by lantern light, but he can milk by it in the morning and at night, and the employer demands the service. Men won't work under such conditions.

"There are other reasons also for the scarcity of butter. Cows will not give milk unless they have proper fodder. You can get milk if you feed a cow 65 or 70 cent corn, but you cannot feed corn at that price and sell 35-cent butter. Then, again, it takes from 20 to 25 pounds of milk to make a pound of butter; that is to say, from 10 to 12½ quarts. It costs 3 cents a pound, laid down in Detroit, to produce butter. Ten quarts of milk bring 70 cents, and there is no labor or expense other than shipping.

"There is also the cheese industry. England is a great cheese-consuming land, but she is not a cheese-producing country. She looks to the United States and Canada for her supply. The ice cream business is another factor. A few years ago no one ate ice cream in winter. Tonight it is being served at hundreds of banquets in the country. It is sold at thousands of soda fountains."

Thus it will be perceived that there is always something to be said from the standpoint of the farmer. From the standpoint of the business man, who seeks to obtain the highest possible profit for his product, it will be seen that there are strong temptations to use the milk for other purposes than the manufacture of butter, unless the price of the latter soars toward the dollar mark.

PURE FOOD PROSECUTIONS.

The following is taken from a recent number of the Chester Morning Republican:

"These pure food prosecutions are so funny; but then there are lots of funny things in law.

"This satirical exclamation is uttered by the Pottstown Ledger as a prelude to noticing the case of a dealer who had purchased guaranteed goods in good faith, being haled before a court of justice on the charge of selling 'doctored stuff,' while the manufacturer of the same is not molested."

The Republican then goes on to say that "The State expects the retailer to be an expert chemist in addition to his other abilities for conducting his business, and to be able to determine if what he sells conforms to the standard of the pure food authorities. But if the manufacturer's name appeared on the goods, where it should be and probably is, the State could very easily reach the party who is really responsible for placing alleged unwholesome articles on the food market."

There is more of this remarkable article, but it is all of the same general tenor, and no good purpose would be served by continuing the quotation. It is difficult to believe there is an editor in Pennsylvania who is so grossly misinformed as the person who penned the foregoing extracts. Under the existing pure food law of Pennsylvania it would be utterly impossible for "a dealer who had purchased guaranteed goods in perfect good faith" to be "haled before a court of justice" and punished for selling adulterated food. A local dealer might be charged with selling adulterated or misbranded food products. But the moment he produced his guaranty from the manufacturer, wholesaler or jobber, from whom the purchase was made, he would go free. Only in the event of his persisting in selling the adulterated product could be arrested again and punished. The State does not expect the retailer "to be an expert chemist;" it expects only that he shall protect himself by the guarantee provided for in the act of assembly. As for the manufacturer, the wholesaler or the jobber, if he reside beyond the limits of this Commonwealth, nothing can be done save to call the attention of the Secretary of Agriculture at Washington to his misconduct. Pennsylvania justice does not reach the outside dealer or manufacturer. It does apply to the manufacturer whose plant is located in the State. In any event the retailer who takes the precaution to secure a guarantee is perfectly safe. No such case as that imagined by the Pottstown Ledger and commented upon by the Chester Republican could occur in this State.

THREE SENSIBLE SUGGESTIONS.

The Consumers' League of New York has issued a circular letter making these requests:

"First. To persuade your tradesman to keep perishable food—that which is not pared, peeled or cooked before eating—in a closed case or some similar devise, away from dust and flies and other contamination.

"Second. To use your influence to secure more rigid enforcement of the rules of the sanitary code relating to the care and handling of food.

"Third. To support the movement for uniform pure food legislation so that one State cannot be made the dumping ground for food prohibited in another State."

These three recommendations are so sound and sensible that they ought to commend themselves to the endorsement of every intelligent housekeeper as well as every citizen who wants clean food.

There was a time when scientific knowledge had not attained to its present state, and when carelessness in connection with the care of food products was excusable. But that time has passed.

We now know that dust and flies carry the germs of contagion and death with them. The dust of the street may be saturated with deadly germs. The fly may have come directly from a sick bed.

There is no reason why intelligent human beings should permit themselves to be exposed to unnecessary perils. If the grocer or the butcher does not know the truth he should be taught. If he is unwilling to learn, he should be abandoned for a more reasonable and careful vender.

The rules of the sanitary code were prepared in the interest of human life. Their enforcement is essential to the maintenance of healthy conditions in any community. Where the health authorities are negligent the death rate is apt to be high.

Uniformity of food legislation is essential. Pennsylvania has one of the best pure food laws in existence. Some other States are not up to her standard. But Pennsylvania believes in uniformity, and hopes to see the day when her standard will be recognized as safe and sensible by all her sister Commonwealths.

Nevertheless, Pennsylvania is not likely to be unreasonable. She is so decidedly in favor of uniformity that she will not stand back when other States show a disposition to approach uniformity.

THE POETRY OF SAUSAGE.

During the severe cold of late December when the average man, no matter what his occupation, feels that he needs food that "will stick to the ribs," even the one who lives by his pen feels very kindly toward the occupants of the pen, and is capable of rising into the realms of poetic thought over so prosaic a theme as ordinary pork sausage. There is an editor in Baltimore who sings a very sentimental song over this subject every now and then. Another poet laureate of the pig is employed on the Columbus (O.) State Journal. Here is his latest contribution to the subject:

"There is no use for a person who sticks up his nose at sausage, for sausage is good when it is made right. It is the response of the food world to the polar breeze that blows through the morning. It is as sweet as a plate of strawberries on a mild June day. But it must be made right. Good sausage is an art product. It is made up of judgment, taste and skill. It is a combination of ingredients that correlate with one another as the fragrance and the blush of the rose. The butcher doesn't understand this. Generally he throws in some scraps and odds and ends, and especially the odds, dabs on some salt, pepper and sage, grinds it out and the confiding customer buys it because it is sausage. He doesn't like it very well, but he eats it, and everything goes.

"The other day we saw a customer in a meat shop direct the making of his own sausage. He selected the meat, simon-pure cuts off the best parts, had it ground, and took it home to season it there. That man knows how to take care of himself. He knows art from a bull's foot. He appreciates the true sentiment of sausage."

A man, who was a small boy in the early fifties of the last century, looks over the shoulder of the Bulletin, reads the foregoing extract and smacks his lips. That reminds him of the sausage his grandparents used to make on the little farm he visited from time to time. He declares he can taste the delicate aroma of that sausage yet after the lapse of almost sixty years. He does not think the modern article compares favorable with the home-made product of those times, but his palate may deceive him and his appetite may not be so keen. There's a considerable amount of genuinely fragrant sausage made in the twentieth century. And much of it is produced in Pennsylvania.

INVESTIGATIONS AND PROSECUTIONS.

In a recent number the Wilkes-Barre Record indulges in the following remarks:

"The State Dairy and Food Department's report for the past year shows commendable activity in conducting investigations and prosecutions. Mr. Foust appears to lay considerable stress upon the good showing made in the collection of fines as compared with the disbursements. But this is one of the offices in which a favorable financial showing is not necessary and perhaps not advisable. It would please the public much better if there were criminal instead of civil proceedings against the persistent offenders. A jail sentence will hurt more than a moderate fine. The department should be given a sufficient number of inspectors to cover the entire State at sufficiently frequent intervals. Only in that way can the public have reasonable assurance that it will be protected from the vicious poisoners and adulterators."

The State Dairy and Food Bureau has no inspectors. It has agents and special agents, whose duty it is to enforce the pure food laws to the extent of their ability. They gather samples of various food products, which are sent to the chemists employed by the bureau, by whom a careful analysis is made and the result duly reported to the office at Harrisburg. If the samples are found to be adulterated or misbranded under the law an investigation is made. Should the grocer who sold the sample have a guaranty from the manufacturer or dealer from whom he made the original purchase, and should said manufacturer or dealer reside beyond the limits of this State, the Secretary of Agriculture at Washington is notified of the circumstances. Should the retailer be without a guaranty, information is made against him under the Murphy act, which is now the law of the State. Should he have a guaranty from a manufacturer or dealer doing business in Pennsylvania, prosecution is instituted against the latter.

Under the act of 1907 it was forbidden to institute criminal proceedings against offenders. All fines were collected by civil process. But since the Governor signed the Murphy act in 1909, the criminal law is again invoked for the punishment of offenders, as indicated in the foregoing paragraphs. This bureau is by no means anxious to pile up fines; but so long as men violate law it is its duty to bring them to trial. It hopes the day is not far distant when all dealers in food stuffs will obey law. Until that time arrives however, it will do its best to annoy offenders.

PROPOSED OLEOMARGARINE LEGISLATION.

There is some prospect of a battle royal in Congress over the oleomargarine question. The oleo interests are manifesting an aggressive spirit, the present high price of butter being used by them for all it is worth. They have also a bill before Congress abolishing the tax on oleomargarine and containing other provisions which they would like to see enacted into law. Senator Penrose has introduced the bill approved the the Grangers and the dairymen of Pennsylvania. It provides for some additional restrictions which are believed to be necessary. If anything is done the chances are that the Penrose bill will win out. A very earnest effort will be made to convince Congress that the welfare of the agricutural classes demands the enactment of this bill into law.

PROSECUTIONS UNDESIRABLE.

The purpose of the pure food laws enacted in this State is to preserve the health of the people. It is well known that the situation had become almost intolerable when the original acts were framed and passed in obedience to public sentiment. Since then progressive legislation has been enacted. The purpose of the Legislature and of the officers created thereby has been to protect the purchaser while educating the manufacturer and retailer to a proper appreciation of their duties to the State. Much progress has been made. It is greatly to be hoped that the day will soon come when all who have to do with the preparation or distribution of food products will obey the law implicitly and from sincere hearts. Then prosecutions will be wholly unnecessary, because everybody will be living up to the Golden Rule. A long way off, you say? Well, it may be; but this is a century of miracles.

CO-OPERATION WILL HELP.

It is a fact not always discerned by the average man that the interests of all the members of the community are inseparable. If one is injured the result may be harmful to many. That is one reason the State and the various cities insist upon the utmost caution in the care of cows and the marketing of milk. Upon more than one occasion a virulent epidemic of typhoid fever has visited a community because some milkman carried to his patron infected milk. Precaution is a virtue which should never be neglected in the barn, the dairy, the milk depot or the home. Carelessness or indifference often means the difference between life and death.

INERTIA.

That little word was the text for the discussion carried on on the interesting editorial page of a recent number of the American Grocer. The editor shows how powerful an obstacle inertia has been to progress in the past, and intimates that it is again standing in the way of some desirable reforms. It is somewhat of a consolation, however, to remember that sooner or later inertia gives way to activity. The man who sits still and declares that the thing that is, is the thing that shall be, may keep his place in the road of progress for a long time, but the day always arrives when he gets a grand bounce. The American Grocer reminds its readers that "it took twenty years hard and persistent effort to overcome the inertia of the people as to the debased character of the food supply, and to so mould public opinion as to bring about the enactment of a national pure food law." Nor has the inertia all been dissipated. But things are beginning to move.

SELFISHNESS.

That is a little word also, almost as small as "inertia." But it has done quite as much to delay the march of progress and to perpetuate the reign of evil. When a man is making his living by a certain process it is very difficult to convince him that he is doing anything contrary to law. Probably the Missouri dealer who permitted his clerks to deceive purchasers of oleomargarine into the belief that they were buying butter had convinced himself that he was doing nothing contrary to law or to the principles of right. Probably he is sure that the law under which he was convicted is either an unrighteous statute or was misinterpreted by the court. Selfishness blinds the eyes many a time and paralyzes the conscience also. We fear it has a leading part in all violations of the pure food laws.

PERFECT CANDOR.

We do not mean that offensive and blunt manner of speech which some miscall candor. We mean the kindly and courteous manner which adheres always strictly to the truth and never consciously deceives a solitary human being. And do you know that the dealer who strives to indulge in candid treatment of his patrons, never deceiving them either by word or by silence, is usually the most successful man in his community? If you study about it a moment you will discover that there is a reason for it. When you know you can trust a grocer absolutely, you sometimes send your little child to him for the things you need; you know he will treat the child as he would you.

AN OLD-FASHIONED VIRTUE STILL POWERFUL.

It is to the interests of all manufacturers of food products to discourage doubtful processes. It is to their interest to be perfectly truthful in all the statements on their labels or in their advertisements. It is to their advantage to obey the law implicitly and to invoke its operation against all who disregard it for greed of gain or for any other reason. The fact is the crooked manufacturer or dealer never makes out well in the end. There is a mysterious taint upon money procured by fraud which makes it the curse of the dishonest, either in the original generation or in its successor. Did you ever observe what curious turns the fortunes of some families take? Did you ever notice how the man that flourished like a green bay tree yesterday often goes to ruin today? It is best all around to adhere to the principles of old-fashioned honesty. It is just as true today as it ever was that integrity in the manufacture of goods brings an exceeding great reward.

ACTIVITY ALL AROUND.

A hurried glance at the ever-interesting columns of the trade journals and at the official bulletins which reach this office from time to time shows that there has been no flagging of energy, no let up in the determination of the diary and food officials of the various States to enforce the laws under which they are discharging the duties of their office. The air is full of stories concerning their activity and the situation becomes more and more perilous in a majority of the Commonwealths to the individual who wrongfully believes he can make money by transgressing law. The federal authorities have likewise manifested increasing activity, and the outlook, dark and threatening to some, is full of excellent promise for the future. The best of all is, that the rank and file of the people are back of this continued agitation for the best and the purest things to eat.

AN ENCOURAGING FACT.

To-day a large number of the food manufacturers of the country are honestly striving to comply with the requirements of the federal pure food bureau as well as with the demands of the several States. It is not an easy task owing to the lack of uniformity. And these manufacturers are clearly right when they ask that a serious effort be made to bring about uniformity. They deserve this much, for they are earnestly trying to comply with a very varied and contradictory assortment of laws.

THE REIGN OF HIGH PRICES.

The consumer must eat less, the farmer must produce more. That is the remedy for existing high prices proposed by an experienced hotel man. Another adds that the methods whereby the surplus products of the country are gathered up while they are fresh and plenty be abolished, and some expedient adopted for preventing an artificial scarcity of butter, eggs and other articles essential to the existence of the average American family. It seems quite incredible that the present sparse population of this Republic should be consuming everything grown here now. The thinking man admits the extravagance of the majority of the people, but he is not willing to admit that the normal consumption has already reached the limit of the supply. Some folks say the increase in prices is a good thing, and will work for the ultimate benefit of the people. The idea is that the cost of living will compel many households to practice economy. The Bulletin gives these various ideas for what they are worth. The one absolute truth that presses heavily upon the man with a modest income is that he can no longer make his outgo and his income meet; that the former is always likely to be in excess of the latter.

THE SHORT WEIGHT FRAUD.

Several of the trade journals reaching this office have been waging a more or less aggressive warfare against the petty swindle of short weight in the grocery business. It is very difficult to believe that any number of retail dealers are willing to resort to such petty cheating for the purpose of adding to their profits. That some do, however, is shown by the facts put upon record by the men who are trying to break up the practice and by the action of several legislative and municipal authorities in moving toward the task of providing a remedy. It is a habit that is a disgrace to those who indulge in it and an injury to the consumer. It should be outlawed by the States, and the offender should be made to feel weight of public scorn.

CIVIC FEDERATION FOR UNIFORM LAWS.

The Civic Federation in its work of seeking the betterment of society feels a friendly interest in the plan to procure uniformity of food laws. It is interested in other uniformities, and begins to realize that if the country once gets food laws in all the States that are alike in all essential particulars it will be a long step in the direction it desires to take in completion of its beneficent work. The next step in food legislation is undoubtedly uniformity. Each State may have to yield a little, but the ultimate gain to all will far transcend the loss.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

He is not a wise man who gets in the way of the law.

Few have succeeded in trampling law under foot for long.

Sooner or later justice captures all who jibe at her.

Some of the names given oleomargarine are suggestive of butter only.

The people are back of every effort to drive the manufactures of impure food out of business.

The State greatly needs a law regulating the manufacture and sale of alcoholic beverages.

While there is considerable defiance of law among manufacturers of soft drinks, the situation is improving.

In course of time the Nation is very likely to lay hands upon the untruthful advertiser. The people have a right to know the truth.

What's to be thought of the ethical standard of a dealer who instructs his clerks to permit his customers to deceive themselves into believing they're buying butter when they're really getting oleomargarine with a buttery name?

No man should want to make money so badly as to lead him to run the risk of injuring the health of his patrons by the sale of inferior or adulterated goods.

There is a general disposition to demand a solution of the mystery of high prices. And Secretary Wilson says he is going to do everything in his power to gratify that laudable desire.

The federal authorities are becoming increasingly vigilant in their pursuit of violaters of law. And all the people are wishing more power to the good right arm of Secretary Wilson.

According to the court's decision the difference between alum and aluminic sulphate is just the difference twist tweedledee and tweedledum.

It is constantly becoming more and more manifest that the housewife is the most effective agent in the enforcement of pure food laws. She cannot be surpassed by any other instrumentality.

No matter what one thinks of a law, duty demands obedience.

In Pennsylvania it is an offense against law to sell baking powder containing alum.

The preservation of the public health is a matter of supreme importance.

One who is blinded by self-interest finds it very hard to discern the other man's image of truth.

The suggestion that lawmakers sometimes go to excessive lengths is scarcely true of pure food legislation.

The best policy for the state and its people is to insist upon the absence of adulteration.

The housekeepers of the state are charged with a very great responsibility in the selection of food for their families.

Ordinarily the man who comes in conflict with the laws of the land is worsted in the encounter.

The people look to the State to throw safeguards around the manufacture and sale of food.

It may be somewhat difficult for some folks to comprehend that the old order is disappearing; some day they'll learn.

Secretary Wilson, of the National Department of Agriculture, has made up his mind to run down the cause of high prices.

The precautions taken by State and Nation in connection with the sale of milk are producing excellent results.

The courts of the Commonwealth are doing their part in bringing violaters of the food laws to justice.

The legislature seldom commits a blunder when it legislates against the presence of foreign substances in food products.

State uniformity in food legislation, based upon the federal food and drugs act, is surely coming. It will promote uniformity in other important matters.

At present rates food products should be of the very best.

There is no danger in present food laws to any grocer who governs his business conduct by their provisions.

It would seem a comparatively easy task for a retailer to insist upon a legal guaranty from the dealer who sells him goods.

The neat and attractive retail store is likely to attract the attention of the housekeepers of any community.

In any business it is usually the man who takes pains to present a good appearance who secures the lion's share of patronage.

The law regulating the sale of food products in this Commonwealth is by no means obscure; it is easily obtained; it provides a complete protection for any grocer who chooses to avail himself thereof.

Some very interesting questions are now being decided by the courts of the Commonwealth in connection with the food question.

He who neglects to examine the provisions of the law, or who neglects to heed repeated solicitations and warnings to avail himself of the provisions intended to insure his exemption from prosecution, has nobody but himself to blame when trouble descends upon him like an avalanche.

The advance that has been made not only in public sentiment but also in legislation concerning the food supply of the people during the last quarter of a century is simply marvelous. And we are only at the beginning of the movement for the preservation of the public health.

Let us hope the day will speedily come when there will be no differences of opinion among scientific men concerning the effects of certain preservatives and bleaching processes upon the human stomach. We have been taught to regard nothing as scientific that is not certain. But there is a great deal of wabbling about much of the so-called scientific investigation of the twentieth century.

At all events, whatever may be the defects of the present, it is a decided improvement over the recent past, so far as food products are concerned.

The meat inspection board is doing admirable service on behalf of the consumer.

In the inauguration of boycotts of food products of any sort one should exercise caution. Frequently the wholly innocent party is hurt.

Obedience to law as interpreted by the courts is the duty of every good citizen.

One is justified in criticizing an act of the General Assembly, but it is the duty of every citizen to comply with its provisions until it has been repealed or modified. To defy law is to join the anarchists and set a very bad example.

It is the duty of the State to co-operate with the federal government in the enactment of legislation to protect the consumer of alcoholic beverages from the adulterated and misbranded articles that are said to be on the market.

The pure food laws, State and National, are not perfect; in many respects they might be improved. But they are growing better with the passing years and that is something to be thankful for.

The vigilance of the citizen and his sturdy refusal to eat food products that cannot present a clean bill of health will also do much to promote the enforcement of law and to encourage those manufacturers who are trying to provide absolutely pure food.

While the situation is greatly improved, it is still too early for the consumer to take it for granted that an article is all it purports to be in the cunningly worded advertisement. No purchaser should hesitate to demand intimate knowledge of the declarations of the label.

There should be no dissent to the propostion that every purchaser is entitled to the precise article for which he asks and for which he pays. And yet there are manufacturers and dealers—not as many as there used to be—who insist upon practicing deception and undertake to justify themselves therein.

There is considerable impatience abroad concerning the prevailing high prices. Perhaps the government will be able to unearth the cause of the trouble and to suggest a remedy. Let us hope so.

Prices paid for many articles imported into the United States have advanced perceptibly during the last few weeks.

The grocers and butchers of Toledo, Ohio, have inaugurated the practice of selling by weight many articles hitherto sold by measure. The principle articles affected by the change are oysters, nuts, beans, apples, berries, potatoes and other fruits and vegetables whose bulk and quality have lent themselves to dishonest practices in the past.

The General Assembly of Ohio has undertaken an investigation of food prices. This action was taken in response to a special message from Governor Harmon.

Investigations of the prices of food and searchings for the cause of the high prices are becoming very numerous. The results will be awaited with considerable interest.

One inveterate offender against the oleomargarine law was brought before the Allegheny county court some time ago and sentenced to serve six months in jail and pay a fine of $500. Others are preparing for the same fate.

The planters of "Caroline rice" along the Atlantic coast are taking steps to protect their product from imitation and have resolved to prosecute any person marketing an imitation which violates the pure food laws.

There should be neither impatience nor irritation among the upright dealers whose charges are to be investigated by Congress and some of the State legislatures. On the contrary the most searching inquiry should be welcomed.

Some of the tea importers at the port of New York are complaining because the standards of inspection are far more rigid there than those of other ports. They contend that the rules in force at one port should be identical with those at other ports.

The officers of the National Canners' Association have inaugurated a campaign to secure the enactment of a law providing for government inspection of all canneries. They believe that the government guarantee on the cans would produce increased confidence and enlarged sales.

Pure food and not too much of it, coupled with a proper amount of regular work and a sufficient exercise will go a long way toward prolonging life and baffling disease.

The agents of the Dairy and Food Bureau are the servants of the people. The are entitled to popular confidence and co-operation.

Since the child must have milk or die it is incumbent upon the dairymen and the milkman to take the utmost pains to market and vend a pure article.

In spite of the high price of eggs very few unfit ones are offered for sale in the markets of Pennsylvania, and the horrible business of dealing in "rots" and "spots" seems to have been entirely broken up.

It will pay the housekeeper to make a careful inspection of the condition of the grocery she patronizes and of the sanitary condition of the surroundings. And then she should also insist upon a careful examination of the label.

The children of the family should be taught quite early in life to hold their appetites in leash, to eat moderately of all things and very sparingly of articles not likely to prove beneficial to the stomach and to discriminate between the best and the poorest food.

The farmers of the county have had a wonderfully prosperous year. Indeed, they have had several prosperous years, the panic which struck so many of the manufacturing centres having passed them unscathed. It may be they are not as prosperous as some writers for the daily press make out, but they have certainly had a good time. All of which they deserve.

Early as it is, it is not too soon to begin to prepare for a still more vigorous campaign against the festive and inquisitive fly than was carried on last year. It is a nuisance the complete abatement of which will make an end of many mysterious cases of sickness.

Every citizen of the Commonwealth should advocate obedience to law and set the force of his active example on that side of every controversy between the State and those who are interested in violating the statutes. Selfishness should not be permitted to introduce anarchy into any community. It would be establishing a dangerous precedent.

The retail grocers of Fond du Lac, Wisconsin, complain that the city has too many house to house peddlers and want the councils to intervene.

The trouble with the grocers of Meridian, Mississippi, is that the traveling commissary cars used by the railroads of that vicinity are robbing them of trade. They are trying to evolve a scheme to end such competition.

Out in South Dakota a farmer was arrested by the pure food authorities for selling bad eggs to a dealer. It cost him $10 to settle the matter. This is the first time a farmer has been gathered in on such a charge in that State.

Also out in Grand Rapids, Michigan, a grocer has been arrested on the charge of substituting inferior flour for a well known brand and selling it to customers in sacks bearing the label of the better article.

The Pure Food Commissioner of Tennessee has issued an order requiring all hotels and restaurants using oleomargarine to exhibit in conspicuous places signs declaring that fact.

Hereafter all storage eggs sold in the State of Tennessee must be plainly labeled to that effect so that purchasers may be able to distinguish between them and the fresh article.

In some states the federal authorities are manifesting special activity in the arrest and prosecution of corporations and individuals who are alleged to have violated the National Food and Drugs Act by selling vinegar which fails to come up to the requirements of the act.

Much vinegar, of a bogus character is sold throughout the Union. It is well that the agents of the Department of Agriculture should come to the assistance of the several states and by their activity demonstrate to the manufacturers of impure vinegar that they are running great risks.

During one of the winter's cold snaps more than 100,000 pounds of frozen food were condemned by the chief food inspector in Chicago and destroyed. They consisted of bananas, pine apples, egg plant and potatoes.

The Bulletin is under repeated obligations to the trade journals of the country. They are able exponents of the best things in methods of manufacturing and selling food.

Governor Carroll, of Iowa, has named W. B. Barney as the successor of H. R. Wright, present Dairy and Food Commissioner of Iowa. The new commissioner will take charge of the office May 1. He is said to be admirably qualified for the position.

The Minnesota Dairymen's Association held a very interesting and profitable convention at Hutchison, January 18-20.

The Dairy Record advises dairymen not to experiment when they make butter for contests. It urges them to use their everyday methods and declares the chances are that they will get better results than if they employ some new, untried plan. It concludes thus: "And raise your everyday method a notch or two towards the standard every now and then."

A sarcastic butter maker suggests that the chances are that an imitation ice cream will eventually be put on the market by the oleomargarine people.

The thirty-sixth annual convention of the Illinois State Dairymen's Association was held at Vandalia last month. It was an uncommonly interesting gathering.

The South Carolina Live Stock Association held its last regular meeting at Columbia, South Carolina, on February 1.

The School of Agriculture and Experiment Station of State College and the Pennsylvania Railroad Company have joined hands for the purpose of offering the farmers of Pennsylvania practical information along lines that are expected to result in increased production if the farmers will take the matter up. Two booklets already issued deal with lime as fertilizer and with the cultivation of alfalfa.

The American Society of Agricultural Engineers held its third annual convention at the Iowa State College in the closing days of December. The very existence of such a society is significant of the progress which has been made during recent years in the science of agriculture.

The dairyman who keeps abreast of the knowledge of his times is likely to achieve greater success than the one who clings to primitive methods.

The State Dairy, Food and Sanitary Inspector of Idaho has issued a bulletin to butter and cheese makers in that State, as well as to the venders of foreign cheese offered for sale in the State, that these products must be stamped so as to indicate their true character. If this precaution is omitted they will be confiscated.

Many of the small shop keepers of Brooklyn, New York, have recently been fined for using short weights in the sale of their wares.

The Illinois State Food Standard Commission, as recently appointed by Governor Deneen, consists of Charles E. M. Newton, representing the food manufacturing industries of the State, Dr. Walter S. Haines, "an expert food chemist of known reputation," A. H. Jones, State Food Commissioner.

According to the American Miller, the Supreme Court of Michigan has decided that the use of corn flour in packing house sausage is not such an adulteration within the meaning of the State law, as to make the compound unsalable in that State, as contended by the State Dairy and Food Commissioner.

The State Grocers' Association of the State of Washington wants the State to appoint a State Inspector of food stores, having passed a resolution to that effect at its recent meeting. The Grocers' Magazine notes that Indiana and two or three other states already have laws providing for inspecting food stores of all kinds.

The California food department insists that all cold storage eggs must be marked as such on the packages in which they are sold or delivered. This rule has been in abeyance for some time, but it is now to be enforced without respect to persons, the officials declare.

Investigations are the order of the day. Held upon the principle that eternal vigilance is the price of pure food as well as of liberty, they are often annoying and sometimes expensive; still they do not harm the upright dealer but actually advertise his business and make him friends among the observant public.

Denver's seventh annual food show and industrial exposition will begin March 30, and will continue for two weeks. It will be under the direction of the Denver Retail Grocers' Association.

The Merchants' Associations of the State are doing a good work. Some have enlarged their sphere somewhat and in addition to their specific work as part of the State Association have taken the form of Boards of Trade or Chambers of Commerce and are booming their towns in a very successful way. They are to be complimented upon their work.

In various towns of this and other states some of the more enterprising housewives have organized themselves into Pure Food Associations, the purpose being to boost the cause of good food in any practicable way. They familiarize themselves with the state and national laws, get the facts in connection with adulteration and misbranding and compare notes with each other in a very helpful way.

The grocer who has the active aid of a company of public-spirited women who encourage him to scrupulously live up to the requirements of the law and who buy the best brands of food products from him, is a fortunate man. Very often the grocer feels that his efforts to furnish the best sort of goods do not meet with the right kind of a response from the community. And that has a tendency to discourage him.

The activity of the federal government—frequently manifested in directions and at places where it was least expected—has certainly had a very beneficial effect upon many manufacturers. The whole country is beginning to realize that the adoption of the food and drugs act inaugurated a new era in our country.

Pennsylvanians are well pleased with the fact that their State stands well nigh at the head of the procession when it comes to a systematic effort to provide for the protection of the food and drink of the people. In only one respect is the State a bit backward—it yet lacks a proper law prohibiting the manufacture or sale of adulterated or misbranded alcoholic liquors. But that will come in 1911, let us hope.

While efforts may indeed be made by ill-advised persons to have Congress take a backward step in the direction of pure food legislation, there is little reason to suppose that any such scheme would succeed even temporarily. There is too much sentiment against food adulteration abroad at the present moment.

LEONARD PEARSON.

Dr. Leonard Pearson, who died last summer in Newfoundland, whither he had gone in the effort to recuperate health and strength, was one of the ablest veterinarians of this country, and had been for years State Veterinarian of Pennsylvania and a member of the faculty of the university of that State. At the memorial service for Dr. Pearson held at the University, February 2nd, the following graceful and very just tribute was offered by Mr. W. F. McSparran:

Men come and go and other men
  Come on to take their places
In the work of life, but not again
  The kindly hand, the lost beloved faces.

We grope around, as in the dark,
  To find the hand that wrought;
We strain the ear to hear the voice
  That spoke his pondered thought.

Of all who work with brain and brawn
  A fellow-worker he.
His plowshare cut his furrow straight,
  His arm swung strong and free.

He never shifted duty, work
  Fell finished from his hand
With heart throbs as his trademark—
  And so that work shall stand

On manhood's highest altitudes
  He grew his greenest bays—
"None knew him but to love him,
  Nor named him but to praise

—Hoards' Dairyman, Feb. 11, 1910.

WORK OF THE BUREAU FOR 1909.

Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust issued the following statement of the work of his Bureau for the year 1909, which shows a high degree of activity and successful enforcement of the laws committed to his care, and furthermore, that the receipts of the office were such that it was more than self-sustaining.

The Commissioner reports receipts and disbursements as follows:

RECEIPTS.

Oleomargarine licenses,	$45,235 68
Oleomargarine fines,	23,399 35
Pure food fines, Act of 1909,	6,014 38
Non-alcoholic drink fines,	3,127 75
Vinegar fines,	2,197 92
Milk fines, Act of 1909,	1,905 74
Lard fines,	1,100 00
Pure food fines, Act of 1907,	1,094 00
Ice cream fines,	826 00
Renovated butter licenses,	708 33
Milk fines, Act of 1901,	497 00
Renovated butter fines,	391 00
Meat fines,	97 00
	$86,594 15

DISBURSEMENTS.

Attorneys, detectives and assistants,	$25,025 96
Chemists and laboratory,	20,005 26
Special agents' salaries,	17,724 00
Traveling and agents' expenses,	15,056 71
Clerical and stenographers,	5,888 75
	$83,700 68

Those figures that relate to receipts from fines for violation of the oleomargarine act are of special interest. The receipts from this source were nearly double those received therefrom in any single year preceding.

The fines collected as penalties for violations of the general food law represent little more than half a year's enforcement of the Act of May 13, 1909.

The receipts of the office shown were nearly three thousand dollars in excess of the expenditures.

The Commissioner reports also cases terminated during the year for violations of the several food laws:

Under the oleomargarine act,	273
Under the renovated butter act,	6
Under the meat act,	2
Under the food act,	129
Under the milk act, 1901,	14
Under the milk act, 1909,	112
Under the lard act,	29
Under the vinegar act,	45
Under the non-alcoholic drink act,	148
Under the ice cream act,	39
Total,	797

Of the 797 cases terminated, 273, or thirty-five per cent. were for violations of the oleomargarine act.

The Commissioner notes as of special interest the number of cases arising in the execution of the new food acts of 1909, as showing the need of this legislation, and the sympathy of the public therewith.

Thus there were 148 cases successfully prosecuted for violations of the non-alcoholic drink act, chiefly because of the use of saccharin, benzoic acid, coal tar dyes and artificial flavoring essences in the manufacture of these widely used, but heretofore fearfully compounded beverages.

Another law for whose legislative enactment the findings of the Bureau and the subsequent action of the courts of the State show abundant warrant, was the Milk Act of 1909, prohibiting the watering and skimming of milk and fixing a minimum standard of butterfat in cream; under this Act 112 cases were successfully prosecuted.

Like comments may properly be made upon the Lard Act and the Ice Cream Act.

Under the Lard Act, 29 cases were pushed to a successful conclusion. This Act is intended to bar against the introduction into the pure fat of swine, of the grease obtained from the waste portions of the beef carcass and used as a food product under the name "beef stearin;" and also to prevent the substitution in whole or in part of other cheap fats for lard.

The prosecutions under the Vinegar Act were, the Commissioner says, almost exclusively due to the sale as cider vinegar of materials composed only in part of the product from the cider, sometimes indeed products that had never made the acquaintance of that delicious temperate zone fruit, the apple.

The general food law of May 13, 1909, commonly known as the Murphy Food Law, under which come condiments and confectionery, as well as the staple foods, led to the institution of many cases, conspicuous among which were those due to catsup overladen with benzoate of soda, mushrooms bleached with that deadly chemical known as sulphurous acid, French peas beautified, but not improved by the vivid green of copper salts, and the withered pickle plumped and refreshed by the liberal use of that powerful astringent, alum.

The Commissioner feels highly gratified at the success shown by these statements, and said that much of the year's accomplishment was due to the valuable assistance of the press and the actively sustained interest of the public.

OLEOMARGARINE CASES TERMINATED.

Oleomargarine cases terminated and amount of fines and costs collected under the Act of May 29th, 1901, to and including December 31st, 1909, and paid into the State Treasury for the use of the Commonwealth.

Commissioner.	Year.	Cases terminated.	Fines and costs paid into State Treasury.

*Wells & Cope. †B. H. Warren. ‡James Foust.

NOTE—That during the three years of Commissioner Foust's administration 497 Oleomargarine cases have been terminated as compared with 435 cases terminated during the six years of Commissioners Wells, Cope and Warren; and that $45,366.28 in fines and costs has been paid into the State Treasury as compared with $28,961.09 paid in during the six years of his predecessors.

The above figures taken from the records of this office clearly prove that the Oleomargarine Law, during my administration, has been more vigorously enforced than at any time in the history of the Department.

This statement is issued for the reason that there has been some criticism of the Dairy and Food Bureau as to the enforcement of the Oleomargarine Law, and in order that the facts may be fully and correctly laid before the people for their information.

JAMES FOUST,
Dairy and Food Commisioner.

THE RELATION OF WOMAN TO PURE FOOD.

This Bulletin has always sympathized with the notion that the woman should be the head of the home. It has steadfastly believed that she should have a practical knowledge of all the routine of housewifely duties. A superintendent who knew nothing of the business he undertook to direct would soon betray his ignorance and in a little time would become the victim of the more unscrupulous among his subordinates. He would not know when they were deceiving him.

It is on precisely the same principle, the Bulletin believes, the education of the future woman should proceed from childhood. She may be the only daughter of a multi-millionaire. There may be no reason to suppose she will ever be obliged to work with her hands. She may be able all her life to command the services of an experienced and a loyal housekeeper and the best kind of servants. Still, it will be far better for her, far better for her family, far better for her guests, far better for her servants if she has a first-class practical acquaintance with housewifely duties. What a tremendous advantage it will give her!

But while this is true the Bulletin does not lack sympathy with the far-reaching aspirations of the modern woman. The head of the household should be a past master in domestic science, it is true, but that does not mean that her aspirations in other directions should be repressed or crushed. The woman of today has stepped out upon a somewhat broader platform than that occupied by her grandmother, or even her mother, and she is demanding the opportunity to take part in the battle for progress now raging all around us. But that does not mean that she has ceased to be a home-lover. Indeed, quite the contrary is true of the average college or club woman.

Those who have given the matter the attention it deserves have discovered that the women who have been of most use to the pure food advocates and officials in the several states of the union have been almost without exception enthusiastic club women. They have learned about many things in their clubs and one of their chief desires is to provide the best possible food products for the members of their families. The very fact that they are joined together in their clubs makes them strong for the accomplishment of any good purpose and their united work on behalf of pure food has done much good already.

FOOD CONDITIONS IN NEW YORK CITY.

The National Consumer's League is an organization which is commendably active in the work of educating public sentiment in the direction of greater vigilance and higher standards concerning the food supply. Its local branches are likewise doing a good work. We have before us the annual report of the Food Committee of the Consumers' League of the City of New York, for instance, and it makes a very interesting and instructive document. It discloses some facts concerning groceries in that great city which are not particularly palatable, but consumers should know them.

The particular work of this committee during the past year has been in directions that should be pursued by representatives of consumers in every city in the country. Grocery stores, vendors, markets, fruit stands and push carts have been investigated and earnest efforts have been made to secure better conditions and greater protection to food sold on the streets and exposed on sidewalks. The active agents of the League have found much to condemn in certain sections of the city. Many conditions now existing are unwholesome and repulsive, if not dangerous to health, they tell us.

It is not surprising to hear from so large and cosmopolitan a city as New York that the vendor of fruit is often filthy in person as well as in practices—in some cases using his stand as a sleeping place at night. He handles shelled nuts, candies, cakes and fruits with filthy hands which may or may not see water once a day. And this produces little real concern upon the part of the consumer and less appreciation of the danger to health in the contamination of food, not only from dust, flies, insects, etc., but also from the diseased condition of many of the persons who handle it. The committee declares that the great city of New York has neither adequate regulations nor adequate enforcement of such regulations as exist. The food inspectors, we are told, do not always live up to their obligations. It is claimed, too, that a midsummer inspection of one of the vendor's markets did not show any improvement over the previous year.

The situation in New York is so bad that the existence of the Consumers' League is justified and that organization should receive effective support. It is a great pleasure to be able to report that conditions in Pennsylvania are nowhere so bad as they seem to be in the national metropolis. There are wrongs here needing righting, but the situation is constantly improving. This is due to the efficiency of the law and the state of public sentiment.

THE GROCER AND THE SUMMER FLY.

The wise grocer remembers that his patrons are becoming increasingly particular concerning the appearance and surroundings of the store at which they purchase the food for their families. They have been doing considerable reading during recent years, although many of them needed no reading to induce them to follow in the footsteps of their good mothers who were noted for the scrupulosity with which they examined every article meant to aid in staying the family appetite. What with acquired habits of finical scrutiny and with the inherited ideas that come down from generation to generation, the American housewife is one whose grocer should seek to win by his intense devotion to the virtue of cleanliness.

By the time this number of the Bulletin reaches its readers the pest of the summer fly will have begun. A few years ago scientific authority instructed those who were willing to listen concerning the potential dangers which clung to the feet and wings of the roving fly. We were told by those who have looked into the matter carefully that many cases of malignant disease have been carried from family to family by the fly. It cannot be restrained. It may be inhabiting a mass of perilous filth now and fifteen minutes later may be tasting the food on your dinner table. Whenever such is the case it is likely to leave behind it the germs of some deadly disease. Many a mysterious case of sickness and death would have lost its mystery if some keen observer had studied the movements of the flies that visited the family dwelling.

In time past the average grocer has been too careless about protecting his goods from the incursions of the deadly fly. He did not know the fly was a source of infection and death. He had been told nothing concerning the matter and he imitated the example of his neighbors or walked in the footsteps of his fathers. But the modern dealer has no such excuse. Popular scientific miscellany has a place in the newspapers and the magazines. The health department of the State and the branches in the cities and towns have taken up the tale and have issued a large quantity of timely information. The fact is broadly known that the fly is a perpetual peril. There is no longer the slightest excuse for the grocer who does not protect berries and other articles from the visits of the fly. The Bulletin hopes for general improvement in this respect in every section of the commonwealth.

THE REGULATION OF COLD STORAGE PLANTS.

The grand jury of Hudson county, N. J., which recently created quite a sensation by indicting six of the big packing companies and twenty-one present and former directors on the charge of conspiring to increase the price of foodstuffs, at a still later period drew up a presentment recommending changes in the management of plants where cold storage business is conducted. The grand jurors say:

"We find it possible to control the market by storing foodstuffs, such as meat, eggs and poultry, in cold storage, and thus enhance the price, and that there is danger to public health resulting from cold storage products if the present methods are continued.

"The records of the cold storage plants show that during the last year many thousand pounds of poultry, millions of pounds of meat and millions upon millions of eggs were stored in this country. These food products were kept there many months, eggs for nearly a year and meats and poultry in many cases for a longer period. When eggs were plentiful they were 'cornered' and kept from the market at times when it was natural they should be cheap, and being placed in cold storage caused a scarcity then to maintain or advance the high prices of said product at times when there should have been plenty at cheap prices.

"So poultry was placed in cold storage and held at times when it was plentiful, and thus the market kept depleted when in the nature of things there should have been an abundance of fresh poultry.

"And the same thing applies to meats, so that we believe that methods of this character go a great way in causing the tremendous high price in food products as it has existed during the last year. Cold storage plants are the means whereby large corporate interests control the market and dictate prices.

"If the public will not pay the prices asked, the food is kept in cold storage until the market is depleted and the public then must pay the price demanded or go without eggs, meats and poultry.

"There may be considerable divergence of opinion as to the effects of cold storage upon meats and poultry from the health standpoint, but we are convinced that a practice of freezing these foodstuffs, particularly poultry, withdrawing them from cold storage for sale with its incidental thawing process, and then, upon failure of a market, returning them to cold storage for later use, is fraught with the gravest public danger.

"A remedy which lies entirely out of the scope of our authority is hereby presented to draw the attention of the court and the public to what appears palpably like a fraud upon and against the people and yet not, so far as we can learn, punishable under our statutes.

"As the inexperienced purchaser often is unable to detect the difference between fresh poultry and the cold storage article by mere inspection, he is not made acquainted with what is undeniably a fact—that in buying the cold storage product he is paying for from 9 to 14 per cent. of water. This condition results from the thawing process, accomplished by immersion in water.

"While the thus infused article is often more wholesome and desirable—or would be in an unpolluted condition—than the carcass which has absorbed it, water at from 25 to 30 cents a pound palmed off in this manner upon an unsuspecting public, it seems to us, is given a price beyond the dreams of even the most optimistic conservist.

"It is, therefore, respectfully suggested that a law compelling the vendor of all food products coming from cold storage plants to plainly and clearly label them as such would at least apprise the public of the quality of the goods under contemplated purchase or offered for sale. In addition to this, the date of placing or replacing such products into cold storage should be indicated in the most practicable manner.

"Arguments and assertions are made that laws regulating cold storage plants, which are said to be a 'great boon to mankind,' are unenforcible by reason of their impracticability.

"We believe these arguments to be without weight, as such contentions concede an impotence in the people to regulate properly a subject which vitally affects the health of the people and involves the protection of the public from oppression by unscrupulous market manipulators."

The Bulletin has reproduced this formal presentment of a body of citizens acting in the capacity of grand jurors because its readers are intensely interested in the problems discussed by this official body. It knows that every head of a family is concerned over the growing cost of the necessities of life and it comprehends why the State and private citizens should be anxious to arrive at a solution of so serious a problem. The man of affluence does not feel the pinch produced by the sharp advance in the price of many important articles of food, but the family with a moderate income as well as the laborer with a large family and a small daily wage feels the pressure and is looking about for an explanation and a remedy.

The Bulletin realizes that its special province it not so much to take sides in a controversy like this, in which the people are sharply divided in opinion, as to present the views of the two camps for information. It is quite certain that the presentment above copied represents the views of an increasing number of the American people. They fail to perceive any good reason for the steady advance in prices outside of the cold storage system. They observe that the increase in the cost of living has been identical with the extension of the cold storage system and they regard the latter as the instrumental cause of their troubles. They are convinced that the cold storage policy is not only costly but they are likewise satisfied that it may easily spread sickness and death.

The cold storage people deny that they have originated the present high prices. They claim that the extravagance of the average consumer, the decrease in the number of cattle grown and various other reasons account for the era of high prices, which, they declare, has set in for good. They tell us that prices will never be as low as they were in other years and claim that their plan of preserving food in cold storage is well calculated to bring about uniformity all the year round, affording opportunities for the purchase of food at all seasons of the year, protecting the farmer in seasons when he might otherwise be obliged to sell his products at a loss and protecting the consumer at other times when the natural scarcity of certain food products would make prices almost prohibitive.

A PLEA FOR THE BAD MAN.

Here is a statement that is floating around among newspapers and trade journals:

"During the fiscal year ending June 30, 1909, there were produced in the United States 86,517,514 pounds of white oleomargarine. Of this there were withdrawn at the rate of one-fourth of one per cent. per pound, 86,221,310 pounds. During the same year there were produced in the United States, 5,710,301 pounds of colored oleomargarine of which only 3,275,968 pounds were withdrawn, tax paid. The balance of colored oleomargarine is reported as withdrawn for export free from tax or lost or destroyed. It appears that but a very small proportion of the 86,221,310 pounds of uncolored oleomargarine upon which a tax of only one-fourth of one per cent. per pound was paid has ever reached the consumer as uncolored oleomargarine. But on the other hand it is found that a very large proportion of this amount of uncolored oleomargarine has been secretly colored and sold by the 'moonshiners' as and for pure creamery butter, thereby not only defrauding the public, but entering largely into competition with the genuine butter makers. The government is unable to cope with these frauds under the present laws, but if the incentive to moonshining is removed by the establishment of a uniform rate of tax and all oleomargarine is sold in original sealed packages, not only will the consumer be protected, but the genuine butter makers will be protected from illicit competition."

Have you taken in the entire meaning of the foregoing? Do you know what its author proposes? It is the same as if the friends of the moonshiners of the South who have been long engaged in the manufacture of illicit whiskey were to say to the government: "If you really want to get rid of the manufacture of moonshine whiskey repeal the internal revenue tax. Let anybody make whiskey who is inclined that way and you make an end of violations of law. There will be no law to violate. What an easy process of causing the criminal population to disappear suddenly and entirely! Some people are inclined to look at the matter in another light. They feel that if the State is not in shape to protect the genuine butter makers now it never will be. They cannot see wherein a general permission to manufacture colored oleomargarine is going to help them. They believe in law enforcement. They are not ready to permit their government to admit that the makers and venders of counterfeit butter are more powerful than it is. It is their conviction that the oleomargarine law can be as well enforced as any other act on the federal statute books and they are going to ask Congress to try the experiment. Instead of removing the tax they are in favor of trying to enforce the law. To that end Senator Penrose will presently undertake to carry through the Senate and send to the House an act calculated to remedy existing defects and to provide strength where feebleness now has control. The friends of common honesty are curious to try the experiment, anyhow.

Recent statements in some of the western newspapers—notably the Chicago Tribune—convey the impression that some of the largest manufacturers of oleomargarine in the big western cities are working cheek by jowl with the adventurers who persist in making family butter out of oleomargarine. One individual who had been convicted of flagrantly violating the federal law and who had just received a salty sentence made some interesting revelations and tentatively promised to give further details. The inference was quite plain that he had purchased quantities of uncolored oleomargarine from manufacturers who knew that he was going to color it and who promised to help him get rid of his product. It seems perfectly reasonable to suppose that the enactment of a law removing the specific tax of ten cents a pound on colored oleomargarine would be followed by the disappearance of genuine butter from the market and the practical ruin of the butter makers.

Should the intimations thus made through the columns of reputable newspapers be sustained it would certainly be the duty of the federal government to fully expose the methods of the "man higher up." The person who persists in palming off colored oleomargarine as genuine butter is bad enough; when he also plans to cheat the government out of its just dues he is worse; but in no event is he as bad as the reputable gentleman who encourages him to do wrong and renders him active aid in his efforts to cheat the government, defy the law and hurt the health of the people. Let us hope something will happen presently.

ENFORCING THE PURE FOOD LAW.

The Washington correspondent of the Boston Transcript tells us that endless amusement and instruction continue to be supplied by the court decisions upholding the federal food and drugs act. The United States government has gone into housekeeping with a vengeance. The Department of Agriculture has just issued a book telling housewives what meats to cook and how to cook them, while hardly a day passes that Secretary Wilson does not send out one or more notices informing the country that certain foods have been adulterated by manufacturers, and thus inferentially warning people to let them alone. The courts, apparently, are construing the law in spirit as well as in letter, and permitting not the slightest deviation from the standards of weight and purity which the act establishes.

It is a liberal education in itself to learn the ingenious methods whereby some food products are adulterated or misbranded. The courts draw pretty fine distinctions in some cases, and the rigor of the decisions must have a material effect in some industrial establishments.

"Mocha and Java Coffee."

For example, an Ohio concern is given a little free advertising by the government for selling a "Mocha & Java Blend Coffee," which is found to contain only a mixture of Mocha and Java and Maracaibo coffees. According to the court, therefore, real Mocha and Java coffees are still imported into this country, but if the case had rested wholly in the facts contained in the second information, relating to the same concern, the public might draw other conclusions. This case was of a coffee which, according to the label, "contains genuine Mocha and genuine Java, blended with other high grade coffees, carefully selected for their cup merits." The court held the coffee to be misbranded because in fact it consisted of two parts Santos coffee, one and three-fourths parts of Maracaibo and one and one-fourth parts of washed Santos coffee, and did not contain any Java or any Mocha coffee. In each of these cases the court imposed the mild fine of $10 and costs.

Cures for all Diseases.

The courts have a busy and interesting time with the alleged cure-alls with which the country is flooded. A sample of a certain "Microbe Killer," found and offered for sale in the District of Columbia, was labeled with the information: "It is a positive and certain cure for all diseases, and is guaranteed to be perfectly harmless. It will effect a cure in every instance if given a fair trial....., "Blank's Microbe Killer is the only known principle that will destroy the microbes in the blood without injury to the system..... By removing the one cause, it cures disease." These statements are denounced by the court as "exaggerated, false and misleading in this, that said drug preparation was not a cure for all diseases and in the form in which it was sold could not have killed the microbes of the several diseases referred to; and further misbranded in that said drug was represented as a cure for anaemia, asthma, blood-poisoning, cancer, consumption, diabetes, diphtheria, la grippe, malaria, yellow fever, whooping cough, paralysis, pneumonia, and other diseases," and the court rules the drug misbranded, with the blunt statement that it is "not a cure" for the diseases enumerated.

The Maker of Bleached Blondes.

Hydrogen peroxide, that popular chemical which produces a bleached blonde, comes in for its share of judicial denunciation. In this case the drug had been shipped from New York to a Boston concern, and the court adjudged it adulterated, in that it was sold under a name recognized in the United States Pharmacopaeia and differed from the standard of quality and purity therein laid down in this, that it contained acetanilid. It was misbranded also in that the container failed to bear a statement of the quantity or the proportion of acetanilid contained therein. In this case the manufacturers had protected the dealer with a written guarantee covering all the preparations sold by them, hence suit was brought against the manufacturer and the retailer did not suffer.

In an olive-oil case judgment was rendered against the seller for misbranding, in that while the supplemental label on the bottle admitted that the product contained 50 per cent. pure cotton-seed oil, the principal label gave the buyer the impression that the article was a pure imported olive oil refined by a celebrated Italian concern. The same Louisiana concern was also punished for selling a "genuine strawberry extract" which was wholly artificial.

Some Common Adulterations.

The following are some of the more common adulterations: "Spirits Turpentine" was found not to be the "oil of turpentine as recognized in the United States Pharmacopaeia, but a mixture of oil of turpentine and mineral oil." "Spirits of camphor" was found to be 14 per cent. below the legal standard of strength. A western condensed milk averaged 20 per cent. shortage in weight. In the case of 144 cans of liquid eggs, frozen, shipped from Boston to New York city, the evidence disclosed not only that the eggs were wholly or in part decomposed, but also that formaldehyde, a substance poisonous in itself, had been added to them.

A certain manufacturer's "Headache Tablets" were condemned under the law because they were not "a positive cure for every form of headache and neuralgia," and were not harmless. A shipment of laudanum manufactured by one of the largest drug concerns in the country contained only 37.9 grains of opium to the ounce when it should have contained 45.5 grains. Dozens of cases occur in which cream and butter fat have been abstracted and the resultant sold as "pure milk." An ice cream concern in the city of Washington was fined $25 for selling a so-called ice cream containing less than 14 per cent. of milk fat and mixed with starch and gelatine. The offender conducted a restaurant. Later on he was released by a police court judge whose decision is referred to in another article in this number of the Bulletin.

With lemon juice one of the cheapest and most plentiful of liquids, it might seem that human greed might stop before adulterating lemon derivatives, but a sample of "lemon extract" found in Kansas City contained no lemon oil whatever and only a trace of citral.

Vinegar Cases Frequent.

Several prosecutions for the adulteration of vinegar have been made. An "Oakland Apple Brand Cider Vinegar" from Michigan, which the manufacturer labeled as "superior and guaranteed to conform in every particular with the pure food laws of Michigan or any state where pure food laws are enforced," and claiming to be "fermented pure cider vinegar," was discovered by the Bureau of Chemistry to consist in part of dilute acetic acid, which is a distilled vinegar, and a foreign substance high in reducing sugars. One manufacturer who did not claim to put out a pure cider vinegar and admitted (on the bottom of the barrel) that his product was "colored with caramel," nevertheless paid a fine to the court because he had mixed water with his product and so colored it with caramel as to conceal its inferiority.

The Department is now making a special drive against the misuse of geographical names. Hereafter Rocky Ford cantaloupes must hail from Rocky Ford, Colorado, or near it, and Indian River oranges must come up from near the Indian River in Florida or the men who sell them may be given a taste of the law. The Department holds that such adulterations and misrepresentations as are here described are nothing more than wanton attempts to swindle the public, and the law will be executed without mercy.

These extracts from the log book of the pure food division of the Federal Department of Agriculture furnish interesting reading matter because they give the reading public some conception of the petty tricks resorted to by some unscrupulous business men to increase their trade and add to their profits. The great majority of manufacturers and dealers are perfectly honest. They are quite as upright as their patrons and are guided by correct business principles. It is the exceptional dealer who is crooked and whose base conduct injures the public, destroys confidence in the integrity of those who supply the consumer with food and is constantly getting them into trouble with the law. If it isn't the state that is after them it is the national government and their petty attempts to deceive that they may get rich a little more rapidly are keeping up a considerable uproar the greater part of the year. We congratulate the federal officials upon the energy they are displaying, as indicated by the examples mentioned in the foregoing pages and we hope they will keep up the good work without haste, and also without rest, until these mean little efforts to cheat have come to an end. Reputable manufacturers are equally interested in the extirpation of such pests with the consuming public. For they do great harm to the general business of the country by destroying public confidence in the integrity of manufacturers and venders of food.

PRESERVATIVES IN FOODS.

The following suggestive epitome of the sentiments of an eminent English physician is taken from a special bulletin of the North Dakota Agricultural Experiment Station. Whatever may be the opinion of other scientists, or of the rank and file of the people, concerning this matter, the article is well worth careful reading:

In discussing the subject of the use of chemical preservatives in foods, Dr. James Oliver, physician to the Hospital for Women in London, says:

"The incorporation of chemical preservatives with foodstuffs is an ever-increasing evil, a nefarious and fraudulent practice, requiring on the part of hygienists the greatest vigilance and calling for the strictest action on the part of our legislature. Public interest in this very important matter must not only be aroused, but energetically maintained; for quite needlessly, as unwittingly, we are all exposed and subjected to the pernicious influences of these toxic agents, and, insidiously and stealthily, derangement of every function of our bodies may thus be induced. Sufficient protection is not, as has been thoughtlessly alleged, afforded by our legislators, fixing a maximum limit for one or more chemical preservatives in a given food; the danger lies pre-eminently in the fact that under such circumstances small quantities of these highly active substances may be ingested with a variety of foods which are in constant daily use, and it must not be forgotten that in our bodies the preservatives themselves, or their effects, are cumulative. Moreover, on account of idiosyncracy, some individuals are much more susceptible than others to the prejudicial influence of these agents."

He further says that many who approve and advocate the use of modern preservatives, contend and desire us to to believe that these are in no respect so very different from the ancient varieties. They say that at most they are only ordinary medicinal agents, some of which are to be found naturally in products used as articles of food. Assuming that they are—no one desires to ingest daily quantities of these materials which are neither foods nor condiments; are added only for mercenary purposes.

Dr. Oliver further says we are desired to believe that foods treated with such preservatives are presented to the consumer in a more wholesome state; in the best possible condition; whereas in many cases, if the truth were known, by means of these modern preservatives, manufacturers are enabled to arrest putrefaction and decay, also to restore the color to stale meats and to put on the market foods which are really unfit for use, and had they not been so treated, would have been condemned.

He further says, taking everything into consideration, we are warranted in arriving at the conclusion that chemical preservatives were introduced, not because of any benefits they are likely to confer upon the consumer, but purely and simply because of their value to the large manufacturer and producer; in other words, they are a source of wealth, and are not to be given up without a struggle, for through their agency food products can be accumulated and stored more economically than otherwise.

Take, for example, tomatoes. These come in large quantities during a short period of time. Now, if they are not to be "chemically embalmed" or preserved, they must be sterilized, and sterilization is more of a bother and is expensive to the manufacturer, so he puts in a chemical preservative like benzoic acid, etc. This is easy and inexpensive and the product is "embalmed" until they are ready to work it up into articles of food.

He further calls attention to the fact that sulphurous acid and sulphites not only prevent decay, but they conceal it and restore the color of stale meats to the bright red characteristic of fresh meat. The same thing is true with regard to dried fruits, and, more than that, it enables jobbers in this case to sell a lot of water which they could not otherwise sell.

Dr. Oliver further says: "It is an indisputable fact that all the modern chemical preservatives are more or less toxic substances, and, in an unchanged or changed form, the duty of freeing the body of them falls entirely upon the kidneys, which, under ordinary circumstances, are already over-burdened with work; and it is most reprehensible to add heedlessly and unnecessarily to their labors."

But these are not all of the evil influences that come from the use of preservatives, for he further says: "Every one of the chemical preservatives, when ingested with food, passes readily into the blood and tends to modify and alter the action of every ferment in our bodies, so that metabolism is thereby more or less seriously deranged."

They provoke indigestion, check the absorbitive power in the cells of the intestinal tract; they exert a prejudicial influence upon the white and red cells of the blood and the injury to the white blood corpuscles means less resistance to disease. They modify, through their action upon tissue, the process of oxidation and produce compounds which are difficult of elimination. They lower the resisting power of our bodies and render us more susceptible to disease and illness, and indirectly, by modifying and altering the elimination of waste and products, they produce lassitude, and, in some, cases, they may be accountable for the frequent attacks of headache.

It would thus seem that only disinterested investigators in America are opposed to the use of chemical preservatives in food products, but those who are recognized as physicians of ability in Great Britain are of the same opinion.

Thus far the Bulletin of the Agricultural Experiment Station of North Dakota. The views of Dr. Oliver, as quoted and discussed by the North Dakota publication, are interesting. Fortunately for the people of Pennsylvania, the preservative question is no longer a live issue here. Under our law benzoate of soda may be used in the manufacture of catsup, jellies, preserves and shredded codfish. It is prohibited everywhere else. All other preservatives, except that used in the preparation of California fruit are expressly prohibited. Under the circumstances it should not be difficult for the housekeeper who wishes to avoid the use of preservatives to steer clear of them in Pennsylvania. The situation of our people is very much better than that of some of their neighbors in near-by states. Considering the present decided direction of public sentiment the winds are not likely to blow in any other direction for many a week to come.

THE TAX ON COLORED OLEOMARGARINE.

The Retail Grocers' Association of Cleveland, contains a majority of members who are favorable to the repeal of the act imposing a tax of 10 cents per pound upon colored oleomargarine. At a recent meeting the association adopted a resolution asking Senator Burton and Representative Paul Howland, among others, to support the measure. Later on replies were received from the gentlemen.

Senator Burton does not definitely commit himself to any particular line of action. He frankly tells the association that he does not believe any measure to repeal the 10 cents tax proposition will be enacted at the present session of Congress. He says that a measure of this sort should originate in the House of Representatives. He adds that if such a bill comes before the Senate he will have the interest of the grocers in mind.

As for Representative Howland, he replies: "You may imagine how my rural constituents in Lake and Medina feel on this proposition." It was scarcely necessary for him to make any more definite reply. The people of the rural districts have a great partiality for genuine butter and are not willing to advocate any policy or favor any legislation that would give oleomargarine an undue advantage over butter. Many of them make butter and know quite well what an insidious foe to the dairy interests colored oleomargarine already is.

So far as the senators and representatives from Pennsylvania are concerned, the Bulletin believes they are unanimously opposed to taking away any existing guard against the substitution of oleomargarine for butter. The plea made in some quarters that the act is violated every day and is creating a great deal of trouble has no significance whatever. Who ever heard it seriously proposed to a legislative body that it ought to repeal certain restrictive legislation because it is often violated? That is, it is the duty of the State to recognize violation of law by repealing the troublesome act. What an argument!

Senator Penrose, our senior member of the upper branch of Congress, has introduced a bill to throw greater restrictions around the sale of oleomargarine. In view of the vast dairy interests in this and other states and the importance and justice of protecting the men and women who have their all invested in this business, Senator Penrose feels that this is a time for strengthening the law rather than repealing it.

DECISIONS CONCERNING ICE CREAM.

The federal government recently prosecuted a manufacturer of ice cream in the police court of the District of Columbia, on the ground that he had manufactured a certain frozen product in imitation of ice cream, but containing less than 14 per cent. butter fat, the minimum quantity allowed in ice cream according to decisions handed down by the Department of Agriculture. The defendant was also charged with manufacturing a frozen product from milk and sugar, instead of cream and sugar, and selling the same as ice cream.

The police judge before whom the case was tried proved himself a very sturdy champion of the manufacturer. He ruled that there was nothing in the federal food and drugs act specifying the amount of butter fat that an article of genuine ice cream must contain. He declared that this was simply an arbitrary decision of the agricultural department, without due authority of law. He ruled that ice cream may be made out of a mixture of cream and milk, or entirely from milk, and still be salable ice cream, coming within the law. He likewise held that the use of gelatine or vegetable gum in the manufacturer of ice cream is not an adulteration within the meaning of the act.

The attorney for the government made as brave a fight as was possible under the adverse circumstances by which he was surrounded, the police justice practically acting as attorney for the defendant, so that at the conclusion of the testimony nobody in the court room was surprised when the justice directed the jury to return a verdict of acquittal, the government having failed to make out its case, according to the ruling of the astute justice.

Much along the same line was a recent decision by the Georgia court of appeals. The councils of the city of Atlanta, Ga., in the year 1907, enacted an ordinance governing the sale of milk and regulating the sanitary conditions of dairies and milk depots in that city. Among other provisions of this ordinance was one requiring that "ice cream sold or kept for sale must contain at least 10 per cent. butter fats for fruit ice cream, and 12 per cent. for plain ice cream." It was shown that the ice cream sold by the defendant contained a little less than 10 per cent. butter fat. This was contrary to the ordinance although he offered to show by testimony that equally wholesome and palatable ice cream had been made and sold, although it contained much less than the amount of butter fat provided for by the ordinance. The evidence was not admitted, the defendant was convicted and fined $50. The case was carried up to the court of appeals. The decision of this court freed the defendant.

While the court of appeals affirmed the principle that a municipality, under its general welfare clause, may, by ordinance, regulate, in the interests of public health, the sale of milk and milk products, and while it conceded that a municipality may prohibit the sale of ice cream which is adulterated, or contains any deleterious substance or is otherwise impure or unwholesome, the court also declares that such municipality cannot arbitrarily prescribe that ice cream containing less than a certain percentage of butter fats shall not be sold at all when the percentage is placed so high as to be unreasonable, in that it excludes the sale of ice cream just as wholesome and in some cases more wholesome than that of the prescribed percentage would be. The court further declares that even if the city of Atlanta has the power to "fix upon a standard of richness as to ice cream sold in the city, it has no power to prescribe that wholesome ice cream below that standard shall not be sold at all under any name or designation."

The court discusses the question quite learnedly and concludes its opinion in the following language: "The court is willing to give every encouragement within legitimate bounds to the public authorities in their laudible effort to protect the public, not only against unsanitary food products, but also against adulterations, frauds, and impositions in the sale of food products, and where the question is doubtful, the doubt will be solved in favor of regulation. But to say that in a city the size of Atlanta, no one shall, under any circumstances, or for any purpose, sell any ice cream containing less than 10 per cent. butter fats is so unreasonable that the ordinance cannot be upheld, where the city's power to pass it rests solely upon the authority of the general welfare clause of its charter."

And so the decision was reversed and the fine remitted. In its opinion the court intimated quite strongly that the city ordinance would have been legal if it had ordained that a certain sort of ice cream—the best in the market—must contain not less than 10 per cent. butter fats, leaving a less percentage for lower and cheaper grades of ice cream, the same to be distinguished by the difference in their labels.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

The housekeeper is the best friend the pure food laws have.

When the women of the land move on behalf of pure food something happens.

It is as much the duty of a good mother to provide pure food for the members of her family as it is to look after their moral training.

The American woman is very much alive to-day. She wants to know the why and wherefore of things. Wherein she is very right.

Since it is the business of the woman to preside over the household it is but natural that she should be profoundly concerned about the quality of the articles consumed by her family.

Happy those pure food laws which have the sanction and support of the women of the land. For since the ladies are omnipotent in the household their dictum goes a long way toward settling the argument between those who believe in omitting preservatives or other adulterants and those who favor them.

The increasing attention paid to household matters and especially to the food problem by the American club woman it the strongest sort of an argument in favor of her general sanity and sound sense and a complete answer to those who claim that the modern woman is disposed to patronize the ornamental rather than the useful.

Some folks are convinced that the club is no better for the wife than for her husband. And yet the facts in the case seem to demonstrate that the most active laborers in the field of food reform are found among the leading clubwomen of the land. Isn't that an evidence that the club contains elements of practical usefulness?

The manufacturers of food products will soon discontinue any doubtful practices—if such still exist—once they comprehend that their goods must pass inspection by the wideawake and vigilant women of the country. If any are still trying to produce the cheapest possible product it might be well to consider the possibilities involved in the hostility of the housewives of the country.

The modern housekeeper is confronted by problems that never bothered her grandmother. It is to be noted that, generally speaking, she is doing her best to measure up to her responsibilities.

The fact is that our grandmothers were more happily situated in so far as housewifely duties are concerned than their granddaughters, in spite of a general impression to the contrary.

In the primitive times the cities were all small; the bulk of the population lived in the country, in small towns or villages. Most persons prepared their own food or bought it from neighbors whom they knew and trusted. Now we must depend upon the big manufacturer of whom we know little.

The men and boys of this great republic ought to be very thankful because of the abounding vitality and energy of their mothers, wives and sisters. These restless but intelligent women are presently going to take into their own hands the enforcement of the pure food laws.

Much has already been done by the gentler sex to convince food manufacturers and retailers that they are on the ground and that they mean to supervise the business of making and selling food. The very fact that keen-eyed and resolute housekeepers are looking into this matter is sure to have a very good effect.

With the largest possible amount of gratitude to the noble grandmothers and mothers whose vigilance and knowledge did so much to secure good healthful food for the small children who are now in their turn old men and women, is mixed a corresponding satisfaction that the women of the present time are becoming increasingly vigilant in this direction.

"Feed the brute," is the advice given by one wise and observant woman to other members of her sex gathered to discuss that somewhat mysterious proposition, "Man." Most men, if willing to be entirely frank and truthful would admit this was capital advice. It is always followed by splendid results.

The ladies of the United States are very happily situated and their dignified position enables them to exert a constant and unvarying influence upon the daily lives of men to which their European sisters are strangers. It is a pleasure to know they are now helping the pure food crusade along.

Senator Owen wants to create a department of health in the city of Washington, with its head a member of the cabinet. Some persons think it would be a useless expense. They believe the Agricultural Department can take care of the food problem, while other matters relating to public health might be referred to a bureau.

One unfortunate citizen of one of the central states of the west has been sent to prison for three years and ordered to pay a fine of $5,000 for violating the federal law regulating the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine.

The act introduced in the national Senate by Senator Penrose, the purpose of which is to increase the efficiency of existing laws regulating the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine, represents the views of the pure butter people of this and other states and will be vigorously advocated by the Senator.

At this season of the year it is well to remember that the pestilent fly will soon be with us again in force. Much literature has been disseminated concerning him during the last few years and the housekeepers of the State should be prepared to give him a more than ordinarily warm welcome. He carries disease and death on his wings and feet.

The housekeeper should take pains to convince her grocer that she is fond of neatness and order; also that the best and purest goods are not too good for the husband and children who look to her for proper household conditions. She will have little difficulty in producing a fit impression.

The salty sentences being meted out by federal and State courts to chronic violators of the oleomargarine laws should teach others who are so disposed that it is a dangerous thing to undertake to cheat the people and the government at the same time. Still, it takes a thunderbolt to convince some people that they are treading on dangerous ground.

As the country understands better and better the nature of food and the advantage of having it pure, the life of each generation will lengthen. Thousands of precious lives will be saved and disease will be baffled.

One foraging fly may cause the serious illness of a whole family. For that reason the war upon the fly cannot be too vigorously carried on.

A clean store and fresh goods will attract the attention of those whose patronage is best worth having.

The movement for uniformity of food legislation between the nation and the several states grows with each passing year.

There has been a marked improvement in the quality of the ice cream sold in this State during the past year.

The old-fashioned condiments are all right, but food which has been embalmed is repulsive, even if it is not unhealthy.

Time spent in ridding the house and the surroundings of the noisome fly is time well spent. More people are becoming interested in this growing reform every year.

After a little while it will be generally known that the manufacturer or dealer who does not take pains to turn out a genuine article of food to his customers is going to bring up in the rear of the procession.

The New York Independent is responsible for the following suggestive observation: "It is not a bad idea of Dr. Wiley that the public should put a social ban on all persons found guilty of adulterating food. He does not like it that when a boy picks up a transfer and rides on it and robs a corporation of two cents, he is liable to a $500 fine and a year in the penitentiary, for this offense against a corporation, while if a corporation adulterates the food of the people, stealing their money and health, the fine is only $200. That does not seem fair."

The women of the country are at least as intellectual and energetic as their husbands and brothers. Some of them are doing splendid work in various important fields of human endeavor. In many respects they are far ahead of their brothers in intellectual activity. That is one of the reasons the pure food cause looks forward with great hopefulness to their efforts on its behalf.

Few of the working people of the country listen with any patience to the philosophers who tell them that it will do them good to be compelled to do without meat occasionally. They prefer to arrange their own bill of fare and they resent the effort to instruct them in matters of this sort.

The Bulletin has received from the author a copy of an interesting pamphlet on "The Distillation of Whiskey." It is reprinted from the Journal of Industrial and Engineering Chemistry, and was read originally at the summer meeting of the American Chemical Society, Detroit, by the author, A. B. Adams, chemist of the Bureau of Internal Revenue. It seems to be a pretty full discussion of the subject of which it treats.

In the opinion of the International Stewards' Bulletin, when the canners adopt a set of standards it will have a tendency to do two things: first, teach the public that the cheap canned goods they have been buying were in reality not bargains; second, the bargain hunter will pay more for his canned goods, but he will get his money's worth and thereby save money. And that is not all; if you specify first, second, or third grade, and ask several dealers for a price on them, each dealer will have an equal chance, because they will be bidding on the same quality.

The irritation over the prevailing high prices among the people at large is natural. From the very beginning there has been a general desire to get the cheapest product, and this led to the adulteration which has been forbidden by law. Now prices are still going up and the consumer is not in the most amiable mood.

The federal government has been getting after manufacturers of adulterated or misbranded vinegar recently, a very proper undertaking. There has been a great deal of fraud in this particular, during recent years. Some of the "pure cider" vinegar put on the market has not contained a single drop of cider. Men who undertake to deceive the consuming public in this manner richly deserve incarceration in the penitentiary. For they imperil the lives of their patrons.

The Grocery World declares that the retail grocers of the country have as little to do with cold storage abuses as the consumer. Perhaps the moral is that both should unite to ask the state and federal governments to join forces for the purpose of making an end of such abuses, some of which are very annoying to the consumer and, we suppose, to the grocer also.

At the recent annual meeting of the Federation of Nebraska Retailers at Omaha, the subject of co-operation by the grocers of a town or city in delivery of goods and in other matters, so far as practicable, was discussed in an exhaustive manner. Figures were produced to show that co-operation would result in a large annual saving to each grocer.

The Grocery World notes that Messrs. Sullivan and Greene, president and secretary of the National Retail Grocers' Association, "have actively associated themselves with the interests seeking a reduction in the colored oleo tax." It prints a letter these gentlemen have sent out in which they say: "It is a matter of great importance to our association that this work should be pushed immediately," meaning the work of getting through Congress a bill lowering the tax on colored oleo. Whereupon the Grocery World pertinently inquires: "What does that mean? Why is it so important to the National Association that the tax on oleo should be reduced?"

The Board of Aldermen of New York City have done what they could to compel the tagging of all meat which is kept in storage houses in that city, the tags to show the date upon which the produce went into storage. Various cities and states are considering similar legislation.

The New York correspondent of the Grocery World tells us that wholesale dealers in eggs are looking forward with apprehension to the new season. The present price of eggs is discouraging to begin with. Then there is much uncertainty considering the possibilities of the future. Considerable hostility toward the cold storage of eggs has already come to the surface and nobody knows just what some of the state legislatures may do. It is just possible that some of the gloomy talk among the dealers had a purpose behind it, and that purpose a considerable reduction in the price of eggs. Possibly various causes are at work.

According to the ruling of a division of the supreme court of New York, some patent medicines contain so much alcohol that they cannot be sold as medicines but as beverages to be drank off the premises. For this purpose a special license must be procured, a druggist's liquor tax certificate not being sufficient.

In spite of the great progress made by the pure food campaign, some manufacturers are doing their best to evade the law for their own gain. No consideration is given the credulous consumer.

The National Canners' Association has recommended the passage of a parcels post law.

Vendors of colored oleomargarine are always in danger of the law unless they have complied with its provisions and unless the tax of ten cents per pound has been paid.

Some packages of brightly colored oleomargarine, closely resembling yellow butter, have recently been put on sale in New York state at a price very much below that of the article it so closely resembles. The sale of such goods is contrary to law in the state of New York. Uncolored oleo may be sold there as well as here, provided it be sold for what it really is.

Notwithstanding the noticeable fact that many dealers in bogus butter find themselves in the clutches of the law, others follow in their footsteps and pretty certain to share their fate.

Not every article appearing in this Bulletin will receive your approval. Not every article receives the sanction of the editor. But in the campaign of education upon which this Bulletin has embarked it is necessary that all sides should be heard, that all phases of the food and dairy problems should be examined. With abundant information we will all be better prepared to come to a decision.

The members of various local branches of New York state's Retail Grocers' Association are very much opposed to the enactment of a proposed law by the legislature providing for the permissible sale of canned, bottled and baked goods on Sunday. They think this is a step in the wrong direction, since it would impose additional burdens upon them and their employees, compelling them to labor on Sunday instead of spending the day with their families or in rest and relaxation.

Out in Cleveland, Ohio, the grand jury of Cuyahoga county has been investigating the reasons for the advance in the price of food. Its conclusions were: that local consumption greatly exceeds local production, that rigorous inspection of farm products tends to prevent competition by discouraging production; that the increased cost of hay and grain has advanced the cost of raising cattle, and that demand for the best quality and cleanliness of food, regardless of price, is also responsible. Some substantial reasons. And there is truth in every one of them, too.

Every householder should read one or more good trade journal.

Pure food literature is becoming more abundant with each passing year.

The more intelligent supervision of food manufacturer now provided for by the laws of most states certainly does increase the price of food products by a trifling sum, but who wouldn't rather pay a little more for pure and healthful food than for an article that might set in motion forces very prejudicial to health.

The increasing interest which the best women of the country are taking in matters concerning the quality of the food products purchased for the use of their families bodes well for the consumer but ill for the persistent adulterator of the things the people eat and drink.

Pennsylvania needs to have a law prohibiting the manufacture and sale of adulterated alcoholic beverages. The legislature of 1911 should devote some of its time to the formulation and adoption of such a law.

There is a division of opinion among excellent and entirely sincere citizens concerning the use of chemical preservatives. It is very unfortunate that some unprejudiced and thoroughly competent authority cannot be found to say the last word about this matter, a word that would be accepted by everybody as authoritative and conclusive of all controversy.

Over in Europe there is a growing interest in pure food problems. Various learned societies are giving the matter their serious attention and important results are expected in the not distant future.

No country in the world furnishes such an enthusiastic and influential body of intelligent and educated women to the important cause of pure food as the United States. What a blessing it is that we have such energetic mothers, wives and sisters!

The more energetic the action of the federal authorities in the enforcement of the food and drugs act, the more telling will be the results in behalf of food products that will shorten nobody's life.

No imitation food is ever as good as the original. The very fact that it is an imitation is against it.

The housekeepers of the country are just as resolute in their intentions concerning pure food as their grandmothers were before them.

Food manufacturers who undertake to deceive the public by naming inferior brands after superior articles are guilty of a peculiarly mean sort of deception.

Prosecutions in the federal and state courts sometimes reveal petty little meannesses by men who ought to be too big to resort to anything of the sort.

Prudence in the purchase of goods and insistance on a rigid compliance with the guaranty feature of the Pennsylvania pure food law will perfectly protect every retailer in this Commonwealth from prosecution for the sale of adulterated or misbranded goods which he believed to be pure.

While the scientific experts quarrel with each other over the exact effect of this or that drug upon the human system, the wise thing for the unlearned layman to do is to take to the woods.

Some controversy has sprung up in the newspapers and in the lounging places of men who have leisure and are fond of argument, over the exact right of the federal government to censor the statements of a patent medicine advertiser. Whatever may be the law, the general impression will be that it should prevent such wholesale falsehood.

Generally speaking, the pure food laws and those charged with the complex duty of enforcing them have warm and influential friends in the editors and publishers of the leading trade journals of the country. They contain many pages of very excellent reading along proper lines and are undoubtedly doing a great deal to promote and extend a correct public sentiment concerning the sort of food the manufacturer and the dealer should hand out to the consuming public. They are entitled to the widest possible circulation, for wherever they go they do good.

COMMISSIONER FOUST'S ANNUAL REPORT.

The Preliminary Report of State Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust for the year 1909 has just been received from the printer and is ready for distribution to the public. The Commissioner in commenting upon the report says that its subject matter should be of vital interest to every citizen of Pennsylvania. Her seven millions of inhabitants spend collectively about $600,000,000 for food products, and to each of them life and the hard bought earnings from the day's labor are most important. It is the duty of the Food Bureau to protect the consumers of the State from imposition by those who would deliver to them food products that are injurious to health, unclean or fraudulent in character.

The Commissioner notes that the year 1909 has been a period of great activity on the part of the Bureau and that the report exhibits the condition of the food trade in respect to a great variety of the most important articles used for the table and as luxuries. The subject matter is of special interest at this time because the Legislature of 1909 made extensive revision of the existing Food Laws and many additions thereto, and also because the present is an era of high prices and offers unusual temptation to makers and vendors of fraudulent food products.

During the year 4,082 samples of milk and cream were purchased for analysis as compared with about 2,649 taken in 1908. The samples were collected in 126 different communities. The condition of affairs discovered by this extensive survey of the trade in milk and cream was most excellent. There were terminated 14 cases against dealers who had added formaldehyde to milk or cream, and 112 against dealers who had watered or skimmed the milk or sold as cream an article containing less than fifteen per cent. of butter fat contrary to law. The examinations of cheese showed no violations of the law.

The Commissioner states that 141 samples of cider vinegar were taken for analysis. Forty-five prosecutions were terminated for violations of the Vinegar Act. This shows an adulteration of not less than thirty per cent. In many instances the so-called "cider vinegar" was untirely unacquainted with apple juice. Under the Lard Law of 1909 three hundred and sixty-three samples were analyzed, and under the findings of the chemist 29 prosecutions were terminated against the makers and vendors of adulterated lard, who had introduced cotton-seed products and beef stearin. Under the Rotten Egg Act seventy-four samples were taken for analysis and a number of very flagrant violations of the law were detected and prosecutions correspondingly instituted.

Under the Ice Cream Act, the Commissioner states in his report, 227 samples were examined, of which one-sixth proved to be illegal; most of the latter having been found to contain less than two per cent. butter fat or to have been made from skimmed milk. The Commissioner remarks in commenting on the report: "The ice creams found illegal were obtained from push-cart vendors, commonly in charge of Greeks and Italians, who sell their wares extensively to the children in the more thickly populated districts of our larger cities." For the protection of the children prosecutions were promptly instituted and convictions secured in nearly every instance. The report shows that the supervision of the Fruit Syrup trade was continued through the year and that its condition was excellent, practically no adulterations being discovered.

The Commissioner states that under the new Act relating to Non-Alcoholic Drinks 973 samples were taken from soda fountains, bars and sidewalk stands. These goods showed serious adulteration largely with saccharin; also with injurious colors and artificial flavors, and also exhibited misbranding to a marked extent. Under this Act 148 prosecutions were terminated during the year.

Under the General Food Act of 1909, which applies to all food articles, including ingredients used in the preparation of food, except those covered by special Acts relating to Milk and Milk Products, Oleomargarine, Lard, Vinegar, Fruit Syrups, Non-Alcoholic Drinks and Eggs, 1,204 samples were taken for analysis; 214 samples of bakers' materials and products; 329 samples of canned fruits and vegetables; 117 samples of catsups, sauces, etc.; 49 samples of fruit butter, jellies and preserves; 406 samples of meats and fish—both canned and fresh; together with a large number of miscellaneous food materials. About one-sixth of these examinations led to prosecutions, which were terminated during the year, viz: Two hundred and twenty-nine under the Acts of 1907 and 1909. In 1908 seven hundred and ninety-six general food samples were taken for examination and 101 prosecutions for violations of the food law were terminated. This shows that in 1909 nearly twice as many general food samples were examined as in 1908 and more than twice as many prosecutions were terminated for violations of the general food laws.

The Commissioner states in his report that 1,418 samples of butter, oleomargarine and renovated butter were purchased for examination and that there resulted 273 prosecutions that were terminated in the year 1909. He notes that with the era of high food prices there has been an increase in the activity of the oleomargarine trade; also a distinct tendency toward the sale of oleomargarine possessing coloration in resemblance to that of yellow butter. The report shows that to meet this condition of affairs the Bureau has been unprecedently active in its efforts to protect the consumer and honest food producer and dealer against violations of this Act. The record of cases terminated in 1909, viz: 273, is almost twice as great as the largest number reported in any preceding year in the history of the Bureau.

In summarizing his work the Commissioner says: "Eight thousand five hundred and thirty samples of food products of various kinds, as above mentioned, were examined during the year and 797 cases terminated for violations of the several food laws." The Commissioner in his report properly dwells upon the work of the Bureau for the protection of the people against injury to health and against fraud through the foods they buy as the proper measure of efficiency of its service to the public, but he states that the financial record of the Bureau is a matter of public interest in order that the people of the Commonwealth may clearly understand the expense to them of the service rendered. The Finacial Statement shows receipts to the amount of $86,594.15 from fines and license fees and disbursements to the amount of $83,700.68 for the various expenses of the Bureau; or, in other words, the unusual record is presented of receipts in excess of disbursements, so that the service of this year has imposed no direct burden upon the taxpayer.

SOME RECENT NOTICES OF JUDGMENT.

The Parker-Blake Company, Ltd., of New Orleans, has paid a fine of $10 for misbranding a product sent out by it under the name of "Preston's Hed-Ake" (trade mark). The label declared that it would prevent headache, cure any headache and that it was "perfectly harmless." Analysis showed that it would not cure any headache and that it was not harmless, because it contained acetanilid, a dangerous drug. A plea of guilty was entered in the United States Circuit Court for the Eastern District of Louisiana. The fine does not seem to be excessive.

In the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of New York, one Joseph Perlitz, trading as The Perlitz Pharmacy, Joseph Perlitz, Mgr., of Brooklyn, N. Y., plead guilty to the charge of violating the federal food and drugs act and was fined $25. He manufactured a headache powder called "U-RE-KA Headache Powders" and the specific charge was that the preparation was misbranded in that the wrapper and the package of the said headache powder failed to bear a statement on the label of the quantity and proportion of the acetenilid or any derivative or preparation of said acetanilid contained therein.

"Sure Thing Tonic," manufactured and sold by Joseph C. Furst and Samuel Furst, of Cincinnati, trading as Furst Brothers, also fell under the condemnation of the pure food authorities at Washington, and the members of the firm pleaded guilty to misbranding their product and were sentenced by the District Court of the Southern District of Ohio to pay a fine of $10. This "Sure Thing Tonic" was described on the bottle as "The Wonder Stimulant. Restores Nerve Energy. Renews Vital Force." It was also said to be an "invigorator and an exhilarant," and was "guaranteed to conform with the National Pure Food Laws." The back of the bottle contains many wonderful statements. One reading the remarkable claims made for the preparation as a restorer of vital force and the potent foe of mental depression would be tempted to try a bottle. Analysis showed that "Sure Thing Tonic" contained the following ingredients: Alcohol, sucrose, and water, flavored with juniper, none of which ingredients justified the tremendous claims made on the label.

V. Viviano and Brothers, of St. Louis, came near losing 5,500 boxes of macaroni which they shipped from their manufacturing plant in Missouri to the State of Illinois. The trouble with the goods was that the boxes containing them were misbranded within the meaning of the Food and Drugs act of June 20, 1906. Each package was labeled "La Regina V. B. Artificial Coloring Spaghetti Marca di Fabbrica Register Trade Marke," together with pictorial representations and designs, which tended to give the impression that the product was manufactured and prepared for shipment in Italy. The goods were confiscated under the law but finally returned to the manufacturers on the payment of costs by them and the filing of a bond with the approval of the court conditioned upon the product not being disposed of in violation of the pure food laws and regulations of the United States. There was probably nothing wrong with the macaroni. The trouble was that it conveyed a false impression to the purchaser. Whereas the article was manufactured in St. Louis, Mo., they were led to believe that it was an imported product, made in Italy. The laws do not countenance deception no matter how harmless it may be.

William H. Harrison, doing business in Cincinnati, was charged in the United District Court for the Southern District of Ohio with violating the pure food law by shipping from his place of business into the State of Indiana a food product labeled "Harrison's Prepared Self-Raising Buckwheat Flour," whereas analysis showed it to contain some Graham flour, which had been used instead of buckwheat, the purpose being to decrease its strength and to give the impression that it was pure buckwheat flour and leavening material, whereas it was composed of buckwheat flour and other wheat products. The defendant entered a plea of nolo contendere and the court directed him to pay a fine of $5 and to sin no more. This man's offense consisted in using a harmless but cheaper substitute for the genuine article. He deceived his patrons concerning the nature of the goods purchased by them and that is an offense under the law. This is an idea some manufacturers are slow to acquire. They cannot understand why a non-poisonous substitute is not allowable.

Analysis by a competent chemist having shown that "a valuable constituent had been partially or wholly abstracted" from cream shipped into the city of Washington by Arthur Swart, of Auburn, Va., the United States Attorney for the District of Columbia was notified. In due time a criminal information was filed against Swart in the Police Court of the District of Columbia reciting the foregoing facts. The defendant pleaded guilty and was ordered to pay a fine of $10 and costs. In this case the fine was not too heavy; some will think it might well have been heavier. To adulterate cream or milk either by the abstraction of the butter fat or by the addition of water is to cause a deterioration in quality and may imperil human life. For that reason those who tamper with cream or milk or any product thereof should feel the heavy hand of the law. An offense similar to the foregoing was charged up against Washington B. Chichester, of Derwood, Md., who was charged with having sold milk that had been adulterated with water. In the police court of the city of Washington he entered a plea of guilty and was sentenced to pay a fine of $5.

The notices of judgment of which the foregoing paragraphs are abstracts were sent out on the 28th of April. They indicate that the officers of the Federal Pure Food Bureau are bestirring themselves against violators of the law. The work of the officials of this department of the national government has already accomplished much good, but the men who are willing to take chances are still busily engaged in imperiling the health of the people. Nevertheless, a continuance of the efforts of the Department of Agriculture and the maintenance of a correct public sentiment will make for constant improvement. The day may never come when the unscrupulous dealer will learn to do right from the love of right and a sincere regard for the welfare of his patrons, but the law's increasing vigilance will do as much good in the end as if he had a correct and sensitive conscience.

RELATION OF THE HOUSEKEEPER TO THE LAWS.

Increasing interest in the pure food question throughout this Commonwealth and in various other sections of the Union indicates the eventual formation of a public sentiment so intense that few manufacturers who hope to retain public confidence will retain an attitude of indifference toward this important matter, much less one of antagonism. It has always needed the active co-operation of genuine public sentiment to render effective the enforcement of any statute. The lack of this accounts for the existence of so many dead laws. While there is a continual clamor among the people for new laws affecting every interest of human life, the superficial observer does not need to be told that we have dozens of laws that might as well never have been enacted. This is not true of the laws relating to the food and drink of the people of Pennsylvania. The laws we have—and they constitute a pretty effective body—are being pretty generally observed while those who venture to disobey them seldom escape punishment. This is exactly as it should be. Care should be taken in the enactment of the laws; once they are approved by the Governor or the President they should receive the obedience of every citizen.

In this State, as elsewhere, the proper enforcement of the pure food laws is committed directly to the Dairy and Food Commissioner and his assistants or agents. However active they may be they cannot hope to succeed entirely unless they have the sympathy, the encouragement and the active aid of those whose agents and servants they are. For that reason they have solicited the intelligent interest of the heads of each family. They hope to see the husband and father concerned for the physical welfare of the members of his family; they are anxious that the housekeeper should understand that pure food is of the most urgent value and importance in raising a family of boys and girls who shall house their sound minds in sound bodies. For this reason the Dairy and Food Commissioner is specially interested in every movement among women which has for its purpose the study of the problem of the family as it is related to the food supply. He knows that the housekeepers of the State have the matter in their own hands. Whatever they resolve upon will be accomplished, for do not they occupy the domestic throne?

In the country districts the Grange has been an effective instrument in promoting the social life of the wives of the farmers. Once upon a time the woman who presided over the destinies of the farm led a very lonely and toilsome life. With the flight of time the situation has changed very much and always for the better. The Grange offered a common meeting place for the women of the country, hitherto isolated and lonely, knowing only laborious days and strangers, in most instances, to literary culture or to that relaxation which is essential to continued mental and physical health. It would be impossible to fitly estimate the value of such institutions as the Grange to the women of the farm. It brings them an entire change of scene. It revives their ambition to know things. When the Grange is in the hands of a lecturer who has the time and the ability to promote the literary side of the regular meetings much good follows to all the members, particularly to the women. Here is an opportunity to study the pure food question to the advantage of the several housekeepers and the members of their families. Here the heads of the families represented may learn how to detect the impure and unfit food and how to combine their influence so as to have the most weight with the manufacturer and the dealer.

In the various cities and towns of the Commonwealth many ladies have begun to take a lively interest in this question of pure food. Some pursue their studies individually; some associate themselves together and hold regular weekly or fortnightly meetings for the purpose of discussing the provisions of the laws, the conditions of the existing food supply, the defects still existing, the most effective method of assisting in creating a strong healthy sentiment in favor of the rigid enforcement of the law and the adoption of better ones than the statutes now existing. These meetings are of signal value to the ladies participating and are no less useful to their families and the entire community. For once it is discovered that only unadulterated food commands the confidence of the heads of a household in any community that particular community will be well served. The multiplication of similar societies or clubs cannot be too strongly commended. They are the effective agents of a crusade that has for its purpose the protection of health and the prolongation of life.

EUROPE IS BEGINNING TO ADVANCE.

From a Scotch newspaper published in the historic town of Dumferline we observe that two milkmen in that section have been arrested and fined for selling cream which lacked the proper per centage of butter fat. One of the unfortunates was compelled to pay three pounds and the other nearly as much. In both instances the fault seems to have rested largely with the original source of supply. The man who paid the larger fine took it good naturedly, but said he meant to change his source of supply.

The Bulletin notes with satisfaction the progress of the good cause. Milk is as much a necessity in Scotland as it is in the United States. It is as true there as here that poor milk, weakened cream, adulterated milk, will not furnish the same nourishment that the genuine article gives and many an Old World baby has died because of the poor quality of the milk furnished by the family milkman. The emphasis which public sentiment is everywhere levying upon the milk problem promises much for the future of the race.

In many things the New World is very much ahead of the Old. We have fewer ruins here, fewer castles. But our attitude toward the food of the people, or rather toward its preparation and distribution, has for some years been decidedly in advance of the European situation. The incident in Scotland as well as in several others in various parts of the continent of Europe shows that the people over there are learning that pure food is one of the essentials of good health and prolonged life. Before the twentieth century is ready to give place to its successor the entire world will be converted to this very reasonable notion and the consciences of the manufacturers as well as the distributors will have been so thoroughly educated in the right direction that the violator of the law will be the exception rather than the rule.

At all events that is the way some of those who have been in the battle for a long time get to dreaming at odd moments in their journey through life and there is no reason why their dreams should not come true as well as those of other poets who are engaged in no more important enterprise. Scotland, France, Germany are already setting the pace for their neighbors. Others will follow.

ABOUT THE DANGEROUS FLY.

At this season the grocer is again confronted by his relation to the fly and the public. The fly is as intrusive and as persistent as ever, He has an inquiring mind. He also has a sweet tongue and a capacious appetite. He gets over a large amount of ground in the course of a day. He has little choice and is without delicacy of sentiment. Things from which the human stomach would turn with loathing, attract his eye and receive his attentions as readily as the fine and wholesome viands upon the table of the well-to-do.

There was a time when the roving habits of the fly did not greatly disturb either the grocer or his patron. Science had not discovered the facts which it has been making public lately with great plainness of speech. In those primitive times no visitor was more hospitably received than the fly, especially in the small towns and the country districts. Screens were unknown. The head of the house provided herself with a "fly brush," made of paper or feathers, and this was wielded with more or less regularity by some person during the progress of the family meals. But the fly had little difficulty in evading the brush.

In these days of better knowledge the housekeeper knows that the little fly is really more dangerous than the untamed tiger of the jungle. The grocer should know this also if he does not already know. It has been the instrumental cause of much sickness. Many deaths have resulted from the infection it carried on its wings or on its feet. It is the freebooter of air and earth. Those who take the trouble to watch its devious career for an hour or two of any day will soon discover more than one forcible reason why it should be excluded from the dining room and also why it should be denied access to the fruits and vegetables exposed for sale by the grocer.

This Bulletin advises the grocer who wishes to secure the approbation of the prudent and conservative housekeeper and who desires to sell no poison-laden food to protect his goods from exposure to the depredations of the wandering fly, the Arab of the air. This can be done at comparatively trifling cost, and it should be done, not only because the law requires cleanliness but also because the protection of the health of the consuming public should be a matter of first importance.

DESICCATED EGGS WHICH WERE DECAYED AND DECOMPOSED.

Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust has instructed D. B. Miller, in charge of the work of the food bureau in Allegheny county, to institute legal proceedings against three large dealers who have sold desiccated eggs unfit for food, because decomposed.

The Commissioner said that desiccated eggs are prepared by drying the whites and yolks of eggs taken from the shell. The stock for this material is chiefly obtained from eggs broken in transit and handling in commercial packages.

He added that in order that such material may be fit for use as food it is essential that filth be absolutely excluded, fresh stock only used and the desiccation be promptly and rapidly carried out and, finally, that the desiccated preparation be kept in a dry condition. Too often, however, the stock is saved without much care as to its cleanliness and without the rigid rejection of stale or decayed stock.

NO FORMALDEHYDE IN FRUIT.

The Dairy and Food Commissioner received some days ago a sensational complaint from Sharon, Pa., the writer claiming he had detected by its odor the presence of formaldehyde applied externally to oranges, grapefruit and bananas. Samples of the suspected fruits were promptly purchased by the agents of the Bureau and submitted to the chemist for analysis. By the application of the most delicate methods of analysis the latter was, however, unable to find any trace of the embalming fluid suspected to be present.

A similar complaint concerning hot-house grapes, which retail at $2 per pound, was received from Philadelphia. Special Agent Cassidy was instructed to secure samples of such grapes and these samples are now under examination by Professor Charles H. LaWall, chemist of the Bureau.

Formaldehyde is a preservative used to keep in fine condition exhibits of fruits and vegetables. It would, doubtless, tend to keep in fine appearance fruits that were impregnated with it, and, since it tends to unite with the sugars of the fruit, its presence would not be readily detected by the taste or smell. The chemist, however, by distilling the crushed fruit with an acid is able to break these compounds of formaldehyde and recover the latter in the distillate, and is thus able to detect the presence of very small quantities of this preservative.

HIGH BALLS, NOT BALLS.

High balls—the kind the barkeep passes to thirsty mortals for a money consideration—have a higher standing now than heretofore. They were given formal recognition by Judge McMichael, who said that he knows there are such things.

The judge was charging a jury in the case of Louis and Harry Broskey, ice cream manufacturers, who were charged by Harry P. Cassidy, agent for the State Dairy and Food Commissioner, with selling ice cream that lacked the required amount of butter fat.

Referring to Assistant District Attorney Maurer's point, that while the defendants said they sold the cream as "milk balls," they admitted that it was not put in the form of "balls," Judge McMichael said: "I looked through the dictionary but could not find the word "milk balls." I also looked for "high balls," but it was not there. I know there are such things as high balls, and they don't look like balls, either."

Everybody laughed, and the jury brought in a verdict of guilty.

OLEOMARGARINE AT WASHINGTON.

Considerable interest was created throughout the country during the month of April by the preliminary hearings on the bill prepared by the oleomargarine people reducing the tax on colored oleo to 2 cents a pound instead of 10, as now provided by law, and raising the tax on the uncolored product from one-fourth cent to two cents. If this bill were to receive the approbation of the Congress and the President the tax on all sorts of oleo would be equal. The bill was introduced by Representatives Burleson, of Texas. Hearings were heard during the month of April and the first half of May.

The proposition to modify the act taxing oleomargarine and regulating its sale is antagonized by the National Dairy Union and there is little reason to believe the advocates of change will succeed. From a circular sent out by E. K. Slater, Secretary of the Union, we learn that the dairy interest feel that they have the best of the argument, not only with the people but also with Congress. This circular was dated April 25, and deals with the first hearings. It deals with the matter from a partisan standpoint, of course, but it is a standpoint with which the Bulletin largely sympathizes, although it is decidedly friendly to uncolored butter.

Representative Burleson conducted the hearing in the interest of the oleomargarine people. Among other witnesses summoned by him was Dr. H. W. Wiley, chief chemist of the Department of Agriculture, in Washington, who frankly expressed his convictions. He said that oleomargarine is a wholesome food product when properly manufactured, but admitted on cross-examination that there is a difference in the nutritive value of different oils which might make the two products differ in food value and effect on the human system. He likewise declared that he likes butter and does not like oleomargarine, a statement in which he receives considerable support from his fellow citizens. Various other witnesses were called on both sides. It is perfectly safe to say that neither convinced the other of error.

Several bills providing for the regulation of the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine are awaiting action by Congress. The chances are that nothing will be done at the present session. The butter makers are hoping the Penrose bill will become a law.

GIVE THE DATE.

Under the above headline the Chicago Tribune observes that the proposed requirement that foodstuffs placed in cold storage shall be dated seems to worry the warehousemen as much as it pleases consumers. And it adds that when the views of middlemen and consumers clash about a matter of that kind, those of the latter should prevail.

The Tribune goes on to say that the objection of the warehousemen to this legislation is that it would be mere catering to what they call the whims and fads of consumers. It is said that they would pass by an egg which had spent restful and improving months in cold storage and give the preference to one just laid; that they would not buy salmon of last year's pack if they could get some put up this year, and that they would be ruled by a silly idea that poultry, unlike wines, does not improve by keeping. The buyers, it is alleged, would slight the more antique goods and take the up-to-date ones unless, indeed, an inducement were held out to them in the way of lower prices. That is an inducement which sellers are loath to hold out. It would cut into their profits.

The consumer is not the notional fellow the warehousemen would make him out to be. Long keeping does impair the quality of most articles. They lose flavor and some of them are apt to develop unpleasant peculiarities. A correspondent in yesterday's Tribune told of the physical anguish he underwent after eating sardines which had become morose and enemies of mankind through long inprisonment.

Let us lay down a principle: It is that the person to whom any article is offered by the retailer is entitled to full, accurate information concerning it. If it be a coat, he has a right to know whether it is all wool or part cotton. If it be salad oil, he has a right to know whether it was pressed from olives or cottonseed. If it be a chicken, he has a right to know how much time has gone by since its neck was wrung.

Some of his rights have been secured to him by pure food legislation. A law requiring cold storage goods to be dated would secure him another right. Then if he bought musty eggs and poultry, as tasteless, because of age, as basswood chips, he would do it knowingly.

Thus far the Chicago Tribune. The concluding sentences are in exact accord with the intention of Pennsylvania's pure food law as well as of the federal food and drugs act, and they seem to be unanswerable. The consumer has a right to know. To deceive him should be classed with swindling and punished as such.

GIVING A WORTHLESS GUARANTEE.

Some weeks ago a specialty company doing business in Philadelphia furnished a buyer with one of its products, giving him a guarantee. The manufacturing concern supposed the buyer intended to confine his sales within this State, but he, relying upon the effectiveness of the guarantee, sent the product into interstate commerce.

Suit was entered in the United States Court against the specialty company. It admitted the charges of the government but denied that its action constituted an offense. The plea was not entertained, the court brushing it aside in the following language:

Some weeks ago a specialty company doing business in Philadelphia furnished a buyer with one of its products, giving him a guarantee. The manufacturing concern supposed the buyer intended to confine his sales within this State, but he, relying upon the effectiveness of the guarantee, sent the product into interstate commerce.

Suit was entered in the United States Court against the specialty company. It admitted the charges of the government but denied that its action constituted an offense. The plea was not entertained, the court brushing it aside in the following language:

"The federal food act is intended to prevent adulterated and misbranded foods from being sold in interstate commerce, nothing more, and in order that this may be accomplished, it prohibits the party who makes or manufacturers the food, and who knows what it contains, from falsely assuring an innocent purchaser that its quality and dress lawfully entitle him to sell the commodity in interstate commerce. Such certificate, made by a defendant, expressly under the provisions of the act, if false, could have been made with no purpose other than to defeat the object of the act. This prohibition is obviously essential to the enforcement of one of the most important powers with which Congress is entrusted, to wit, the regulation of interstate commerce."

This curt decision of the court is certainly in strict accordance with justice. It is a pleasure to observe that in this instance justice and law are identical. The morals of a manufacturer who will give out a guarantee which he knows to be false need mending and we know of no process likely to prove more effective than the interposition of the law, either State or National. The deceiver of the people is a bad citizen, no matter what his seeming standing in the community. In this case the specialty company didn't hesitate to falsely represent matters to the buyer. It deserves whatever may come to it at the hands of the federal government.

AN ANTI-FLY POSTER.

Early in the season before the appearance of the advance guard of the pestiferous fly, the Civic Club of the progressive and enterprising city of Harrisburg, and the Board of Health of that city, joined forces to prepare and circulate a significant poster containing so much good sense that the Bulletin commends it to widespread imitation. Here it is:

From flies and filth to food and fever.

Clean up your houses and yards.

This is the time to look out for the flies. A common house fly is a carrier of disease.

Rules for dealing with the fly pest:

Keep the flies away from the sick, especially those ill with contagious diseases. Kill every fly that strays into the sick room. His body is covered with disease germs.

Do not allow decaying matter of any sort to accumulate on or near your premises.

All refuse which tends in any way to fermentation, such as bedding straw, paper waste and vegetable matter, should be disposed of or covered with lime or kerosene oil.

Screen your food.

Keep all receptacles for garbage carefully covered and the cans cleaned or sprinkled with oil or lime.

Keep all stable manure in vault or pit, screened or sprinkled with lime, oil or other cheap preparation.

See that your sewage system is in good order; that it does not leak; is up to date and not exposed to flies.

Pour kerosene into the drains.

Cover food after a meal; burn or bury all table refuse.

Screen all food exposed for sale.

Screen all windows and doors, especially the kitchen and dining room.

Burn pyrethrum powder in the house to kill the flies.

Don't forget, if you see flies, that their breeding place is in nearby filth. It may be behind the door, under the table, or in the cuspidor.

If there is no dirt and filth there will be no flies.

If there is a nuisance in the neighborhood write at once to the Health Department.

There you have them. Whenever and wherever obeyed there will be fewer flies, much less sickness and longer life. By the time this number of the Bulletin appears the warm weather will be here to stay and the flies, too. But even after they come it is possible for a resolute housekeeper to rid her premises of their presence.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

Guard against the intrusive fly.

Take pains to protect your goods against street dust.

Remember that he who retains a customer's confidence does well.

Here and there a man profits for a moment by deception.

The grocer who thinks more of his good name than of present gain wins out in the end.

This is a big country and one may depend upon much transient custom; still he who tries to deserve public confidence wins his way.

There are manufacturers of food products in this country whose names are household words. They keep their trade because they deserve it.

The household which insists upon the purest and most wholesome food is helping to enforce the pure food laws.

The enforcement of the pure food laws is necessary not only because they are on the statute books, but because they are meant to cure a very gross evil.

The National food and drugs act is doing good; so are the several State laws.

The returns of health boards throughout the country show a decided increase in the average length of human life during recent years. The enactment and enforcement of pure food laws have had something to do with this, although much credit is likewise due the various State and local boards of health.

Providence cannot be depended upon to protect the family of that housekeeper who takes none of the ordinary precautions of life. It is a sin to accuse Providence when we are responsible.

The more the people of this country consider the food question the more are they convinced of its vital importance.

The Old World is also beginning to stir around on the question of the best possible food for the consumer. The sentiment for the best is rapidly spreading in every direction.

If the men who insist upon trying to elude the pure food laws of the State and Federal government would devote half as much energy to the effort to earn an honest living they would soon become well-to-do citizens.

The food adulterator pursues a particularly mean and contemptible occupation. Even when the stuff he uses contains nothing injurious to the human constitution he cheats his patrons, giving them an inferior article while receiving the price of a superior one.

Obedience to law should be taught in every school and in every home. Reverence for duly constituted authority, hatred of wrongdoing and love of truth should be so enforced in the beginning that the boys and girls will obey the statutes when they are men and women as naturally and as easily as a duck takes to water. That would help to bring about the manufacture and sale everywhere of pure food.

The battle between the champions of pure butter and the advocates of oleomargarine has not yet opened in Congress. There is much reason to believe that the former will win.

Investigations by Congress into the prices of butter and the process by which these prices are fixed from time to time have resulted in some very interesting revelations.

Students of human nature tell us that the reason some persons persist in violating the pure food laws of the State is to be found in the fact that they were born with a disposition to go wrong in one way or another.

That is a very tender way of dealing with the professional criminal. Some hard-headed observers persist in declining to believe that the man who wins a fortune by selling counterfeit food is the victim of a disease.

The situation in Pennsylvania is quite as good as one could expect from the pure food standpoint. Each year witnesses a steady improvement over its predecessor. Let all the people help to bring about an even better condition.

The American people have a right to the food they order and pay for.

The Federal authorities are not idle, either.

The mistress of the house should read the labels regularly.

The Bulletin is always pleased to hear from its readers. Topics interesting to them will be gladly discussed here.

There is little reason to suppose the comet will have any special influence upon the food products of the country.

The housekeeper should remember that milk is very susceptible to its surroundings. It should be kept apart from any article whose odor it might appropriate.

The literature of the food humbug and medical humbug is large, but the chances are that it will be still larger.

The majority of folks eat too much. Your family doctor will tell you that if you ask him. While it would be folly to starve oneself, it is even greater folly and far more dangerous to stuff one's stomach with solid food.

The indifference or ignorance of the average consumer gave the unscrupulous manufacturer of food a great start. Some of the consumers are just as careless yet, and some of the manufacturers quite as unscrupulous, but they now constitute the exceptions, which prove the rule.

Taking everything into consideration, the honest grocer has a great advantage over his less scrupulous rival. For a time the latter may flourish like the green bay tree, but the moment always arrives when his patrons desert him and he is obliged to seek new fields of enterprise.

As the Bulletin has frequently observed, the average housekeeper is rather fond of patronizing a grocer who takes pride in keeping his place looking neat and clean and who keeps his vegetables and fruits under cover in order that they may be protected from flies and other impudent creatures. Every season the housekeeper is becoming more finical in her tastes. The wise dealer undertakes to accommodate his conduct to her notions of the eternal fitness of things.

Vendors of soft drinks who do not carefully comply with the provisions of the law regulating their business are certain to get into trouble. The wise dealer will run no risks.

The current annual report of the State Dairy Commissioner of Iowa shows that there is a slight increase in the amount of butter made in the creameries during the year, while there has been a small decrease in the number of creameries. In the year 1900 Iowa had 994 creameries. The statistics for 1909 show that there are now but 543. And yet the amount of butter produced has risen from 84,965,062 pounds to 101,907,316 pounds.

The man who transgresses the law for the express purpose of bringing its provisions before the highest court in order that its legality may be authoritatively passed upon occupies a very different relation both to the State and the public from his neighbor who follows the paths of wrong-doing for purely selfish reasons. It may sometimes be a public duty to bring the law and the court into contact.

The housekeeper and the grocer should be in perfect accord concerning the quality of the food products sold by the one and consumed by the other and her family. High prices do not necessarily mean correspondingly nutritious food. An article may be both cheap and pure. And that should be the end sought by American manufacturers.

The laws have done something to bring about a purer quality of milk for family consumption, but the dairymen and the farmers have done more. For while they sometimes felt that many burdens had been imposed upon them, they realized that milk is an esssential article of food, especially to the little people, and that infant mortality—high enough under the best of circumstances—would never be greatly reduced until the babies were fed pure milk. They deserve much credit for their careful conduct.

State legislation against the continued sale of adulterated liquors will supplement the Federal act, as interpreted by President Taft. The national law will protect consumers of liquors that have been transported from one State to another, but a State law is also necessary in order to prevent adulteration by State distillers of the liquor sold within the bounds of the Commonwealth. There is every reason to believe this will be secured next winter.

The Federal government promises to make it interesting for those manufacturers of patent medicines and other compounds who make preposterous claims for their products.

Since it is a difficult matter for the average citizen to judge of any medicine or other product offered him, and since he must either accept the statements of the label or decline to invest, it is entirely right that the government should make fraud unhealthy and unlucky.

There is an impression abroad that it is entirely within the province of the national government to insist upon truthful advertising concerning medicines or food products. And since much depends upon the virtue of the medicines taken by the ailing, all who are in need of medical aid are entitled to first hand information.

Uniformity of legislation concerning the manufacture and sale of all food products and beverages, as well as medicines, is a desirable thing and will undoubtedly come to pass ere many years elapse. The Federal government will strengthen its law and the States will model theirs upon that. That will aid manufacturers and do no harm.

At the moment this is written a marked decline in the prices of many articles of food is noted. At the same time unseasonable April weather in the central west and the fruit growing belt seems to have done much damage. Perhaps later advices will show that the crops were not injured as badly as at first appeared.

The dog is an animal that should never be tolerated about a grocery store. He should be located in some other sphere of usefulness.

There has been marked improvement in the quality of the eggs sold in Pennsylvania since the enactment of the law of 1909 prohibiting the sale of certain sorts of eggs. This is a gratifying state of affairs.

The butter manufacturers of Pennsylvania are a very substantial and useful class of citizens. In their efforts to prevent the sale of oleomargarine as butter they are entitled to the sympathy and assistance of their fellow citizens. Nobody objects to oleomargarine as such. Let its manufacturers be content.

Nothing bad that is said about the common house fly is a slander. It is one of the most persistent and insidious of humanity's foes.

Many an insignificant cause has tremendous results. It is never wise to neglect even such a small thing as a roving fly.

The International Steward's Bulletin declares that the stewards of this country are charged with a very great responsibility in the selection of food for their guests. Just as much, we suppose, as is the head of each household.

The first Canadian branch of the International Stewards' Association, the parent body of which is incorporated in the United States, has just been formed in Montreal, and it is expected that other cities throughout the Dominion will fall into line in due time.

Milwaukee's sealer of weights and measures has directed the grocers of that city to refrain from a practice into which some of them have fallen of weighing the butter trays as a part of the butter sold to customers. The grocers declare their desire to avoid this, but they insist that the commission men who sell them the goods should be restrained from weighing the tubs or barrels in which the butter is shipped and charging up the whole thing as so much butter. Their request seems reasonable.

The International Stewards' Bulletin does not think the bill recently introduced in the United States Senate by Mr. Lodge, of Massachusetts, providing that all fruit containers must be a quart or some multiple thereof goes far enough. It wants him to include containers of all description, such as barrels, boxes, crates, etc.

The family that prefers oleomargarine for the dining table is entitled to the gratification of its taste. So is the household that prefers butter and is sometimes deceived by the manufacturers and vendors of bogus butter. In other words, there should be no deception.

The pure food laws of Pennsylvania are not exactly perfect, but they are very much better than their predecessors and the conditions surrounding the manufacture and sale of food products are greatly improved. This is the general conviction.

Each grocer should be the inspector of his own goods.

There are no food inspectors in Pennsylvania except those who represent the Federal government.

The vendors of so-called soft drinks in this State must not forget the existence of a very comprehensive act forbidding the adulteration of their products. They must comply with its provisions if they wish to be secure.

Instruction in what is now daintily styled domestic science, but which used to be known as housework, should be conducted both in the family and the public schools.

The Grocery World is of the opinion that the Federal food and drugs act is defective in that it imposes no minimum fine for a violation of any of its provisions. Two cases are referred to in illustration of the point. A concern in Ohio which had been selling alcohol containing merely a trace of lemon as "compound lemon" extract was fined $5. This product was worthless, as it contained no lemon or no substitute for lemon. Another action against a New York man who sold as "pure olive oil" an artificially colored blend of olive and cottonseed oils, resulted in a fine of $100. The Grocery World thinks the former offense much more serious than the latter.

The State and Federal governments are entirely within the line of duty when they enact laws designed to prevent adulteration or misbranding of food products. The common man has no means of knowing whether the food he buys is genuine or an imitation, pure or adulterated. He must look to the State to protect his health and guard his family against the unscrupulous persons who are so eager for gain that they forget their obligations to others.

The business man who does his duty conscientiously and well must be greatly grieved over the misconduct of reckless and unscrupulous individuals whose malicious and reckless disregard of the commonest obligations frequently do harm to legitimate lines of business. These are equally interested with the State in punishing the deceivers.

The Board of Food and Drug Inspection have revoked the provision permitting the importation of stearin for mixture with domestic oils, not animal, if the importer executes a penal bond conditional upon the subsequent exportation of all stearin thus imported. Hereafter stearin will not be admitted into the United States unless accompanied by a certificate showing its freedom from disease, as in the case of meats and other meat food products of cattle, sheep, swine and goats. Secretary Wilson approves.

It is stated by a correspondent of Hoard's Dairyman that there is a great increase in the number of Holstein cattle in the State of New York. He says, "these Holsteins meet the requirements for which milk in its natural form is required."

A successful farmer who lives in the neighborhood of Binghamton, New York, declares that his success is due, more than anything else, to the reading of good agricultural papers.

One of the champions of genuine butter declares that "the strength of oleomargarine is in its ability to counterfeit butter in the essentials of color and not in point of wholesomeness or as a food substitute. To prevent this unfair and destructive competition to a great and most valuable industry we have Federal and State laws, and it is right we should have them."

It is the conviction of Hoard's Dairyman that the officials of the Elgin Board of Trade will be able to convince both Congress and the country that the board was organized and officered by the producers and manufacturers of dairy products to protect themselves from the market manipulations of commission men and butter speculators, and that in all the years of its existence the prices named at Elgin each week have fairly reflected the real value of high grade creamery butter in the great markets of the country.

The directors of the National Dairy Show Association have decided to hold the fifth annual dairy show in Milwaukee, October 14-23, 1910. Professor H. E. Van Norman, of State College, Pa., will work out the policies of the board.

The State Department of Agriculture has just issued an informing and valuable bulletin on the potato.

THE DEADLY AND DAMNABLE HOUSE FLY.

From Bulletin of the Colorado State Board of Health.

Except in sleepy, zoophilic, antivivi section of India, the dangers to civilized man from the larger members of the animal kingdom can, in our day, be almost disregarded. The insect pests, however, loom relatively large in crowded communities as a menace to the public health, as well as being the chief enemies of horiculture and agriculture. The role of the mosquito in transmitting malaria and yellow fever has been brilliantly and conclusively demonstrated, to the advantage of all mankind.

The most abundant and widely distributed of pestilent insects is the common house fly (musca domestica), constituting about 99 per cent. of the various species of flies found about barns and houses. This hexapod "mixer" has about 10,000 very fine hairs on its feet, from which oil exudes constantly, enabling the fly to walk (by capillary attraction) in any position on a dry surface which is not too dusty. The house fly breeds preferably in horse manure, though at times in garbage or human feces, the full cycle of development from the egg being nine or ten days. Ritchie says it is estimated that in one summer 300 flies may hatch in a cubic inch of manure, if this is left undisturbed.

The hairy nature of its feet makes the fly an unrivaled carrier of filth and contagion, and as many as 10,000 bacteria have been found upon a single individual. Among the germs which have been thus isolated in pure culture, we may mention: B. typhi abdominalis, B. coli communis, B. pyocyaneus, B. tuberculosis, B. cholera Asiaticae, B. pestis bubonicae, pyogenic microorganisms and the eggs of most of the intestinal parasites. Microbes are carried mostly upon the legs of the insect, but are likewise deposited in its feces, and may be liberated by the dry decay of dead flies. In one speck left by a fly that had been captured on the face of a leper, says Ritchie, 1,115 leprosy germs were counted.

The pathogenic relation of the house fly to enteric fever is becoming so clear and prominent that a number of sanitarians have suggested designating the insect as the typhoid fly. It is indeed probable that the majority of the 35,000 deaths from typhoid fever in the United States during the last census year may be charged up to the little house fly. Vaughn has shown convincingly the paramount role of flies in causing typhoid among the American soldiers in camps during the summer of 1898. In North Denver, in the fall of 1908, there appeared an epidemic (53 cases and 6 deaths) of enteric fever along the route of a milkman whose wife had typhoid. The stools were thrown into the ordinary country closets, whence flies carried the specific germs (as shown by cultures) into the unscreened milk room. Prompt action by the State Board of Health averted further spread of the infection.

The house fly is not a true scavenger; it is merely a foul marauder, engendered in excrement, nourished on corruption, rioting in all manner of abominable nastiness, and as a species, for the good of the people, doomed ultimately to destruction.

To diminish and destroy what may be termed the Fly Peril, there are three main principles to follow: 1. Ablate the first cause by having manure removed every week (before maggots have time to develop into flies, or if this is impracticable, keep it carefully covered in a closed box (using chlorinated lime as a disinfectant) or screened with wire gauze. Garbage should be protected in the same way when, as is best, it cannot be burned or fed to chickens or pigs. 2. Prevent entrance of flies into house and contact with foods and drinks, by well-fitting screens for doors and windows and the quick storing of viands in refrigerator and cupboards; also a netting for the helpless sleeping baby. Let your grocer know that you are tired of eating muscid ordure, and he will put up some better protection than the gay little papers which flutter up and down. 3. Kill every fly on sight, if you can, with a wire "killer," dilute formalin (renewed every day) on a plate, or sticky fly paper—the black fly paper should not be used where there are little children, as it is very poisonous. The absence of flies, like the presence of soap, should be considered a true index of civilization.

DAIRY AND OTHER FARMS.

Statement of Mr. J. R. Morley, of Owatonna, Minnesota, representing the Minnesota Co-operative Dairies Association, before the Committee on Agriculture, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C., on the oleomargarine question.

Mr. Morley. My name is John R. Morley, Owatonna, Minn. Do you want my occupation?

The Chairman. Yes, sir.

Mr. Morley. I am a farmer, and I am representing here the Minnesota Co-operative Dairies Association.

Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, I want to present some figures for the purpose of putting them in the record. I agree with our chairman that it should not take long, probably not to exceed five or ten minutes, to do what I want to do. I also want to correct some figures that were given here on the first day of this hearing in the opening remarks of Mr. Burleson, the gentleman from Texas. I dislike to give those figures if the gentleman from Texas is not present.

The Chairman. He is here.

Mr. Morley. I want to say, Mr. Chairman, that I am not an expert on color or the definition of colors; neither am I an expert on the administration of law. My experience in dairying has been more in the production of the raw product and the manufacture of the same and the putting of it on the market.

Now, the total amount of butter made in 1899—and I think we have no reliable figures, only figures by estimates since that time—is 1,491,871,673 pounds. That reported from farms was 1,071,745,127 pounds, and from factories there were reported 420,126,546 pounds. The average price received for butter at that time was 16.7 cents per pound on the farm and 20 cents for the factories.

Now, I will get at the increase of present production by percentages, based upon the increase in the number of dairy cows as reported by the Secretary of Agriculture, and the difference in price between now and ten years ago. The total value of butter made on the farms at that time was $178,881,436.20; of that made in factories it was $84,025,309.20. Figuring it at these prices, which are very conservative, this would make a total of $262,960,745.40.

There are no statistics at hand which show the value of butter produced in 1909, but during the year 1899 there were, according to the census report, 17,139,674 cows, while, according to the Year Book for 1909, there were in that year 21,801,000 cows. It is very conservative to say that if the number of dairy cows has increased 27 per cent.—that would be a 27 per cent. increase—the butter product would have increased in value at least that amount in per cent., and this would make the value of the butter produced in 1909, at the prices prevailing in 1899, $333,891,566.65. But the price for 1909 was 42 per cent. higher than the price in 1899, which would make the value of the product for 1909, $474,175,024.64, using those percentages to get the difference.

The annual report of the Secretary of Agriculture estimates that the total value of all dairy products for the year 1909 will reach approximately $800,000,000. This, of course, would include the value of cheese, milk and cream sold for city consumption, as well as butter; and he further states in that remark that that exceeds the value of any one product in the United States, not excepting King Cotton.

Now, at this point, I want to correct the figures given by the gentleman from Texas in his opening remarks on April 20th. The gentleman evidently omitted some of the figures from the table in the census report from which he apparently got his figures. I quote from that, page 4 of the proceedings of April 20th:

On June 1, 1900, there were 5,739,657 farmers in this country. Of that number those who were engaged in the dairy produce business were 359,578, or 6.2 per cent. of the whole number.

That is of farmers. Now, turning to the Twelfth Cenus Report, volume 5, part 1, page 169, table 159, which I think is the table that this information was gotten from, we find that there are 5,739,657 farmers, as he reports. Of farmers reporting dairy cows there were 4,514,210; dairy farmers, 357,578. The per cent. of all the farmers reporting dairy cows was 78.6, and not 6.2 per cent., which would include these 17,139,674 cows.

Now, the question would naturally arise to this committee, in view of these figures, what is the distinction between a farm and a dairy farm? And I want to say, Mr. Chairman, that that distinction is simply the opinion of the owner. During the recess of this hearing I was home and I made the report of my farm to the census enumerator. He said to me: "Is this a dairy farm?" I said, "No." At the same time I reported having on that farm 33 milch cows, or, as they are actually styled, dairy cows. The reason that I did not report that as a dairy farm was because it was not exclusively a dairy farm.

Now, the inference might be drawn from that that it was simply a man's opinion whether it was a dairy farm or not. Now, the construction I would put on a dairy farm would be a farm that was used exclusively for the production of dairy products, where the only source of income would be the products of the dairy cows.

Then, on the next page, page 5, taking the farms as the principal source of income, I quote this from the remarks of the gentleman from Texas:

"And the farmers who are engaged in those occupations number: those engaged in raising live stock, 1,564,714, or 27.3 per cent. of the whole; those who are engaged in the production of cotton, 1,071,545, or 18.7 per cent. of the whole; a total of 46 per cent., as against 6.2 per cent. engaged in the dairy business."

Table 160, page 169, volume 5, part 1 of the Twelfth Census Report, shows that the farms where the principal source of income was live stock was the same as reported, 1,564,714, but of these farms 1,409,343 reported dairy cows, and the number of dairy cows was 5,852,815, or an average of 4.2 cows per farm. Where the principal source of income is cotton the number of farms is 1,071,545 reporting dairy cows. Out of that number 604,614, or 14 per cent. of all the dairy farms, where the principal source of income is cotton, reported dairy cows to the number of 1,315,491, or two cows per farm.

My reason for bringing these figures out, Mr. Chairman, is because, although I do not want to take any exceptions to the gentleman's remarks, I wanted these figures to go into the report as they actually existed ten years back, showing the distribution and magnitude of the dairy industry.

Now, taking the Year Book for 1906, I want to show the increase of dairy cattle over the increase of meat cattle, or cattle, I suppose, kept and raised for beef purposes. The Year Book for 1909 shows the number of meat cattle in the United States to be 69,080,000. That, as I understand the reading of the term in that book, means all the cattle. This is an increase of 2 per cent. over ten years before, while the increase of dairy cattle alone is 27 per cent., consequently showing a marked decrease in other cattle than dairy cows and a large increase in the dairy cows.

Now, I can illustrate the growth of the dairy industry in one of the newer States by taking my own State, Minnesota. Ten years ago, or prior to the passage of this law which is now in dispute, Minnesota made from her creameries 63,000,000 pounds of butter, which sold for $12,000,000, for which the farmers received $12,000,000. The product for 1909 reaches approximately 100,000,000 pounds, valued at $28,000,000. I want to say in this connection, Mr. Chairman, that this increase in the dairy industry in that State is the result of the changing in the newer parts of the State from exclusive grain raising to dairying, which they found to be a necessity in order to conserve the fertility of the soil. Ten years ago dairying in our State was confined to the southeastern portion, or the older portion of the State. Along the western border, along the Dakota line, and in the Red River Valley there was practically nothing. In fact, the farmers scarcely kept cows enough to produce their own dairy products, and in the Red River Valley I have heard stories about cows being so infrequent that they used them for guide boards.

I heard an attorney for the Great Northern Railroad, who has done a great deal to develop dairying and stock raising in that northern country, and who was quite a farmer himself up there, say that he remembers the time in the early history of that country when he would be directed to a certain point where there was a man who had a cow. "You go in a certain direction and you will find a cow staked out, and then you go in another direction and you will find another cow." They have a common saying there that they used the cows for guideboards because they were so scarce. Now the dairying in the valley of the Red River of the North is a great industry. The same condition prevails in the Dakotas. In South Dakota ten years ago there was practically no dairying, and west of the Missouri River it was a range country. Now that section west of the Missouri River, as of course you know, has been opened to settlement and there is dairying and creameries, and the dairying industry now extends to the foot of the Black Hills.

Now, in the same census report, page 159, table 148, we find the same report, with the exception that there are farms reporting other cows to the number of 979,234. The inference must be drawn from that, although there is no explanation given, that these cows were kept for the express purpose of raising beef cattle, and the cows were not milked, as is the custom on the ranges and in some, I believe, of the southern corn-growing States. The cow is kept for the chance of the calf. That is, the calf is allowed to run with the cow, and milk is not used for commercial purposes, and on those farms there were 11,592,142 cows.

Now, according to the decrease of meat cattle and the increase of dairy cows, as above stated, it would plainly indicate that those conditions are fast disappearing where a farm kept a cow for the chance of a calf, and no doubt this mostly comes from the range country. These figures go to show the importance of the dairy industry to the agriculture of the North.

Now, here we have 4,514,210 farmers who are keeping dairy cows, or keeping cows in a greater or less number for milk purposes; and I want to say that they are all interested in this proposition which is now before your committee. I might say they are intensely interested in it, because they feel that it is of vital importance that their industry should be protected from imposition or from substitutes which would eventually drive them out of business.

GENUINE BUTTER AND THE COUNTERFEIT.

Statement of Mr. Thomas Sharpless, President of the Pennsylvania Pure Butter Protective Association, before the Committee on Agriculture, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C., on the oleomargarine question.

I am a farmer and make butter myself. As I understand it, the discussion that has been had here this morning has had no bearing on the question at issue at all. The question at issue is whether or not oleomargarine shall be sold as a fraud in imitation of butter. That is the question and that is the object of all the bills that I have seen introduced, and I have seen them all, to enable the oleomargarine people to color their oleomargarine in imitation of butter, the color of butter, and then sell it for butter in the end.

In my position, in connection with the Butter Protective Association of Pennsylvania, I have found that 85 per cent. of all the samples bought, and they were bought as butter, upon analysis were proved to be oleomargarine colored in imitation of butter.

All we want—and I do not intend to occupy much of your time—you to do in the amendment of the present Grout law is to make it impossible for the manufacturers of oleomargarine to color it so it shall be sold as butter. We think it is unjust and unfair that we men who make an honest, straightforward article—that is, butter which is made from cows and not made of anything else at all—should have to compete with an article that is a fraud. I do not mean to say oleomargarine is not fit to eat, because there are many grades of it that are good enough to eat. But if it is colored in imitation of butter and sold as butter to the extent of 85 per cent. in the State of Pennsylvania, what is the condition over the rest of the nation? We have a law that is tolerably well enforced in the State of Pennsylvania.

Now, I think one of the strongest feelings in the American people is what our ex-President called the "square deal." We are willing that every man should do what he pleases providing it does not interfere with his neighbors. There is a sense of honesty at large in the community that gives a chance to every man to do his business in his own way providing he does not interfere with his neighbors. Now, the dairy industry is a very large industry in the United States, and it is cut into very badly by the fraudulent sale of oleomargarine colored in imitation of butter. If they will sell their oleomargarine as oleomargarine, we won't say a word. I have not a word to say about that at all; I am perfectly willing they should do that.

Mr. Stanley. Whether colored or uncolored?

Mr. Sharpless. Now, the only way the United States Government can control the colored class is by taxing it; it is an internal revenue question with the Government. I was one of the committee that went to call on Capers when Capers was the Collector of Internal Revenue, and he told us that they sold the stamps in bulk and the manufacturers put them on just as they pleased. I have bought yellow oleomargarine, as yellow as that and yellower (indicating samples on committee table) out of a box that bore the United States revenue stamp of a quarter of a cent, and the United States was cheated out of 9¾ cents a pound on it.

Now it has been mentioned here that it might be freely colored or uncolored; the only way the United States Government can control it at all is through the Internal Revenue Department—the collector of taxes.

I do not mean to occupy your time at all; I only want to present the view to you of the absolute dishonesty of selling the colored oleomargarine as butter. I have examined every one of these bills which have been presented to Congress, and I want to ask you, on behalf of our association and the State Grange of Pennsylvania, to pass the McHenry amendment to the Grout law—the McHenry and Penrose bills. Gentlemen, I am obliged to you.

A LESSON FROM WISCONSIN'S TWENTY-NINE YEARS' EXPERIENCE IN EFFORTS TO REGULATE THE SALE OF OLEOMARGARINE FOR WHAT IT IS.

By J. Q. Emery, Dairy and Food Commissioner.

Discussion before the Committee on Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Wisconsin was one of the first States, if not the first State, to undertake to regulate by law the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine. The first of such laws was enacted in 1881. It was merely a label law and proved ineffective.

In 1885, the Legislature of Wisconsin again grappled with the problem; but the resulting law proved ineffective in preventing the sale of oleomargarine as butter.

In 1889, another effort was made by the Legislature to prevent the fraudulent sale of oleomargarine as butter.

To show the results of all these efforts of the Legislature for a period of eight years to prevent by label laws the fraudulent sale of oleomargarine as butter, I quote from the report of the State Dairy and Food Commissioner for 1890 as follows:

"We should strip oleomargarine of its power, and that can only be done by obliging manufacturers to make it look like itself and not like butter. Butter has worked for all these years to make for itself a market and a demand. Now that they are established, it should not be robbed by an imitation. The attack has but just begun. No corner of the State is too remote for its presence, no table so humble, no dining-room so grand, no lumber camp so rough that oleomargarine, with its mellow name, will not walk upon and into, with a deceitful bow and brazen smile, with the claim that its name is butter."

The Legislature of 1891 again sought to remedy the fraud by the enactment of a new, elaborate label law. After this law had been on trial for four years, Dairy and Food Commissioner H. C. Adams, in his biennial report, stated:

"The law was not only violated by the sale of unlawful packages by grocerymen to customers ignorant of their character, but it was also violated when purchasers of butterine bought the article for what it was and then placed it upon the tables of restaurants, boarding houses and hotels for the consumption of guests who supposed they were eating butter."

Thus fourteen years of strenuous effort to drive the fraud out of the oleomargarine business by label laws had proven comparatively ineffective, and oleomargarine continued with brazen effrontery to masquerade through the State as butter.

Having by fourteen years of experience learned the ineffectiveness of label laws to do away with the fraud, the Legislature of 1895 determined to make the color of oleomargarine its own open declaration of its lawful or unlawful character, and enacted a law making it a misdemeanor to sell in the State oleomargarine that was "in imitation of yellow butter," but permitted the sale of oleomargarine free from coloration or ingredient that caused it to look like butter, and in such form as to advise the customer of its true character."

In the administration of that law, Commissioner Adams brought prosecutions against dealers who sold oleomargarine "in imitation of yellow butter," secured convictions of the same and drove the unlawful product from the Wisconsin market. But lawful oleomargarine in abundance was sold upon our markets and at oleomargarine prices. This law as administered by Commissioner Adams succeeded in its purpose.

In May, 1902, Commissioner Adams resigned to become a candidate for Congress. There followed a vacancy in the office of Dairy and Food Commissioner until December 24th. Meanwhile, the national law of 1902 had taken effect, and the State had been flooded with oleomargarine in semblance of yellow butter, made such by means of the selection of material, other material being available. Prosecutions followed, resulting in the sustaining and interpreting of the law by the State Supreme Court. Since that decision, the Wisconsin market has been freed from oleomargarine in imitation of yellow butter, and lawful oleomargarine has taken its place in great abundance.

During the two weeks from April 25th to May 7th, 1910, an investigation or inspection was made of oleomargarine on the Wisconsin market. That inspection confirmed what had been before known, that practically all of the oleomargarine sold on the market in Wisconsin is of the kind described by Mr. Jelke as white. Only one dealer of the sixty-three investigated or inspected was handling oleomargarine that could in any way be regarded as in semblance of yellow butter. I have here samples of the kinds found on the market.

Sixty-three dealers were selling, according to their own statement, 6,758 pounds of oleomargarine a week. These are believed to represent the average of sales in the State. At the same rate, the 1,651 dealers in oleomargarine in Wisconsin were selling 177,000 pounds of oleomargarine a week, and practically all of it was white. The same dealers were selling a little more than twice that amount of butter. The wholesale price of the oleomargarine varied from 12½ cents to 17 cents a pound. The retail price of the oleomargarine varied from 18 cents to 23½ cents a pound. The wholesale price of the butter varied from 29 cents to 32 cents a pound. The average per cent. of profit of oleomargarine on the wholesale price was 24.9. The average per cent. of profit on the wholesale price of butter was 10.6, that is, the average per cent. of profit on the wholesale price of the oleomargarine was found to be 2.35 times the average per cent. profit on the wholesale price of butter.

Under the Wisconsin law, as enforced, the laboring man or any other man who wants oleomargarine can now get it, and at oleomargarine prices. And if he wants butter, he is sure to get butter and not oleomargarine at butter prices. This is the end sought by legislation on this subject.

THE DAIRYMEN AND THEIR CRITICS.

Statement of Mr. S. B. Shilling, of Chicago, Illinois, before the Committee on Agriculture, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C., on the oleomargarine question.

Gentlemen, members of the committee, I wish to crave your indulgence for just a few minutes in the discussion of two or three phases of the question which have been injected into this controversy. The first feature I wish to discuss is this: The dairymen have been charged repeatedly that they are unfair, that they have mercenary motives, that they are influenced by a moneyed consideration entirely in their efforts to retain upon the statute books a law taxing a so-called pure food product. Now, Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, I wish just for a few minutes, in contradiction to our attitude as dairymen, to call your attention to the time prior to that of the passage of the original law; also to refer you back to the year 1902, the fiscal year ending July 1st. At that time there were one hundred and twenty-six and one-half million pounds of oleomargarine placed upon the market. The next fiscal year following the passage of this law, when the law was supposed to be good, and not in the condition refered to by our worthy commissioner in his argument before you day before yesterday, in such a condition that you could drive a four-horse team through it and not touch it; but when it was understood that the law was placed upon the statute books for the purpose of suppressing the sale of the product by compelling the sale of it for what it was, the output of the product dropped that year to less than 50,000,000 pounds. And it seems to me, gentlemen, in all candor, that that of itself is sufficient evidence of the fact that three-quarters of the product that was sold up to that time was sold as butter. This was charged repeatedly during the hearing at that time. It was the condition that prevailed up to that time. That is what prompted the dairymen to come before this committee and Congress and ask for some kind of restrictive legislation that would protect them in the sale of their product. But, gentlemen, when the dairymen are charged with a selfish motive in asking for this law, how is it that the oleomargarine manufacturers and dealers, or any one connected with the sale of it, has the right to charge us with selfish motives in the protection of our industry when the same identical motive must have been the motive that prompted them in the manufacture and sale of their product? But, understand, I am not standing before you to find fault with that, because it is a laudable motive and a business condition that prevails in every branch of our government and business to-day.

Now, with that I dismiss this subject and go to the next one. The next is the cry that has been raised upon the poor man's butter. It seems to me that if there is a part of this controversy upon which there is no foundation in fact, it is this cry as to the poor man's butter; and I am going to give you the reasons for this as briefly as I possibly can. And again I wish to refer you to the statement of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue made before you a day or two ago, when he told you that the coming year would undoubtedly see about 130,000,000 pounds of oleomargarine produced and placed upon the market. At the same time he told us that less than 3 per cent. of this amount paid the 10 cent tax.

Now, Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, in all candor and honesty, I would like to ask you how it would be possible for the poor man to suffer when less than 3 per cent. of the product, if the product was sold for what it is, in its natural condition—how it is possible for the poor man to suffer as a result of a 10 cent tax?

There is one more statement that I want to make to you gentlemen, and that is this—and I am very nearly ready to close. I wish to stand before you and say this: There is no commercial value in colored oleomargarine to-day. Now, I want to make myself plain in saying this.

The supply and demand does not regulate the price that the consumer pays for colored oleomargarine. Neither does the cost of the original constituents that enter into that product. The price of oleomargarine to the consumer, of colored—now, understand, I am speaking of colored; I may not have made that plain, but so far I have not touched anything else—the price of colored oleomargarine is regulated, and the consumer pays the price for it according to the price of creamery butter. As evidence of that I want to say to you that during the short period of time that butter this winter went to the price of 40 cents a pound, retail, in the city of Chicago, the price of oleomargarine, notwithstanding the fact that there was no material increase in the price of the constituents of which it is composed, advanced from 30 to 35 cents a pound. Now, Mr. Chairman, my idea in presenting that to you in this way is this, that if the laboring man —I will not say the laboring man, but if the poor man—thoroughly understood the situation to-day, he would realize the fact that the only protection that he has got is in the color of it.

With all due consideration for the gentleman that appeared before you the other day, while he stated his position, and I also believe was honest in every single statement he made, still at the same time I believe that the 10 cent tax had been held so persistently before him, that if he had been allowed to go on and make his statement, and if it had not been for the adroit questions of the gentleman, he would have confessed before you before he sat down that he had never heard of the quarter of a cent tax at all. Now, Mr. Chairman, I believe, as I said before, that the only protection that the poor man has got is in the color of the product. You can go into any retail establishment in Chicago to-day, and I take it that it is the same the country over, and the price of oleomargarine is regulated just according to the color of it. With that statement I wish to pass from that and say this: The dairymen wish this protection; but I want to stand before you and emphasize the fact that there is a class of people, ten to one, that is entitled to the protection, and that is the consuming public. I believe that they have not received the consideration in this matter that they are entitled to from the very beginning. They are the people that actually suffer as a result of this, and I wish to close with this statement again to you, because I believe this as firmly as that I am standing before you to-day, that the only protection the poor man has got is the absolute elimination of all coloring matter from oleomargarine. I thank you.

SOME RECENT JUDGMENTS IN FEDERAL COURTS.

More than fifteen hundred sacks of salt recently shipped by the Inland Crystal Salt Company, Salt Lake City, Utah, to the State of Washington, were seized and condemned by the Federal Government, acting under an order of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of the State of Washington. The offense of the shipping company consisted in so labeling the salt as to convey the impression to the average purchaser that it was manufactured in Liverpool, England, whereas it was manufactured in Utah. The confiscated goods were returned to the company after it had paid the costs and given a sufficient bond conditioned that the salt should not be sold or disposed of contrary to the provisions of the national food and drugs law.

A Cincinnati man who was detected in adulterating and misbranding lemon flavor was taken into the United States District Court for the Southern District of Ohio. He plead nolo contendere and was fined $5 and the costs. His offense consisted in labeling his product thus: "This lemon flavoring is made of double proof spirits, distilled water, and the best oil of lemon, with a trace of harmless coloring," whereas in fact the product was a terpeneless extract of lemon artificially colored and contained no oil of lemon.

Occasionally the Federal Government comes in contact with a vender of alleged cream from which the butter fat has been removed. Two such were gathered up not long ago in Maryland towns for having sold cream from which the butter fact had been removed. The offenses were committed in the city of Washington and the Police Court of the District of Columbia assessed each offender the costs and a fine of $10. Another enterprising vender of milk in the same city was fined $10 for mixing considerable quantities of water with the milk delivered to his patrons. Some persons have an idea that after the first offense of this sort the guilty party should be compelled to pay a much heavier fine.

The United States District Court for the Western District of Kentucky recently assessed a vinegar company doing business in Paducah the sum of $25 and costs for selling a dilute solution of acetic acid and some foreign material containing reducing sugars, under the name of "Pure Apple Cider Vinegar." A similar fine was imposed upon a Chicago company for shipping adulterated vinegar into other States. In cases like this the offenders should be punished to the full extent of the law, for they are guilty of the most unscrupulous conduct.

It cost a Chicago tea and coffee company $50 and the costs of prosecution for having shipped into the State of Montana an article labeled "Black Pepper." It was charged in the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois, and admitted by the defendant company, that the product was not "black pepper," as claimed by the label, but a mixture of ground black pepper and wheat, capsicum and fruit shells. Men or companies that do such things in order to increase their profits are very lucky when they escape with a fine of $50.

The Syrup Company, doing business in Illinois, which entered a plea of guilty in the same Federal Court when charged with falsely labeling a product as "Maple Syrup," got off with a fine of only $10 and the costs. It had been peddling a mixture of maple syrup and cane syrup around the country under a maple syrup label. Because this company deceived its patrons, contrary to the provisions of law, although there was nothing injurious in its product, it was fined.

Another Chicago firm that got into trouble with the federal authorities for deceiving its patrons is engaged in the cheese trade. It was charged in the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois with having violated law in that it had shipped into the States of New York and Missouri a food product labeled "Blue Ribbon Brand Neufchatel Cheese," whereas the product was adulterated and misbranded. It was charged that the said cheeses were made of skimmed milk, whereas they should have been made from whole milk, and that the fatty substances of whole milk had been abstracted, and was misbranded in that it was labeled "Blue Ribbon Brand Neufchatel Cheese," which statement was false, misleading and calculated to mislead and deceive the purchaser. The offending company admitted its guilt and paid a fine of $10 and the costs upon each court in the indictment.

The agents of the Federal Food and Drugs Bureau of the Agricultural Department are manifesting considerable activity in the pursuit and punishment of the manufacturers who adulterate and misbrand certain drugs, flavoring extracts and similar articles. Among the latest lot of notices of judgment issues in detailing the fate of unscrupulous manufacturers who have misbranded essence of wintergreen and various other articles the proper use of which depends upon the purity of the article purchased. On the whole, the Washington authorities are doing fairly well these days, and the results of their work will probably be very beneficial.

COATING CHOCOLATE WITH GUMS IS FORBIDDEN.

The following important decision has been rendered by the National Board of Food and Drug Inspection:

"The Board of Food and Drug Inspection has carefully considered the evidence which has been presented at various times respecting the practice of coating chocolate and other confections with shellac and other gums.

"The board is of the opinion that it is not a proper proceeding under the provisions of the Food and Drugs Act. It is evident that such coating will not only conceal inferiority, but it appears further that, as a rule, the gums are dissolved in alcohol. One man in giving evidence before the board stated that, in his opinion, there was no objection to wood alcohol as a solvent. In dipping confections into an alcoholic solution of a gum a certain quantity of the alcohol must necessarily permeate the product. Evidence is adduced showing that the product is not submitted to any subsequent process of heating whereby the traces of alcohol could be removed. Although only mere traces of alcohol may remain, the addition of these substances, and especially of wood alcohol, to a confection is specifically prohibited by the act. Evidence is also in the possession of the board to show that a large number of the manufacturers either never have employed this method or have discontinued it, and that goods can be, and are, made and sold in all quantities with no difficulty without the use of shellac or other gums. Evidence further shows that one of the reasons for adding the coating is that the goods may be held for a longer time. The exposure of confections for a long while before use is not advisable nor desirable."

The decision is signed by all the members of the Board of Food and Drug Inspection, Messrs. H. W. Wiley, F. L. Dunlap and George P. McCabe, and is approved by W. M. Hays, acting Secretary of Agriculture.

Consumers of chocolate and other confections will be glad to learn that their favorite confections are no longer to be treated to coatings of gums of any sort. They prefer the candy pure and they especially object to its saturation with alcoholic products of any quality. The fact that the practice now forbidden may be used to conceal inferiority or to deceive the purchaser into the belief that old goods are fresh, is another strong argument in favor of the action of the board.

The Federal and the State Governments will never reach perfection by way of pure food regulation until they have adopted the principle of absolute honesty in the regulations affecting the preparation of articles of food. To forbid the coating of caramels with any substance that enables an unscrupulous manufacturer to use inferior materials or to palm off old goods for new, is to take a step in the right direction. The rule applied to caramels should be applied to all articles of food put on sale in our country. It is greatly needed and its general enforcement would do nothing but good.

THE BABY DURING THE HEATED TERM.

While the Bulletin is not a health journal, its special field being the discussion of food problems and the narration of facts in connection with the work of the Dairy and Food Bureau, it feels that it never exceeds its privileges or goes beyond the bounds of duty when it refers to the child in the house and its care. The preservation of infantile life may mean a great benefit to the State twenty-five or thirty years hence.

July and August have always been bad months for the baby in the United States. There have been summers when the mortality among the little ones, especially in the tenement districts of the larger cities, has been simply appalling. Scores of babies have been stricken down by summer complaints of one sort or another and homes have been bereft. Nobody knows of what virile force the State has been deprived. Nobody knows what potential public benefactors have been cut off before their time.

Recent years have marked a decided improvement in this respect in some of the American States. Pennsylvania has been the beneficiary of improved conditions due to increased sanitary knowledge. Last summer but one Pennsylvania city showed no improvement over previous years in this respect. Taken as a whole, the State's infant mortality bill was greatly decreased. The hope is cherished that the future will show continued improvement in this vitally important matter.

For its protection from the shafts of death the baby must depend very largely upon the wisdom of its mother. It has been proved very clearly that unwise or ignorant mothers are responsible for a great proportion of the deaths among children. The little one should be guarded carefully from day to day. This is asking a good deal of the busy mother; sometimes she cannot measure up to the demand. Too many other matters demand her attention. But wherever possible the mother should look to the food and the clothing of her baby. Some day the State will help the working mother to protect her child.

As the child's food consists of milk, the mother should see that the supply taken in for its use is pure when purchased and is kept out of the way of contamination after it has been purchased. She should take pains with the clothing of the child during the heated term, and she should see that it is not exposed to the fierce rays of the sun. Proper precautions in these respects will greatly reduce the infant mortality of any community and prove of immense advantage to the future of the State.

CONSTANTLY BRIGHTENING PROSPECTS.

The Dairy and Food Bureau of the State of Pennsylvania exists for the protection of the household. It was created in obedience to the command of law and its specific duty is to enforce the laws which have been enacted for the protection of the family life against the assaults of impure or adulterated food. It prefers to do its work by way of education rather than by the arrest and punishment of citizens. For that reason its efforts are largely directed to the business of interesting manufacturers, wholesalers, retailers and consumers in the matter.

Much attention has been devoted to the milk supply during recent years. It is more generally recognized now than ever before that the condition of the milk supply of any community largely determines the death rate in that community and especially the infantile death rate. Sanitary science has done much to enlighten dairymen and their patrons concerning the danger lurking in impure milk. It has contributed to the general knowledge in this direction and it has likewise shown many hitherto ignorant ones how easily the purest milk in the world may be contaminated by contiguity to some poisonous substance.

The laws have been modified in the direction of a much closer supervision of the farm and the dairy. State laws concerning the care of milk and of cows have been supplemented by the rules of local boards of health. Many dairymen, once convinced that they hold the lives of their customers in their hands, have voluntarily resorted to such precautions as the law requires or as may seem necessary to them. They have done this cheerfully and because they believed it right. The quality of the milk sold in this Commonwealth has greatly improved during the last decade and the result has been a very gratifying decrease in infant mortality.

What is true of the dairyman is also true of the more reputable manufacturer and grocer. Men who pride themselves upon the purity of their goods and whose reputation has been established by years of faithful service have actively and efficiently supplemented the efforts of the Dairy and Food Bureau to drive impure food out of the market. Many housekeepers are likewise interested in the matter, as they well may be, and their vigilance has done much to make the enforcement of the law an easy matter. On the whole, the situation is very encouraging, although it is still far from perfect. And the future is bright with promise of still better things for both dealer and consumer, not to mention the manufacturer.

"HOLLOW HORN" AND "WOLF IN THE TAIL."

Our erudite friend, the editor of Hoard's Dairyman, furnishes his readers some information concerning certain mythical diseases which had considerable of a run in Pennsylvania when the writer was a small boy. Possibly they still exist in certain sections of the country. Indeed, they must, for the article we are about to quote, in part, was written in answer to an earnest appeal for exact information concerning it. Here is what Hoard's says:

"The belief in such mythical ailments as 'wolf in the tail' and 'hollow horn,' like belief in the signs of the zodiac as having influence upon mundane affairs, is a relic of barbarous times when innocent old women were burned at the stake as witches. The horns of all adult cattle are hollow, just as the incisor teeth of all cattle are loose of necessity so that they shall not lacerate the hard palate above. There is a soft, spongy place in the tail of every adult cow, steer or bull, and it is normal, apparently intended to make use of the switch free and perfect, and not in any instance or possible condition the symptom of anything wrong with the cow.

"Polled cattle suffer from the diseases to which the term 'hollow horn' is applied by ignorant empirics, and a tailless cow likewise suffers from the trouble of which the 'wolf' or 'worm' in the tail is supposed to be the cause. We once knew an old quack who prescribed whiskey freely for such mythical troubles, possibly for the reason that as whiskey comes from the worm, it also may go for the worm. He also maintained a burial ground for animals and owned a team and wagon for hauling off the carcases.

"'Wolf's teeth' are another mythical source of disease. They never cause eye diseases in horses. They are entirely harmless and are simply the vestiges of the seventh molar teeth (anterior premolars) of the prehistoric horse."

There was a time when Editor Hoard would have been excommunicated from the Noble Society of Cow Owners for advancing such heterodox doctrines. Fifty years ago it was generally believed that cows were liable to "hollow horn" and various remedies were prescribed and applied. One sovereign cure was produced by boring into the horn with a gimlet, beginning at the point. Some persons were sure that plan worked wonders, restoring the cow to perfect health and curing the trouble with the milk supply. Such is the power of the human imagination.

WHY FOODSTUFFS ARE HIGH.

The Bureau of Statistics gives out information that the number of food animals in the United States have decreased 5,000,000 since the year 1901, while, on the other hand, the number of consumers have increased 12,000,000 in the same time. "Without going any further," says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, "here is one great cause for the advance in meat prices. Probably the expansion in the production of gold accounts for some of the advance, as it does in that of other things. But the falling off in the supply and the increase in the demand will be sufficient to explain much of the upward movement in meat prices. Probably, in some degree, a like cause can be cited for the increase in prices for other kinds of food. Everybody knows that corn and wheat production has remained practically stationary for many years, while the gain in population has been at the rate of 1,500,000 a year. It is doubtless the same with the vegetable crops, which do not figure in the reports of the Bureau of Statistics. The tariff has had but little to do with the increased cost of living. Natural causes, as here cited, are largely responsible for this. Extravagance also contributes to the expansion in the housekeeping bills."

THE DEADLY LITTLE FLY.

The war against the pernicious fly is being waged with increased vigor this year.

In almost every town and city boards of health have issued instructive circulars.

Some of the more enterprising of the cheap theatres have come to the aid of the health officials.

They are displaying films dealing with the fly in most of his varied relations to the human race.

The pictures thus shown are by no means beautiful, but they are highly educational and illuminative.

The theatre people are entitled to the thanks of every friend of good health. They are certainly doing much good.

For it would be very difficult for the most ignorant of housekeepers to feel indifferent after seeing a few of them.

Let the good work go on. Presently the American people will be sufficiently educated to practically exterminate the fly.

In the meantime, it is the duty of grocers to strictly observe the law and the rules and regulations made thereunder.

Those regulations require that all fruits, vegetables, butters or other articles of food shall be kept free of flies or other insects.

During past years too little attention has been paid to this requirement. Consumers should insist upon rigid obedience.

It has been proved quite conclusively not only that the fly is born in filth but also that its favorite haunt is filth.

It has been shown that many a protracted case of fever has been contracted from the uninvited visitations of the fly.

It is very certain that many a domestic calamity, resulting in the death of a loved one has been caused by this miniature tiger.

Well might the fly, small and harmless as it seems, be compared to the assassin who lurks in the dark places seeking your life.

Those who cry out against the indifference or the folly which permits the fly to continue his devastations are not fanatics.

On the contrary, they are the best friends of the community because they would arouse their neighbors to the necessity of action.

The most intelligent men and women, headed by the physicians and the health boards are pushing this fight with great energy and enthusiasm.

They are entitled to the active aid and the intelligent co-operation of every man and woman who reads this Bulletin. Shall they have it?

When this little but malignant pest has been exterminated, as it may be, there will be a notable decline in the death rate in every American town. What are we going to do?

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

Obedience to law is the duty of manufacturer and vender.

Davy Crockett's motto was a good one: "Be sure you're right, then go ahead."

The housekeeper who keeps her eyes on the labels is a great law-enforcer.

The grocer who keeps his place looking attractive is a wise man and is always repaid for his pains.

The average consumer has an increasing loathing of slovenliness, either in the kitchen or the grocery.

Some day the sentiment of the consumer will be so strong against counterfeits that manufacturers will leave them severely alone.

There is a movement on foot in some quarters to have the principle of the pure food laws applied to other lines of business.

Public indifference did much to produce food adulteration and is helping to maintain the same.

Nine times out of ten there is something decidedly wrong about an article that is phenomenally cheap.

In most of the States excellent food laws are in operation. They are enforced with more or less wisdom and, in conjunction with the Federal Food and Drugs Act, are doing good work.

The marked improvement in food products during the past few years—we mean in their purity—has tended to produce better health, a marked decline in the death rate and a decided increase in the life of a generation.

Sometimes the consumer stands in his own light. He is unable to realize that the pure food laws exist for his benefit alone and actually criticises the State for protecting him.

In any question concerning the harmlessness of certain food experiments the safest plan is to stick to the customs of our ancestors.

It cannot be too strongly emphasized that the purchaser of food products has a right to the precise article he asks for and believes he is getting.

In this matter of food protection it is necessary to indulge in much repetition—line upon line, line upon line, precept upon precept, precept upon precept, here a little and there a little, a word in season and a word out of season, a continued and tireless presentation of the important facts in the case.

There is now an effective law upon the statute books prohibiting the adulteration of so-called "soft drinks." It is well for dealers in these summer beverages to remember this fact.

Men, women and children are liberal patrons of the summer beverages. They have a right to legal protection and the State means to give it to them.

The State holds that the consumer has a legal right to the precise article which he supposes the dealer is selling him and for which he pays.

That is the reason laws have been enacted regulating the manufacture of food and drink and requiring the label to specify the nature of the contents of each package.

During recent years conscienceless venders of summer drinks manufactured lemonade out of acid and endangered the lives of their patrons, most of whom were children living in the tenement quarters of the larger cities.

Some investigations by the Dairy and Food Division in former years showed that the lives of the people were endangered by the reckless conduct of the less scrupulous of the venders of summer drinks. Hence the agitation for the enactment of a proper law, an agitation ultimately crowned with success.

Since the law prohibiting the adulteration of soft drinks went into effect there has been a decided improvement in the quality of the drink offered for sale in the tenement quarters. Nevertheless, there is still room for improvement.

It is surprising that any man would be reckless enough to imperil the health or even the lives of innocent persons for the sake of making money, but the history of the world shows that such persons have always lived and were never more numerous than at the present moment. The law does well when it seeks them out and punishes them for their crimes against humanity.

During the summer the agents of the Dairy and Food Bureau will be on the lookout. It is their duty to vigilantly enforce the laws relating to food and drink. They will do what is possible for honest men to do by way of bringing to punishment those who disregard the provisions of the law regulating the manufacture and sale of non-alcoholic beverages. We are confident the efforts of the bureau will be supplemented by the drastic action of the courts and that the guilty will not fail of punishment.

The State of Pennsylvania still needs a law prohibiting the manufacture and sale of alcoholic beverages. Perhaps the coming legislative session will supply the lack.

Keep your eye on the labels, Madame Housekeeper.

The popular prejudice against food adulteration is increasing.

Most of the dealers are anxious to provide nothing but pure products for their customers

---

The dishonest manufacturer is becoming very lonely with the passing of the years and the increase of enlightenment.

Once it was possible to sin ignorantly against the health of the consuming public, but that is rather difficult nowadays.

The progress of knowledge concerning the ultimate effect of adulterants and preservatives has been very rapid during the past few years.

Changed methods of manufacture led to the adoption of obnoxious and very dangerous practices some years ago. These practices produced agitation and led to the adoption of pure food laws and the creation of Dairy and Food Bureaus.

TIGHT BINDING

Once upon a time the housekeeper accepted what the grocer sent her and asked no questions. Now she looks at the label and if there is anything suspicious about the article purchased she is likely to call in the pure food agent and have the article analyzed.

There has been a remarkable improvement in the quality of the milk consumed by the average family. Once upon a time much sickness resulted from the use of tainted milk. Now the situation has greatly changed for the better.

The housekeeper should never forget that it is her duty to guard against the possibility of milk becoming tainted in the home after it has been purchased from the milkman. It is highly sensitive to surrounding influences, a fact which every housekeeper should constantly remember.

Many a serious sickness due to tainted milk has been caused by carelessness in the home after the milkman had delivered his product pure and sweet. Just a bit of thoughtlessness has done the business. Nine times out of ten the milkman is wrongfully accused under such circumstances. Don't forget that the housekeeper has a duty to perform as well as the milkman.

The community owes a debt of gratitude to the modern milkman which it would be extremely difficult to pay in full. He goes to a great deal of pains to protect the health of his customers, cordially co-operating with the authorities in the effort to prevent sickness or death, once too common as a result of milk adulteration.

The second annual meeting of the Oyster Growers' and Dealers' Association of North America was held in Norfolk, Va., on May 17-18. The Oysterman and Fisherman, published at Hampton, declares that "It was a great meeting." The proceedings seem to have been more than ordinarily interesting, many questions of great practical interest to the trade having been discussed.

Dr. Wiley thinks that many foods are made better by cold storage. But he doesn't believe any article should be put in cold storage more than nine months. The great objection raised by some folks to this modern invention is that it increases the price of food. Many are convinced that it likewise changes the nature of certain articles of food so as to make them injurious to consumers.

The Oysterman and Fisherman for June declares that the Virginia pound nets the last month have made records hitherto unknown. The herring salting works have been run to their full capacity. Millions have been thrown back and myriads have been found on the shores dead.

Those who are interested in food topics and the capacity of the stomach may be interested in hearing that they have a baby up north which is six months old and consumes fifty pounds of codfish a day. It is a baby walrus.

Rumor says that a certain professor in one of the eastern colleges has perfected a new food purifier in the form of a violet ray which speedily removes all impurities. The general introduction of this modern marvel will make the work of the average Dairy and Food Commissioner and his agents very light.

Report says that the spring catch of fish all along our coasts was phenomenally large. The Oysterman and Fisherman declares that this has had a depressive effect upon the high prices for meat. It adds: "If man cannot regulate the trust in life's commodities, the Almighty will. Fish is the poor man's food. Let the dealer remember this and try to distribute the output so as to keep prices where a poor man can buy. It is the poor man that makes the price, after all." That last sentence is a little enigmatic.

Three shipments of eggs aggregating 4,700 pounds were fed to the fish of North river recently, because they were antique. The idea was that the age of the eggs wouldn't be noticed by the fish and that the new food would bring them to maturity more rapidly.

The city of Frankfort has not only a municipal fish market, but also supplies its housewives with fish cookery books free of charge. That is a sort of socialism to which few families should seriously object. As the publication from which the foregoing information is gleaned remarks: "The best fish may be badly cooked and thus the innocent fish gets a bad reputation."

Speaking of the artificial breeding of fish, a great expert says we ought not to be content with doing what nature has done unaided, but must surpass the achievements of nature. We must fill up the gaps caused by years of excessive fishing.

Several of the foregoing items have been secured from the June number of the Oysterman and Fisherman, now published at Hampton, Va., the first issue of the publication which has come to the office of the Bulletin. It is devoted entirely to the subjects indicated by its title and the amount of information a single number contains is certainly very creditable to the energetic and industrious editor. The magazine is soon to be removed to an eastern city, but we don't see how its text could be improved.

While cheese production is still popular in New Zealand it does not make much headway in Australia, declares an Australian correspondent of Hoard's Dairyman.

While Denmark exported much less pork during the year 1908-09 than in the preceding year, the cash receipts were about the same, owing to the decided advance in prices which were from 15 to 20 per cent. higher than ever before.

The International Dairy Federation has offered a prize of 500 francs, about $100, for the best work upon the comparative nutritive value of raw and cooked milk.

It is the opinion of the sub-committee on the dissemination of bovine tuberculosis of the International Tuberculosis Commission, that bovine tuberculosis is spread largely through the introduction of tuberculosis cattle into sound herds, by the feeding of calves with infected milk or milk products, by exposing sound animals to infected ones at fairs or other cattle shows, and by exposing them to infected cars or stables. There are other ways in which now and then it is possible that an animal may become infected, but the means of dissemination mentioned are the ones to be guarded against in formulating efficient methods of control.

The State law is very tender with the grocer who makes the slightest effort to obey its requirements or to take advantage of its guaranty feature.

There is not the slightest reason why any retail dealer in Pennsylvania should get into trouble with the State. The law takes great pains to protect him from the consequences of selling misbranded or adulterated food.

When a grocer in Pennsylvania buys from a manufacturer or wholesaler the law advises him to secure a guaranty certifying to the purity of the goods. When he takes this simple precaution he is free from punishment if it be found that he has been deceived. He is simply required to cease selling such goods.

There are retail dealers who have ignored the law. They have never taken the trouble to read it. They have never asked any questions. Or if they know what it requires they have chosen to take the risk. When such dealers get into trouble for disregarding the law are they entitled to sympathy? Should the State's servants be abused for bringing them into court?

Isn't it a singular thing that so many persons plunge into serious trouble through downright carelessness and inattention? One would suppose that every dealer in food products in the State would be swift to take advantage of the guaranty provision of the food act. Under former acts the retail venders justly complained that they were held responsible for the sins of the manufacturers. Because of their complaint that this wasn't fair the State provided for their protection. Yet some continue to go their reckless way, neglecting to take a guaranty and sometimes falling into the hands of the law.

It is not the fault of the Dairy and Food Division if negligent dealers find themselves facing fine or imprisonment or both. It is not the fault of the legislature or of the laws which that legislature enacted. It is not the fault of the courts which exist to interpret and enforce law. Nobody is to blame but the dealers themselves. Yet we have known some who snapped their fingers at law and then cursed the agents of the State when the inevitable happened. And some thoughtless folks sympathize with them, too. Human nature is a queer mixture. Sometimes it sides with the wrong from downright prejudice.

The wise retailer does not ignore that part of the law which was enacted for his personal preservation. He does not defy law and then turn around and curse those who have sworn to enforce it.

At the annual meeting of the Holstein-Friesian Association of America, held in Syracuse during the first week of June, 315 members were present and 885 others were represented by proxies. Among other business transacted was the appropriation of the sum of $24,500 for prizes and literary purposes. The sum is divided as follows: For official authenticated butter fat records and such other tests as may be authorized, $10,000; to the literary committee $10,000; for competitive tests at fairs and expositions, $4,500.

Following are the officers of the Holstein-Friesian Association of America for the ensuing year: President, General C. W. Wood, Worcester, Mass.; First Vice President, W. A. Matteson, Utica, N. Y.; Second Vice President, W. F. Schilling, Northfield, Minn.; Third Vice President, William Everson, Lake Mills, Wis.; Fourth Vice President, F. P. Knowles, Auburn, Mass.; Superintendent of Advanced Registry, M. H. Gardner, Delaven, Wis.; Treasurer, Wing R. Smith, Syracuse, N. Y.; Secretary, Frederick L. Houghton, Brattleboro, Vt.; Directors, Isaac Dalrymple, Otselic, N. Y.; John H. Moffitt, Plattsburg, N. Y.; W. B. Barney, Hampton, Iowa.

It is a difficult matter for the ordinary layman to comprehend all the intricacies of the law, especially as it is interpreted by various courts. One who looks into the matter is more than ever convinced that the treasures of judicial knowledge are deposited in earthen vessels and that the interpretations that one receives are hampered by human imperfections. Nevertheless, disturbing as conflicting decisions are, one must continue to respect the court and accept their decisions with as much complacency as can be mustered.

Something is to be said in defense of the man who ignorantly feeds his neighbor impure or dangerous food. He does the wrong to another in ignorance and innocently. But he who adulterates a product for the purpose of adding money to his purse, regardless of the consequences to the innocent consumer, deserves the severest punishment. Such an one is little if any better than the murderer who lies in wait to take your life. Both law and public sentiment should ostracize all such blots upon our human nature. Their number is decreasing, thank fortune, but there is still much occasion for eternal vigilance and for the most drastic action upon the part of the public and the servants of the public.

A NATIONAL BEREAVEMENT.

The sudden and wholly unexpected death of Hon. A. C. Bird, Dairy and Food Commissioner of the State of Michigan, which occurred on May 22, from a complication of diseases, was a positive calamity to the pure food control of the country. He was a man wholly devoted to his work and his love for that work sprang from an abundance of knowledge. He was probably the best informed of all the men engaged in his line of public service throughout the western section of our country and nowhere can we think of one who was his superior in real knowledge, innate intelligence and sincere desire to serve the public. Withal, he was gifted with a genial nature and served conspicuously as a peacemaker. Some persons ruffle the temper of all who come in contact with them; it was just the reverse with Commissioner Bird. He found a friend in a morose humor or a convention in a snarl and by his genial spirit and judicious conduct soon brought order out of chaos. Where a little while before there was contention and misunderstanding the forceful and sunny spirit of Commissioner Bird brought about peace and order. The Bulletin sympathizes sincerely with the people of Michigan in the calamity that has befallen them in the all too untimely death of this useful and sweet-tempered citizen. It would be impossible to fittingly characterize his services to his state and the country.

BUTTER VERSUS OLEOMARGARINE.

STATEMENT OF HON. JOHN M. NELSON, A REPRESENTATIVE FROM WISCONSIN, BEFORE THE COMMITTEE ON AGRICULTURE, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, WASHINGTON, D. C.

Mr. Nelson. Mr. Chairman, what time can I have? I would like about thirty or forty minutes.

The Chairman. Take your own time, Mr. Nelson; we will try to accommodate ourselves to whatever time you desire.

Mr. Nelson. Mr. Chairman, there is grave danger that oleomargarine will either corrupt the butter industry of the country or destroy it. An appeal comes to Congress from the Commissioner of Internal Revenue earnestly requesting remedial legislation. The ingenuity of the oleomargarine interests and the decisions of courts have uncovered loopholes in the present protective law that seriously endanger the public welfare. Therefore, representing a State that excels in the production of butter and a district that was foremost in the fight for the law of 1902, I am most deeply interested in the pending legislation. This is my apology for trespassing upon your time.

How to Prevent Fraud.

How to prevent fraud upon the public in the sale and use of oleomargarine for butter was the burden of the appeal to Congress by Dairymen in 1902; it is their appeal to you to-day; and it must continue until this question shall have been settled honestly and settled right.

The Public Good.

The dairymen make this appeal in the name of the people of the United States. They realize, after years of experience, that the dairy industry is so closely identified with the general good that it is only in the complete protection of the public from fraud that they shall find their rightful relief from unfair competition with oleomargarine. They know that when the dairyman suffers once wrongfully through the loss of a legitimate market, the public suffers a twofold fraud—first, in being cheated as to the nature and quality of the food product palmed off for the genuine article, and, next, in being swindled as to the price unsuspectingly paid for the counterfeit.

Not Consistent.

On the surface all parties appear to agree on the goal as the prevention of fraud in the butter business by means of an effective law. It is but fair to point out, however, that the oleomargarine interests, while claiming to favor the prevention of fraud, are here striving with all their ingenuity and might to tear down the old fence so laboriously built around the pure butter business of the country. When we ask them how they propose to prevent fraud, they speak vaguely of some ideal plan, but their concrete proposition is the Burleson bill with the simple package device and label.

The Burleson Bill.

Now, this Burleson bill, as a preventive of fraud, looks to me like a burlesque on effective legislation. My friend, Mr. Burleson, has changed the title of his bill twice. I suggest to him that he reintroduce it under the title, "How not to prevent the sale of oleomargarine for butter, but how to increase it;" and I submit that it will be more in accord with its true contents and his usual candor. Now, I believe that if fraud is to be prevented, it can be done more effectually by erecting barriers than by tearing them down. The simple package device and label of Mr. Burleson's bill looks to me like a cardboard fence constructed from the oleomargarine factory to the retail store, only with not even tissue paper protection for the unsuspecting consumer. If we assume that his package device and label may be effective for the prevention of the fraudulent sale of oleomargarine for butter from the factory to the retail store—yes, even to the housewife, which we may well doubt, for all of them are unsuspecting; others of foreign birth in our great industrial cities are ignorant or careless, and most of them are easily deceived by an unscrupulous dealer—even if we concede all this, I say, what possible protection does this device afford the millions of people that eat at hotels, boarding houses, lunch counters, and restaurants? Absolutely none at all. In plain terms, the Burleson bill is bad, because it expressly repeals the former law, even that provision that makes effective State laws, relieves oleomargarine from nearly all burdens justly chargeable upon it as costs of inspection, and seeks to remove entirely the familiar mark of identification by permitting it to mask itself in nature's dress for butter—its yellow hue.

The Right Remedy.

As a basis for his proposition to tear down the old fence, Mr. Burleson asserts that it is sadly in need of repair. Doubtless that job was not what it should have been, nor what was wanted, but it was the best that could be had under the circumstances. The oleomargarine interests and their allies were as alert, shrewd, and powerful then as now. But if my good friend, Mr. Burleson, is as anxious to prevent the fraudulent sale and use of oleomargarine for butter as he says he is, I most cordially invite him to point out all the places where the boards are down, where oleomargarine gets over, under, or through the fence, and I will most gladly help him nail on some sound oak planks with spikes. But I fear my friend, Mr. Burleson, really may not wish to repair or strengthen the old fence. It is possible that he may be using its present weakness merely as an argument for the promotion of the oleomargarine interests so as to enlarge the demand for cotton-seed oil; if he really wishes to protect the public from fraud, he will join us in our purpose to construct an effective and permanent protection, not of paper, pine, or brick, but of cement and iron.

Right Principles.

Assuming, however, that all are sincere in the expressed desire to protect the public from fraud, upon what principles or premises are we to proceed to frame an effective law? Surely no lawmaker can legislate successfully in defiance of common sense and natural law. If we begin with false premises and erroneous principles we shall of necessity fail of justice and righteousness in formulating our legislation for the protection of the public welfare.

Not Equal or Identical.

I wish, therefore, at the outset to challenge the truth of three propositions of the oleomargarine interests before this committee. The assertion or suggestion repeatedly made or implied that oleomargarine is equal to or identical with butter as a food product, irrespective now of all hygienic conditions, does not need the testimony given before the committee by expert chemists, like Dr. Wiley or Dr. Crampton, to disprove it; our own common sense tells us that the assertion is absurd on its face. It is self-evident that sometimes man's necessities, but more often his greed, have enabled him to adulterate deceitfully most of our natural foods, to the great danger of public health and to the exasperation of our pure food expert, Dr. Wiley. It is also self-evident that if the adulteration is not overdone the imitation may contain ingredients of some food value, which the instincts of greed, if not restrained, will seek to diminish in quality and quantity for the sake of greater profit, but that men who engage in this sort of business will put into their adulterated compound nature's wholesome, nutritious, and life-sustaining food qualities in the degree, kind, and proportion demanded by the highest needs of the human body no champion of oleomargarine can make sane men believe. The statement collides with common experience, common sense, and natural law.

Will Not Win its Way to Favor.

When it is asserted that oleomargarine, if given a free field, will win its way into favor with the eating public, who does not smile at the woeful lack of knowledge of human nature the statement reveals, or its deeper cunning. Man may be in such dire distress from poverty or want that he will fill his stomach with any adulterated food rather than suffer hunger or starve to death, but when he has a choice he prefers every time nature's own manufacture. We need no expert testimony on this point. We prefer butter for our families and for ourselves; oleomargarine as a food will never win favor with our wives. We know this is true also of our fellow-men, poor or rich alike, all over the country, and we know also that this natural fact holds good in every other civilized nation the world over. In fact, so convinced are dairymen of this fundamental truth of common experience that they do not fear oleomargarine when sold for what it is; they fear it only as a counterfeit fraudulently sold and used for butter.

Must be Restrained.

When it is asserted that few restraints are necessary to protect the public from fraud through the sale of oleomargarine for butter the assertion is made in the teeth of official records, human nature, and common sense. This artificial compound was invented as a counterfeit for butter; and what is counterfeiting but falsification? And falsification is fraud. Look into the history of this substitute product in the court records of various states of the Union and in the countries of the Old World; as court records and the revenue office statistics abundantly demonstrate, everywhere it leaves its trail of lawbreaking and fraud. It is not butter that causes the trouble, but oleomargarine, and, as I shall make clear from the laws of the nations of Europe, restrictions are increasing in the almost futile attempt to regulate the sale and use of this substitute compound. This difficulty is inherent in the article itself. It is a counterfeit and, unless restrained by fear under law, it always and everywhere reveals its true nature.

Fundamental Characteristics.

In legislation upon this exceedingly difficult subject it is the part of wisdom to keep in mind the nature of the article itself, as well as the real motives of the men in this business of counterfeiting butter.

Butter.

Now, consider generally the conflicting natures of butter and oleomargarine. Butter asks merely that it may be true to itself; it seeks its highest development wholly from within itself; it appeals only for the preservation of its purity; its prayer is, save me from adulteration. And when tampered with it tells its truthful story.

Oleomargarine.

Oleomargarine is butter's false self, its evil spirit. It is not true to itself, but pretends to be something else. It does not seek development out of materials within its own life, but borrows any where the cheapest possible component parts that will enable it to pass for butter. It does not seek the preservation of its integrity, but invites corruption; and instead of telling the whole truth to the public, as butter does, it seeks even the privilege of covering up its name, nature, and condition by assuming the mask of nature's purest June product.

No Repealing Natural Law. .

It is well to remember that Congress cannot repeal or set aside the fundamental facts of nature, or of human nature. Can Congress by law make an artificially painted flower equal to nature's blushing rose? Can Congress by law make water flow up hill? Can Congress by law turn hungry wolves loose in sheepfolds and reasonably expect that they will not destroy the sheep? Can Congress by law make beasts of prey ply their natural instincts in daylight rather than in darkness? If Congress can do these unreasonable things, if it can defy natural law and common sense, doubtless then it has also the power to make good by law the assertion that oleomargarine, a heterogeneous compound mechanically mixed in a machine, the child of greed sold for gain, is the peer of butter as a food, the product of nature prepared in the living organism of the cow, man's best friend from the beginning of his earthly pilgrimage as a race, the prototype of the kindliest gift of God to man—our mother.

No Agreement Possible.

Mr. Chairman, we may shut our eyes to nature's law, we may put blinders upon our common sense, but the fact will remain that between these two unequal competitors—man's artificial compound and nature's own product—there must be a war of extermination or the strictest possible control by the Government. The true and the false can never agree. Where a counterfeit substitution is possible, the genuine must fight for its integrity and purity or yield the field to its unscrupulous rival.

Must Make a Choice.

This fact must be recognized, and then we should wisely decide which to protect for the common good. Shall we give the people a pure-food law or a counterfeit-food law? The choice ought not to be difficult. The product of the cow has been adapted to the physical needs of man from Adam to the present day. When man first appears upon the plains of Asia, he is accompanied by four animal friends—the cow to give him food, the sheep to give him clothing, the horse to give him power, and the dog to give him protection. But now man has come upon the evil age of adulteration. Fraud is everywhere, not only in butter, but in bread, coffee, clothing, seeds, fruits, paint, furniture, medicine, whisky—who can name them all—every thing counterfeited for money, all adulterated for gain. Truly, this is a commercial age, and the spirit of greed is our commercial god at whose court too often law and liberty, justice and right are made to do menial service.

A Reckless People.

We are a careless people in many ways, but the height of recklessness is to permit the adulteration of our foods, and, be our attitude what it may, one thing I do know—the eternal law of consequences, cause and effect, will not be set aside because of our neglect. Nature is never disobeyed with impunity, and though I am no prophet, I venture to assert that a people or an individual careless of the use of adulterated foods, will soon or late hear from stomach pancreas, liver, kidneys, or intestines in no uncertain terms. Nature does not suffer the slightest infraction of her laws without exacting the full payment of the penalty provided in the bond of life with man.

The Moral Law.

There is still a higher law that Congress cannot safely ignore for the well-being of society. This concerns the relations of men to each other—questions of right and wrong. The attitude of the respective parties in this contest will serve to illustrate the law. The dairymen ask only for the truth. Let there be light, is their plea. The oleomargarine people, on the other hand, ask for the fullest privilege of counterfeiting. Shut off the light is their plea. The butter men do not wish to interfere with any legitimate industry. They ask only for the old right to develop their business, and to have it protected from corruption, for the public good. The oleomargarine people ask permission to play the parasite upon butter, to enter its legitimate field, and to compete with it on an unjust, unfair, and fraudulent basis, for private gain. The dairymen's prayer to Congress is, save our industry from corruption. They realize that the success of the oleomargarine interests means inevitably in the end the wholesale adulteration of the butter industry, or its complete destruction.

An Absolute Divorce Necessary.

Mr. Chairman, let us not deceive ourselves. From the arguments of the gentlemen who champion the cause of oleomargarine, from the conflicting natures of these competing products themselves, and from the inherent difficulties of their ethical relations to each other in their sale and use it is perfectly evident that they can never exist together in a free field. We may cry peace, but there has been no peace, there is no peace, and there can be no peace between such unnatural competitors except on the basis of an absolute divorce of these rival industries.

Powers of Congress Limited.

Congress cannot truthfully treat oleomargarine and butter as equal or identical under the law. There are some things Congress cannot do. It cannot declare and make good the declaration that the adulterated is identical with the pure, the counterfeit with the genuine, the hypocritical with the honest.

Worse Than Folly.

Would it be wise for Congress to declare by law that fraud shall not be perpetrated and then give every opportunity and inducement for it? How can Congress save the people from the evil consequences of food adulteration if it shall give a free field to that form of the evil which assails man's bread and butter, the familiar terms under which all man's physical needs have been united?

The Birthmark of Butter.

Mr. Chairman, I have tried to suggest in a general way the difficulties that must be met in framing an effective law on this subject. We must recognize the fact that there is neither equality nor identity, but irreconcilable difference, in the respective natures of these food rivals; that they instinctively and consistently do business upon entirely different ethical principles, and that the public can be safeguarded from the fraudulent sale of the one for the other only when Congress shall adopt every precautionary safe-guard possible under our constitutional form of government, more especially effective means of ready identification, so that fraud may be easily detected not only by the chemist, but also by the consumer. The consumer looks to the color. Will you take away from him this tremendously important birthmark of butter?

Consequences.

If the natural law does not permit its violation with impunity, no more does the moral law, either by the individual or the nation. If, therefore, Congress shall say that the counterfeit may have standing with the genuine, if Congress shall tear down the old law or permit it to remain full of loopholes through which this fraud now makes its raids upon the pure butter industry, then in despair the dairymen may throw up their hands and say, "If these oleomargarine people shall have the right to select fats from animals and oils from vegetables, buy them in the cheapest markets, mix them in machines, fix them up with chemicals, color them in the hue of June butter, and sell this cheap compound to the public for butter, we must do one of two things—either quit the dairy business or corrupt it. We cannot quit unless we go into some other business, for we must live, but we can corrupt it. We, too, will gather or buy the fats of animals from the slaughter houses and the oils of vegetables wherever they can be had at the lowest cost; we, too, will make this artificial compound sanctioned by the law and sell it for butter."

A Present Danger.

Now, gentlemen of the committee, this is no fanciful dream. One of the high officials of this Government, who has charge of this business in the revenue office, told me that since the oleomargarine dealers have been successful in evading the provisions against artificial coloration of butter in the present law the small dairy farmers living near the larger cities—not one, he said, nor two, but thousands having, let us say, 50 customers--would buy a hundred pounds of this yellow oleomargarine, mix it with 50 pounds of butter, and then supply their unsuspecting customers with this adulterated compound. He added, if the housewives knew what is being sold them for butter this evil would not be tolerated over night. And why should this not be done? If the law permits the sale of animal fats and vegetable oils for butter, why not part butter fats with animals fats and vegetable oils for butter? These adulterators of butter give more to their patrons for the money than do those who sell oleomargarine for butter.

Strict Legislation Needed.

Mr. Chairman, the only safety for the public against such possible condition of things is the strictest kind of regulations for the prevention of the fraudulent sale of oleomargarine for butter.

The Problem Briefly Stated.

The whole moral problem may be summed up in this simple question: Is the unsuspecting citizen, whether he be in a family or a hotel, in a restaurant or at a lunch counter, entitled to know what he spreads upon his bread for butter? Surely he is by every right. Then the law should make good that right.

The World's Collective Wisdom.

No doubt the problem of prevention of fraud is an exceedingly difficult and delicate one, but we may have the benefit of the collective wisdom of the civilized world, if we wish to avail ourselves of it. Why not, therefore, take some heed of the way other legislative and parliamentary bodies have endeavored to solve this problem?

Salient Provisions of European Laws.

It is not my purpose to attempt to review here the legislation of the countries of Europe in detail, for I do not wish to trespass upon your time to that extent, but I will point out some of the more salient provisions of the European law.

France's Experience with Margarine.

As France is the land that produced M. Mege Mouries, who invented oleomargarine in 1870, we may well look to her for light in dealing with her food discovery. What is France's experience with margarine, by which name it is known in Europe? If you will read the extracts from a public document of the French Chamber of Deputies, published in your hearings, you will find in substance what I have tried to point out in general terms has been France's experience with margarine. Instead of being a favorite with her, this is what she says to the dealer in this artificial food product of her own invention: You shall not sell margarine for butter under penalty of imprisonment, fine, or both. The other countries of Europe expressly or by necessary implication forbid the sale of oleomargarine for butter. Why not amend our laws so as to expressly forbid this fraud and add a penalty that will enforce it?

Authorities to be Notified.

France says to the oleomargarine producer, if you wish to carry on this margarine business you must notify the authorities and submit to government and police inspection, supervision, and control. All the other European nations have followed in this respect.

The Cost of Inspection. .

France has put upon the manufacturers of margarine the duty of defraying the cost of inspection, where it rightly belongs. The inspectors are appointed by the State, their salaries fixed by the State, but these are to be paid by the oleomargarine establishments. One or two other countries have a similar provision of law.

Publicity Required. .

France compels margarine factories, warehouses and shops to bear a notice with the words "margarine factory" or "margarine shop" in letters at least one foot high. Nearly all the other countries of Europe have equal provisions as to notices upon margarine premises. This is intended to give the public full warning of the nature of the business.

Full Powers of Supervision.

France confers the fullest powers upon the Government, through its inspectors and police, to enter at all times any part of the margarine premises, to supervise the entry and quality of the materials, to pass upon sanitary matters, and to prohibit the use of unsound materials, or of such as are injurious to health. Substantially all the other countries of Europe give the government the same summary powers of inspection, supervision, and control. Strange to say, in our law these powers are lacking. In testifying before one of the committees of the House the Internal Revenue Commissioner called attention to the fact that under court decisions he had been deprived of all the summary rights and remedies that he has as to liquor, tobacco, and the corporation taxes. "This," he says, "deprives us of many summary rights under the revenue laws which are essential." Surely Congress should remedy this defect in the present law.

Complete Separation. .

France does not permit persons who make, store, or sell butter to keep margarine on the premises. All the other nations of Europe have similar provisions. Holland permits the sale of these products from the same store, but requires that there be partitions between them. Belgium will not permit the butter merchant to have margarine on hand even for his own consumption, nor may butter and margarine be carried at the same time, nor sold from a market stall within five rods of a butter stall. Denmark forbids the sale of margarine entirely at the markets or from ships. Austria-Hungary forbids a peddler from offering margarine for sale. The purpose of these provisions is to divorce completely these industries so as to remove all temptations for fraud upon the people.

Identity Preserved.

France says, further, that the maker of oleomargarine shall not use more than 10 per cent. of butter fats. Belgium has the same provision. Denmark permits the use of 15 per cent. Germany and Austria-Hungary forbid entirely the use of butter in margarine. These two nations further provide that in the manufacture of margarine there shall not be used more than 100 pounds of milk or cream with 100 parts of fats not from milk or cream. The purpose of these provisions, I take it, is to preserve the identity of the two rival products, and as the distinct line of demarcation. In this line are the provisions of law of such countries as Germany, Denmark, Sweden, Belgium, and Austria, which provide that 10 per cent. of sesame oil must be used in margarine so that the chemists can readily identify the compound. Belgium requires, in addition to sesame oil, the use of starch. Hungary requires the use of dimethylaminoazobenzene. These regulations suggest how important it is regarded in Europe to preserve the identity of margarine.

Compulsory Information.

France further requires all packages, boxes and cases to bear the word "margarine" in clear and indelible type. The constituent parts of margarine must be shown on labels and in the invoices. In the retail trade margarine must be delivered in cubes with the word "margarine" impressed upon one face. The wrappers must also bear the same inscription. Failure will be held to indicate that the goods are butter and subjects the person violating the provisions to the severe penalties of the law. Substantially all the other countries of Europe have similar provisions more or less stringent. All of them are far more effective in detail than the package device and label of the Burleson bill. These regulations serve to warn the public of the nature of the compound sold, and tends to prevent its fraudulent substitution for butter.

Public Health.

France gives the Government the right to pass upon the ingredients so as to safeguard public health. Other countries have followed France in this respect, but Sweden requires that the ingredients be approved first by the Academy of Medicine.

Anticolor.

France was compelled in her last enactment on this subject, to forbid under all circumstances the coloring of margarine. Italy has been driven to the same provision, and Russia likewise has adopted this wise safeguard. Denmark forbids the use of color, but has worked out a scientific scale of yellow tints from A to F and forbids margarine from using any deeper tint of yellow than No. 9.

Nearly Unanimous.

On this point let me digress to call the attention of the committee to the fact that 32 states of the Union have adopted this anti-color provision of France, Italy, Russia, and Denmark to protect the consumer from fraud. Vermont and West Virginia have gone so far as to provide that oleomargarine shall be colored pink. Of all the provisions of law to prevent fraud none are more important than the color test.

Canada's Solution.

It remains for our nearest neighbor, Canada, to solve this difficult problem in a thoroughgoing manner. Canada forbids entirely the importation, manufacture, or sale of oleomargarine within her dominions in any form. One of the highest government officials gave as a reason for this law that Canada wished to preserve the reputation for purity of her butter in the markets of the world.

Severe Penalties.

The penalties of European laws are generally exceedingly drastic, With the single exception of Norway, which fixes only a fine ranging from four to five thousand crowns, having very strict government inspection, all the other nations of Europe have penalties of imprisonment and fine, or both. In France, for example, it is imprisonment from three months to a year or a fine of $20 to $1,000, or both; in especially aggravated cases it may be imprisonment for two years. Denmark provides a penalty for the fraudulent sale of margarine of two years' imprisonment, and in aggravated cases it may be as high as six years.

Advertising the Culprit.

The law of France further permits the court to order the destruction of the condemned produce in front of the premises of the culprit, to publish the fraud in the newspapers and placard it on the door of the premises for a fixed time. Similar provisions as to placarding the fraud on the premises and advertisement in the local newspapers may be found in the laws of other countries.

English Principle Stated.

I have here the report of a select committee appointed by the House of Commons to take testimony on this subject. In general it may be said that the laws of England are quite similar to the laws of the other countries of Europe. England is not a butter producer, but the largest butter consumer in the world. I wish to direct attention to the essential principle laid down by this special committee as the basic principle of the English law. This is the language used: "The essential principle of these acts is that nothing shall be sold to the prejudice of the purchaser which is not of the nature, substance, and quality demanded by the purchaser." This statement of principle by the English committee sums up, also, as I understand it, the case of the butter men of America.

In Higher Law Still.

Mr. Chairman, there is still a higher law that should not go unheeded by legislators in this Christian country of America, a democracy founded upon the great principle of the brotherhood of man. This law finds its perfect expression in the Golden Rule; in daily life we refer to it as the spirit of fair play, and Theodore Roosevelt gave this principle popularity under the name of the "square deal." Now I am convinced that the dairymen, in being put into competition with this counterfeit compound are not getting the square deal. Bear with me a moment while I endeavor to convince you. I am not now thinking of the creamery companies—they are strong and self-reliant—but of the typical dairy farmer, such as my father was when I was a boy upon the farm. The picture I have in mind is not drawn from fancy but from experience. I know what it is to be a dairy farmer. It means to get up at 4 o'clock in the morning to milk the cows and do the chores; it means 9 o'clock at night before the milking is done; it means work Sunday as well as Monday. These cows must have the best care and shelter. Sometimes food is high and scarce, but the cows must be fed at any cost.

A Farmer's Hardships.

Already 65 per cent. of the people of the United States have gone from the farms to the cities to live. Hired help comes high on the farm, and so the mother and the children must help the father in the farm work. There is the butter to be made or the milk to be hauled to the creamery. There is always the loss impending of the slaughter of one's milch cows when infected by tuberculosis. Gentlemen here would use a dairy farmer's misfortune as an argument against him. We want help to bear this burden of infectious disease that is resting so heavily upon the farmer of moderate means. Inspection by the Government is given to the packer and to the oleomargarine maker free of cost, surely the dairy farmer will welcome any free practical and reasonable inspection.

In No Trust.

Gentlemen speak of a butter trust. There is a board of trade at Elgin and one at New York that make or give out market quotations of butter for the benefit of the creameries, wholesale dealers, or commission men; but I am pleading for the millions or more farmers in my district, in my State, and in the other States of the Union, who are not the beneficiaries of any board of trade, but more often the victims. You heard the testimony the other day of a practical farmer from Minnesota, who told you that it cost more than 22 cents a pound to produce butter; that the net profit of the dairy farmer for a year's work per cow is the pittance of $7 and the manure of that cow. Gentlemen, will you make it harder for this farmer to make a living for himself, his wife, and children? Will you further depopulate the farms of this country? Do you wish all our people to move to the cities? Will an urban population safeguard the life of the Republic? The history of Rome is the answer.

The Oleomargarine Millionaires.

Now reverse the picture. There are just 25 oleomargarine wholesale producers. Most of these cluster about a few cities like Chicago and Kansas City, where the great beef trust has its slaughter houses. The owners of these factories are multimillionaires, and well may they be in such profitable business. They get their fats and their oils as by-products from other industries; they mix these compounds together with machinery, and throw it upon the market as a butter product at an enormous profit.

The Farmer's Loss of Market.

The sale of oleomargarine has already this year amounted to 100,000,000 pounds, and before the present fiscal year is over the total will be 120,000,000. Think of this, gentlemen, and most of it sold to defraud the Government and the public. This means that each of the 25 oleomargarine producers has taken away a market from the dairy farmers of the country of over 5,000,000 pounds—1 pound of oleomargarine to 14 pounds of butter, or, to put it the other way, one consumer for oleomargarine for every 14 consumers of butter—making a total annual loss to the dairy farmer of the country of his legitimate market of over $30,000,000.00. If this is a Government founded upon the greatest good for the greatest number, what has become of the spirit of the Golden Rule? Of the spirit of fair play? Of the square deal? Is the oleomargarine producer more than a man? Why should 25 oleomargarine producers, little more than one each for half the States of the Union, have greater privileges before the law than the millions of dairy farmers all over the country? This is "a Government of the people, for the people, by the people"—a Government not of money but of men.

A Righteous Appeal.

Mr. Chairman, we do not ask anything of Congress by way of favor; we do not ask you to suppress any legitimate competing industry; we do not ask for any special privilege; we do insist upon our natural and moral rights; and we hope for the square deal. We believe that the highest development of the pure butter business in this country will promote the public good, and we appeal to you for protection from corrupting influences that threaten to destroy the integrity and the purity of this great national industry. We do so, however, in the name of the people of the United States, well knowing that we shall secure rightful relief from an unfair, unjust, and ruinous competition only in the complete protection of the public from the fraudulent sale of oleomargarine for butter.

The laws I have given are to be found in this report from Great Britain on page 453. The committee sat in 1906. They give the substance of all the laws of Europe.

CLAIMS OF THE BUTTERMAKERS.

During the last two months the Bulletin has devoted considerable space to the subject of butter versus oleomargarine. These expressions of opinion have been brought out by the hearings before the proper committee at Washington upon the bill to amend the Grout act in the interest of the manufacturers of oleomargarine. In the present number will be found a masterly presentation of the subject from the Hon. John M. Nelson, of Wisconsin, who speaks from abundant knowledge.

The animosity of the buttermakers of the country is not directed against oleomargarine as such. They recognize that the manufacture of this product is a legitimate industry. There never would have been any controversy if dealers in this artificial product had confined themselves to legitimate efforts to extend its sale. The trouble began when manufacturers of butter found themselves confronted by a counterfeit butter closely resembling the genuine, sold as the genuine, but very much cheaper than butter could be manufactured and sold for.

From the beginning this has been the difficulty. At present many reputable dealers are now selling butterine for precisely what it is. Yet the illegal sale and use continue in various quarters and it is the conviction of the dairymen that the strenuous efforts recently put forth to so amend the law as to practically abolish the tax on colored oleomargarine were inaugurated by men who are determined to crowd genuine butter out of the market by the cheaper and counterfeit article. That there is considerable ground for this conviction is proved by the history of the not very distant past.

It is certainly the duty of the State to protect the consuming public against all counterfeits in the realm of food products. While the manufacturers of oleomargarine are entitled to equal protection with all other manufacturers, those who deliberately undertake to foist upon the market a sham food are entitled to nothing but exemplary punishment. That is the contention of the buttermakers and the average consumer will certainly agree with them. In the open market and in a fair rivalry the two articles should be permitted to appeal to the intelligent judgment of the public. Some may prefer oleomargarine because of its lower price and for other reasons; but everybody is entitled to the opportunity of making an intelligent decision.

SOME RECENT JUDGMENTS.

During the month of June many notices of judgment in the case of adulterated food products were issued by the federal Department of Agriculture. This indicates that violaters of the food and drugs act are being more and more drawn under the jurisdiction of justice and finding the way of the transgressor a hard one to travel. The more rigidly this act is enforced the better, since the powerful influence of the general government thrown in favor of the enforcement of law and the protection of the food of the people makes it all the easier to execute the various State laws and regulations.

One Maryland man and two citizens of Indiana were taken into court on the charge of adulterating milk by adding water thereto, thus diminishing its strength. They admitted their guilt and each paid a fine of $10, also the costs. Another citizen of Indiana admitted that he had abstracted part of the cream from the milk sold by him and likewise contributed $10 to the government exchequer. A Wisconsin milkman paid more than his colleagues who were guilty of an identical offense in other section, having been assessed a fine of $25 and costs for selling milk that had been adulterated by the addition of water. There is an impression abroad that a uniform scale of possible fines should be adopted for use in all the United States Courts, to the end that all violations of a particular section of the food and drugs act may be assessed the same fine. There is much in the idea to commend it to public favor.

The Health Officer of the District of Columbia, acting by authority of the Secretary of the Treasury, has been rather active in the prosecution of venders of cream from which the butter fat has been wholly or partially removed. Four milkmen residing in Maryland and one in Virginia shipping cream into the city of Washington were brought into court on the foregoing charge and all admitted their guilt. Each was sentenced to pay a fine of $10 and the costs of prosecution.

The practice of mixing oats with barley and selling the mixture as pure oats seems to have come into rather extensive use among some scarcely conscientious shippers of oats. Thus among these notices of judgment are no less than seven dealing with adulteration of oats. In every instance barley had been mixed with the oats in more or less large proportion while the product had been labeled "oats," or "white oats." In four instances—three of the offending firms doing business in St. Louis, Mo., one in Memphis, Tenn.,—decrees of confiscation were entered but the goods were released upon the defendants each filing a bond conditioned that the goods should not be disposed of contrary to the laws of the United States or the state in which the prosecution had been instituted. In a fifth case goods shipped from Davenport, Iowa, to the state of Arkansas and labeled "No. 3 White Oats," were released upon their being labeled "Barley mixed oats." On the other hand, a Nashville firm shipped into the state of Alabama a certain quantity of what purported to be "No 2 Mixed Oats." Analysis showed that it contained 12 per cent. of barley, and that it was adulterated under the law. A fine of $100 and costs was meted out to the offender after a plea of guilty had been entered. A Tennessee firm, one of whose members wears the name of a former President from that state, plead guilty to having shipped a mixture of oats and barley into the state of Georgia, where it was sold as oats pure and simply. Each of the defendants was sentenced to pay a fine of $75 and one-half the costs.

An enterprising Pennsylvanian, engaged in the manufacture of an ice cream powder which declared on the label that it "contains a high percentage of cream and butter fat," whereas it contained neither cream nor butter fat, was picked up and plead guilty to the offense charged against him. He paid the costs and a fine of $10.

The government has been manifesting considerable activity of late in the prosecution of those enterprising individuals who raise false hopes by misbranding drugs. The proprietors of "Mother's Friend," an alleged preparation of great benefit for women gave bond to sell no more of it in violation of federal or state law and escaped; the firm that handled "Sporty Days Invigorator," confessed that they had violated the law in not naming the quantity of alcohol their product contained and paid a fine of $50 and costs; a misbranded hair coloring preparation cost its owner and manufacturer $5, while a misbranded skin food brought to the government coffers the sum of $10. A manufacturer of a product called "Cancerine" was fined $100 and paid the costs besides, for the reason that his goods did not constitute a cure for cancer, as claimed. "Hodnett's Soothing Syrup" was not found to be what its misleading statements claimed for it and the manufacturer paid the costs and a fine of $10. Manufacturers of fraudulent "headache wafers," "headache powders," "headache tablets," paid fines of $3, $10 and $25 respectively and always the costs. Headache cures are good things to avoid.

THE COST OF EGGS AND OTHER THINGS.

In the New York letter of a recent number of the Grocery World and General Merchant it was stated that nearly 2,000,000 cases of eggs were stored in that city. The same correspondent declared that the storage warehouses of Chicago contained 2,000,000 cases. Prices were high. "The cause for the high prices is said to be the speculating in the west and the high prices paid to the farmers."

It is said that the farmers have got an exaggerated idea of the value of the egg crop and decline to sell except for an exorbitant price. Some folks might smile at this and defend the farmers upon the ground that they have as much right to a fair share of the profits as the cold storage people. They might insist that the man whose hens furnished the eggs has an equitable interest in the profits.

Of course this is by no means a pleasant thing for the consumer. Whether the farmer or the chicken raiser or the individual who buys the eggs and stores them gets the largest profit, or whether each gets his due share, the consumer is the individual who is going to pay the bill. It is not a matter of vital importance to him how the money is divided. The material thing to him is that he is obliged to pay the uttermost farthing.

It should be a matter of considerable interest to the consumer, however, to watch the growth of the idea among so many different individuals that he must be made to pay. There was a time when prices varied considerably during the course of the year. In the spring and early summer neither butter nor eggs cost him what he was obliged to pay the balance of the year. Except in the late fall and winter prices were fairly reasonable.

Now the consumer gets his medicine "going and coming." All seasons have been alike for some time past. Prices have gone steadily up and at the present time there is little variation in the prices of some of the prime necessaries of life from one season to another. The producers seem to have discovered how to keep up prices. Or if the producers haven't done it the cold storage managers have.

That is what the consumer is thinking these days. He feels that he is not only paying a fair price for eggs and other household necessities, but also doing more than that. He is under the impression that he is a victim and he is not sure but that the farmer is also a victim. He feels that the government ought to do something to protect him, either by way of lowering the cost of living or insisting upon an increase in his income. He is feeling his situation very keenly.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

Professor Massey, writing in the Progressive Farmer and Gazette concerning oleomargarine, declares that "the only possible reason for coloring this grease is to enable it to be passed off as pure butter."

Professor Massey likewise says: "Talk about men having the right to color their grease because dairymen color their butter to maintain a uniform type; no man has a right to imitate another man's product with a spurious article, and I repeat that it was only because they want to sell oleo as butter that they want to color it."

And the professor clinches his argument by declaring: "If the people wanted oleo they would buy it as readily uncolored as colored, but the makers know that people will not use it unless they can fool them into thinking it is butter."

At a recent meeting of the New York State Dairymen's Association, Mrs. Edward H. Marshall, a dairywoman of that state, delivered a very sprightly address. Here is a paragraph: "The food problem has no more important issue to-day than the proper nourishment of the new-born. If the decreased productivity of the land is due to poor cultivation, the decreased efficiency of the human machine is due to poor nourishment. Bread and butter are the real constitution builders."

Mrs. Marshall throws out this hint to the school directors of the nation: "Educational authorities should be induced to fortify the children with great cans of milk brought in at recess and given freely to pinched, pallid, spindle-legged, bird-clawed children of rich and poor alike. Did you ever notice our attenuated little ones? We would worry if our calves looked no better."

St. Louis is to have a big exhibition of pure food products, September 19-24. It will be the first of the kind ever held in the city and will be under the direction of some of the most prominent retail dealers of the city.

In some of the states efforts to compel the printing of the net weight of articles of food upon the package are being strenuously opposed by various interest. Others are just as active on behalf of the adoption of the measures.

The best food products in the world are those that have established reputations and are sent out by dealers who would rather be right than wealthy if there must be a choice betwen duty to the consumer and benefit to the public.

Public sentiment insists upon first class sanitation and the protection of vegetables and fruits from flies and other sources of infection.

The best food is always the cheapest. The housekeeper who has attained to this wisdom is a benefactor of her family.

There is a strong sentiment among some of the western millers against the federal condemnation of bleached flour.

Many persons who find it advantageous to adulterate food have convinced themselves that they are doing no great harm.

The conscience is a very convenient instrument. It can be educated to justify conduct which injures the human body and shortens life.

The women of America have already done much in the way of promoting a desire for the best sort of food. With the passing of the years they will do more.

The men who deliberately poison the children of the poor by giving them counterfeit lemonade or soda water in exchange for their pennies deserve no better fate than long service in the penitentiary.

The sale of oleomargarine under its own name and without any pretense to disguise its identity is entirely lawful and is not to be disputed. Its sale under the guise of yellow butter is an imposition upon the consuming public.

"The poor man" has just as much right to genuine articles of food as his wealthy neighbor. It is an insult to the man of limited means to intimate that he prefers a counterfeit article to genuine butter.

The grocer whose word can usually be depended upon and who takes the trouble to tell his patrons the exact truth, as he understands it, is not likely to lack patronage. On the contrary, his old customers will constantly be bringing him new ones.

The reader may think there is considerable repetition in these columns from month to month, but it seems to be necessary to repeat vital truths a great many times in the course of a year.

What does it profit a man if he make a large profit by selling counterfeit goods to unsuspecting men and women for a time, only to wake up some day and find himself in the clutches of the law from which he shall not escape until he has paid the last farthing?

Pure food laws, wisely and prudently administered, have accomplished much for the physical welfare of the race during recent years.

The American Pure Food and Drug Journal is a plain-spoken publication. It has a notion that high prices are inimical to the prosperity of the nation and the happiness of the people. It declares that a crusade against high-priced food would secure friends for the government, just as it has in the successful campaign for pure food.

"Soothing syrups, medicated soft drinks, treatments for diseases of the nose and lungs, asthma remedies, catarrh cures, cold and cough remedies, consumption cures, headache mixtures, epilepsy remedies, tobacco habit cures and drug addiction treatments" are some of the mixtures that are sought by from 1,000,000 to 4,000,000 Americans who have become "drug fiends" by their use, so asserts Dr. Kebler, of the Drug Division of the National Agricultural Department.

The Philadelphia baker who paid $50 fine and the costs for having made and sold sponge cake artificially colored with coal tar dye must have sold a large number of cakes to come out square on the transaction.

An effort is to be made to secure the adoption of a national law regulating the sale of cocaine and other habit-forming drugs. It is believed that such an act will do much to discourage the growing addiction to dangerous drugs. Perhaps so.

The Trade, a weekly newspaper published in the interest of the canned goods packers, justifies the action of the National Canners' Association in adopting a resolution favoring the parcels post, declaring that "there is no reason why the express companies should be allowed to continue their excessive charges, which become a direct tax on the people."

Referring to a recent proposition by a well known promoter of novel enterprises to put on the market "Eighteen Hour Eggs," meaning thereby eggs that occupy no more than eighteen hours in getting from the hen to the consumer, the Grocery World thinks the label would probably be a snare to the seller. The "statement on the label that an egg was only eighteen hours old when it was twice that, as it would surely be if it were shipped any distance, would without doubt constitute a misbranding and render the seller liable to arrest and fine or imprisonment."

The State of Tennessee has made an end of the trading stamp enterprise by enacting that each trading stamp company shall pay a privilege tax each year in each county in which it does business. Dealers using trading stamps are to pay an annual tax of $250.

A western milling firm is engaged in the interesting experiment of trying to discover whether alfalfa meal can be used as a substitute for wheat or other grains for human food. The experiment is likely to prove successful, so far as the healthfulness and the palatableness of the substitute is concerned. The meal is a bright green, however, and this may create a prejudice among some people against it.

The recent session of Congress was chiefly noted for the slow progress made by that honorable body. Those who were interested in legislation concerning oleomargarine, either favorable to that product or against it, were soon convinced that the end of the session would find the laws unchanged. The same was true of other food legislation. Congress was chiefly interested in other matters during the recent session.

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat thinks that one explanation of the rise in prices of foodstuffs is to be found in the fact that since the year 1901 the number of food animals in the United States has decreased by no less than 5,000,000, while the number of consumers has increased by some 12,000,000. The increase in the gold supply may have had something to do with the rising prices, but the increase in the demand for meat in face of a short supply will be sufficient to explain the whole matter, in the view of the Globe-Democrat.

Twice during the last ten days the grocer who supplies the family of the writer with butter has sent to his home a rancid article. It is impossible to use such an article, even if it were not dangerous. There is no surer assistant to the oleomargarine people in their battle on behalf of their product than the sale of rancid butter. It ought to be as unlawful to sell rotten butter as it is to sell any other decomposed product.

We suppose the housekeeper may be responsible in part for the high price of food products. She may be extravagant sometimes, hard to please and determined to have the best the market affords for her family. And yet there are other reasons. Some of these will be unearthed eventually and made to vanish.

The family cow is the best friend the baby has. It is a pity each baby in the country can't have its own individual cow to provide it with pure and wholesome food for its early days. The world has no more helpful benefactors than those good men and women who try to make life a little better living for the children of the tenement quarters of the big cities. They will not fail of their reward.

A TYPOGRAPHICAL ERROR.

Somebody wrote an essay once on the natural perversity of inanimate things. Another good theme would be the downright devilishness of cold type. Columns could be filled with humorous or tragic accounts of the havoc wrought by typographical errors which will persist in creeping into the best regulated of publications, and that in spite of the utmost vigilance.

All of which is preliminary to the correction of a typographical error of a particularly aggravating sort which occurred in the June number of the Bulletin and which gave some of our good friends and vigilant readers an opportunity to indulge in a little chaff at our expense. Among the "Miscellaneous Items" were several dealing with the beverages of the people, calling attention to the law already on the statute books regulating the manufacture and sale of non-alcoholic drinks. An effort was made to say that "The state of Pennsylvania still needs a law prohibiting the manufacture and sale of adulterated alcoholic beverages." The compositor omitted the word "adulterated," the proof reader failed to notice the omission and the Bulletin seemed to be devoted to the advocacy of the doctrine of prohibition.

It is scarcely necessary to say that this Bulletin is not taking any part in the discussion between prohibitionists and anti-prohibitionists; it is working for the enactment of a law regulating the manufacture and sale of liquor so as to make the sale of adulterated liquors unlawful; that's all.

PURITY OF FOODS IN 1910 AS COMPARED WITH TEN YEARS AGO.

THE FOLLOWING PAPER WAS READ BY DAIRY AND FOOD COMMISSIONER, JAMES FOUST, AT THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE RETAIL MERCHANTS' ASSOCIATION OF PENNSYLVANIA, AT BUTLER, AUGUST 16, 1910.

Mr. President and Gentlemen:

Ten years ago general food laws were new in America. The public and the retail trade had little exact knowledge of the way in which commercial foods were put together. Courts and juries were uncertain as to what was really fair play in the application of the Food Laws. Business ethics were in a state of confusion, competitions were correspondingly difficult and the consumer was a victim of all these disadvantages.

The year 1910 witnesses a very different condition of affairs, and as a result of a growth rather than a revolution. Thanks to numerous agencies, especially that of the public press, the people know to-day ten times more about market foods than they did then. What is fair play is a question far more easily decided by courts and juries than it was ten years ago. The people have come very largely to believe that whatever may be true in "love and war," in business the common rules of ethics are practicable and that counterfeiting and clipping in commodities are, at least, as bad as the counterfeiting and clipping of the coins for which they are exchanged. With the wider acceptance of fair rules in the game and the wider knowledge of the real nature of commercial foods, fair competition in trade has been made less burdensome to the honest dealer.

My subject opens a wide field. I shall try to contrast the conditions ten years ago and to-day by a few illustrative statements rather than trespass upon your time by an exhaustive survey. Broadly speaking, all classes of adulteration have decreased. Dilution with worthless materials and the abstraction of valuable constituents is far more rare. Spices diluted with cereals or with worthless parts of spice plants were then largely on sale; to-day they are rarely found. Watering and skimming of milk are being rapidly suppressed. The wholesale adulteration of lard by the use of cheaper fats, once common, has now almost ceased. Formerly water was substituted for meat in various sausages; now that practice has largely disappeared. Then skimmed cheese was frequently sold; of late we have found no cases of this kind. Formerly mixtures of a little alcohol, much water, coal tar color to dye and a trace of oil of lemon was sold as lemon extract; to-day bottles bearing this label usually hold their full amount of genuine oil of lemon with the proportion of alcohol necessary to dissolve it.

Likewise, the substitution of a less valuable for a more valuable substance is less fraudulently practiced, for such preparations are now generally so labeled as to warn the buyer of their true nature; whereas, ten years ago this honest practice was very generally disregarded. The olive oil labels decorated bottles holding cottonseed oil. Pictures of maple groves, accompanied by the name of "maple sugar," "pure maple syrup," beguiled the consumer into buying far inferior compounds and imitations, and little of the genuine article of these descriptions was obtainable in the markets. The manufacturing trade admitted that 95 per cent. of the so-called maple syrups were really a compound. Oleomargarine was widely sold as butter. Simple distilled vinegar, almost without savor, and colored with caramel, was widely sold as cider vinegar; and when fresh peas ran short, dried stock was too often sold without warning to the consumer. To-day every one of these frauds has almost stopped.

Ten years ago the use of injurious antiseptics, and of colors and flavors for deceptive purposes, was very general. Hamburg steak, too often made of stale scrap, was freshened in appearance by the use of sulphites; potted meats very generally adulterated with boric acid; likewise, oysters and shell-fish; aged and unclean milk, was held over with the aid of formalin and boric acid. Mixtures of glucose, thickeners, artificial acids, coal tar dyes, artificial flavors, and possibly some fruit pumace, were sold under the names of genuine jellies, jams and preserves without the least indication of their compound or imitation nature. Canned goods frequently contained saccharine, sulphites and sometimes boric acid. The waste from tomato canneries, kept in unsanitary ways by the aid of preservatives and dyed to please the consumer's eye, thickened with starch, put up in handsome bottles with attractive labels, especially around the neck, formed a large volume of the goods sold as catsup. Candies, sold to tickle the palates of our little ones, were made of cheap materials, stiffened by the aid of sulphites. Over the counters of our beautiful marble soda fountains were sold under the name of our most delicious fruits, mixtures of syrup, artificial flavors and coal tar dyes, or fruits heavily loaded with undesirable preservatives; and our pop drinks were chiefly sweetened with saccharine and made of other artificial substances, flavors and dyes. To-day all of these practices have been greatly reduced in volume, and in the canned goods in particular, conditions have been so greatly improved, largely by a vigorous co-operation on the part of the canners themselves, that the discovery of adulteration in this class of goods has become extremely rare.

I do not wish to be misunderstood as announcing the arrival of the "food millenium." I do not mean to say that we have wholly stopped adulteration and misbranding. Our country still holds men who are willing to profit at the expense of the health of their neighbors and by deceiving them. Public sentiment and the execution of our food laws have driven them to their inner works, but they are strongly united and ever alert to repel any further invasion of the territory they have wrongfully occupied. The progress of thought among buyers, as well as sellers, is such that I indulge the hope that before long we may clearly realize that life is worth more than property and that our Acts and laws may be in harmony with principle. We all have from birth a feeling that our own lives are worth more than other people's property. It is harder to grasp firmly the truth that other people's health is more valuable than a few dollars in our own pockets, but I believe we are getting a grip on this version of the Golden Rule.

It is an old saying that "Rome wasn't built in a day." This saying applies truthfully to all great improvement in public practice. It is, however, too often used as an excuse for inaction and to cover the shirking of responsibility. We shouldn't expect to build our Rome in a day, but we should expect of ourselves that in our day we should do a good, strong, honest day's work upon it. I would like to suggest a few "bricks" that ought to be laid by the Retail Merchants of Pennsylvania, and to make them easier to remember I will put them in the following words:

Don't allow the dust and flies to get on the foods you sell. The most of you now are already careful about this, but all of you should be.

Don't keep stale goods on your shelves. If necessary buy in smaller quantities so as to turn your stock more frequently.

Don't hesitate to dump stock that has become unfit for food. You will make more in the end by selling good goods and pleasing your customers.

Don't buy goods simply because they are cheap unless you have made sure that they are of good quality. For example,—beware of quart jars of prepared mustard to retail at 10c. with a glass dish as a "bait."

Don't hope to establish a fine reputation by offering quart bottles of catsup for 10c.

Don't run the risk of losing your good reputation with your customers, built up only by years of honest dealing, through some failure to take the safe side in your buying.

Don't buy of unreliable dealers, whatever inducements they offer.

Don't fail to get guarantees that conform to the requirements of the Pennsylvania Food Law, and if you can't get them by acting individually, then make your demands collectively.

MUTILATED PAGE

I have pictured to you a great improvement in food conditions. This improved condition should be of vital interest to every citizen of Pennsylvania. Her seven millions of inhabitants spend collectively about $600,000,000 annually for food products, and to each of them life and the hard bought earnings from the day's labor are most important. It is the duty of the Food Bureau to protect the consumers of the State from imposition by those who would deliver to them food products that are injurious to health, unclean or fraudulent in character. I cannot fittingly close without expressing to you my appreciation of the strong position your organization has taken in favor of purity in foods and the suppression of frauds on the consumer. The officer of the law, however, broad his authority, cannot go far unless the people support him. Much of the progress we have made has been due to the vigorous support given by honest dealers and the public press.

CONCERNING INADEQUATE SENTENCES.

In another part of this number will be found an article from Colonel Henry Watterson's paper, the Louisville Courier-Journal, in which the subject of fines and penalties for violating the federal food and drugs law is discussed. The text of the article is furnished by the Courier des Etats Unis, the representative of the French people in the United States. It finds the practice of the federal judges in fining an offender against the public health $1 or a little more, or in destroying the adulterated article, or in giving the offender a mild reprimand and letting him go to sin again, matter for considerable amusement.

The Courier-Journal conceives that this is no laughing matter. The Bulletin agrees with it. Judges who treat offenders as leniently as the federal judges have treated a majority of these offenders make a laughing stock out of the law and bring justice into general contempt. Their sentences soon breed something worse than indifference among the offenders who are haled into their courts and create restlessness and irritation among the people. Such sentences provoke distrust of the courts, a very serious situation, frequently the prelude to very radical changes in the composition of the state. Against such possibilities the wise judge should ever guard.

The Bulletin agrees with the Courier-Journal that pure food and drink will never be a certainty in every part of this country so long as such absurd sentences are imposed. It further believes that there should be a radical and a permanent change of policy upon the part of the federal government and that the courts which are charged with the duty of enforcing the federal food and drugs act should give timely warning that they intend to inflict adequate punishment upon food adulterators hereafter. The Bulletin is convinced that such a policy should be adopted for the reason that the United States courts deal with the manufacturer exclusively and a manufacturer who sells adulterated goods does so deliberately and intentionally. There is no accident about the matter; the injurious things that are found in the food products of the manufacturer were put there with his knowledge.

For that reason the Bulletin believes the manufacturers who are brought before the federal courts should be sentenced to imprisonment if found guilty. That is the only punishment that will bring such criminals to terms. As long as they are fined nominal sums or have their debased goods confiscated or are sent out with the paternal injunction to sin no more, they will keep right on defying law and imperiling the health of the consumer. This is a truism. It should not be necessary for anybody to direct the attention of the federal officers to anything so obvious.

Another reason why the government should act with severity toward the manufacturer who endeavors to increase his profits at the expense of public health may be found in the fact that the adoption of such a policy would greatly aid in the matter of law enforcement in the states. No more effective aid could be rendered the several commonwealths that go to make up our glorious sisterhood of states than by the imposition of righteous sentences upon men who have not even the shadow of an excuse for their misconduct. There cannot be a too swift turing about, a too prompt application of the rigors of the law.

MICROBES ON FRUIT.

A microbe census has just been completed at the Pasteur Institute in Paris, under the direction of Professor Metchnikoff, the noted bacteriologist. The particular field investigated was the surface of fruits exposed for sale in handcarts and open stalls. An immense number of tiny individuals were found tenanting the strawberries, grapes and currants examined, says the Paris correspondent of the Chicago News. While admitting that the microbe population was mostly of the innocent variety, the professor reiterates the old warning: "Do not eat uncooked fruits or vegetables." The latest census was undertaken by Professor Fillassier and Professor Sartory, who took samples of fruit in the afternoon from the places where they were exposed for sale. This was in streets frequented by automobiles and very dirty. Each sample had been previously sterilized and the microbes in one cubic centimetre of water (27 fluid dram) were then counted. The sample of large strawberries examined yielded on the first washing 1,850,000 bacteria, 74,000 on the second and 18,000 on the third. The first washing of the sample of currants produced 851,000 microbes, the second 41,000 and the third 8,500. In the first washing of the sample grapes 3,200,000 microbes were found, in the second 120,000 and in the third 27,000. "Simple muslin cloth," says Professor Sartory, in commenting on the results of the investigation, "will protect fruits and vegetables from innumerable microbes, and especially the noxious ones."

NON-ALCOHOLIC BEER.

The following information concerning a new temperance drink now being introduced in England, is furnished by Consul-General John L. Griffiths, of London:

There has recently been placed on this market a beverage which it is claimed is non-intoxicating and still resembles and tastes like the intoxicating beer. It is brewed from malt and hops only and has no preservative in it. It does not look unlike beer and the taste is very similar. It is made of precisely of the same material as the best English home-brewed ale, but alcohol is almost entirely eliminated and it is stated that there is no chemical admixture of any kind. The amount of alcohol produced by the brewing of this beverage is given as nine-tenths of 1 per cent., which is less than the percentage found in any of the ginger ales, stone beers or any of the other temperance beverages. The process by which this beverage is made is the invention of a French scientist, while certain modifications were made by one of the professors of the Paris Pasteur Institute and an English Brewer. Two kinds are made, ale and stout. The ale, it is claimed, has the flavor of light beer, and the stout tastes almost exactly like a good quality of London stout.

WHEN A MAN IS A FAILURE.

According to the Michigan Tradesman a man is a failure:

When he has no confidence in himself or his fellow men.

When he values success more than character and self-respect.

When he does not try to make his work a little better each day.

When he becomes so absorbed in his own work that he cannot see that life is greater than work.

When he lets an hour go by without making some one happier and more comfortable.

When he tries to rule others by bullying instead of by example.

When he values wealth above health, self-respect and the good opinion of others.

When he is so burdened by his business that he finds no time for rest and recreation.

When he loves his own plans and interests more than humanity.

When his friends like him for what he has rather than for what he is.

When he knows that he is in the wrong but is afraid to admit it.

When he envies others because they have more ability, talent or wealth than he has.

When he does not care what happens to his neighbor or friend so long as he is prosperous.

When he is so busy that he has no time for smiles or cheering words.

HOW COURTESY MAKES FRIENDS.

A retail salesman, in a letter to Iron Age Hardware, tells of an interesting experience with a customer. The letter in part follows:

Some years ago, while I was in charge of the hardware department of a large department store and did some selling, a lady approached me. She looked cross and nervous. I gave her a smile and a pleasant greeting. She simply said rather sharply, "I want some casters."

Now, if there was anything I disliked more than another it was to sell casters. Almost every bed took a different kind of caster and the women never knew what style their bed took, although they said they could tell if they saw it.

This woman was either cranky by nature or had been provoked by some clerk. I could see that plainly. I took out the best sellers we had and explained how they worked and mentioned their other good points, spending some five minutes in stating that certain beds took one caster and other makes took another style. I noticed she did not answer or even ask questions, but kept eyeing me, and finally I saw a pleasant smile cross over her face.

"Well," she said, "you are the most agreeable clerk that has waited on me in this store. I have been to fifteen or twenty clerks and never got treated so in my life. Some almost insulted me."

She took a sample of two kinds home with her, and I assured her if she would return them to me (giving her my number) marking the one she wanted, I would see that they were sent promptly to her rooms. She thanked me kindly and expressed her gratification that there was one pleasant clerk in the store. The woman came many times afterward and I never saw her cross again. Meanwhile, I have gone ahead and am now getting nearly double the salary I received for selling casters.

WHAT WOMAN CAN DO.

In a speech before the National Federation of Women Clubs, at its Cincinnati meeting, A. M. Allen, of the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station, said:

Your Federation constitutes a powerful influence throughout the country, for you represent that public sentiment which comes from the homes, and, in the case of the members of your Federation, from the intelligent and thinking homes. There is no reform which your Federation can have more direct influence in promoting than the national and state effort for clean, wholesome, and honest foods and drugs. And your interest and help is especially needed in connection with the work for clean milk and bread, and inspected meat. You can do this by reading labels, by insisting that the milk which comes into your homes be produced in a clean manner and cooled and bottled before it leaves the dairy; by insisting that the bread shall be wrapped, and by refusing to buy and encouraging others not to buy bread which has been exposed to contamination in the delivery wagon, by the driver or in the retail market. An intelligent interest in the work of your state and federal officials will encourage and help them in the large and difficult tasks which the food and drug control work imposes. You should see to it that capable and honest men occupy these positions, and that they are equipped with a sufficient force of trained analysts, bacteriologists and inspectors to attend to the various matters affecting the purity of each state's food supply. No one recognizes the influences of your national and state federations and of your local clubs in connection with the pure food work more than those who were intimately connected with the fight for the present Federal Food and Drugs Act, and I regard the occasion as an exceptional opportunity towards keeping your needed influence in both the federal and state work.

THE AGRICULTURAL BOOM.

During the past ten years there has been an annual increase in the value of farm products. If current prices are at all sustained for 1910 it is fairly certain that they will exceed all previous records of value, says The Journal of Commerce.

The main features of these enormous increments in annual wealth are found in cereal products. The bulk of these consist of corn, wheat and oats. Together, the three crops, now so prominent in public attention, embrace about one-third of the total value of last year's farm produce. Last year their combined worth at the farms December 1 was $2,256,000,000. Five years before the corresponding total was $1,877,000,000 for the same three crops. Meanwhile there has been a gain of 36 per cent. in total values. With rare exceptions the cereal crop values have been continuous, regardless of whether the actual yields were good, bad or indifferent.

The phenomenal rise in the value of this country's farm products is shown from figures compiled by the Agricultural Department. Within the next six months the farms of this country will have produced farm products available for sale or consumption, which at probable prices cannot be worth much less than $8,000,000,000. Last year the Department of Agriculture estimated the value of wealth produced on farms at $7,849,000,000. The average value of farm products for the last five years was $6,912,000,000 a year.

Acreage of crops at the present state of American farming is by no means so apt to be reduced as crop scares on the subject imply. On the contrary, the tendency is to expand with regularity from year to year. It is true that wheat is inclined to expand least. Yet last year's crop was almost up to the maximum of the past five years. Corn was never so largely planted and the record area in oats was 32,344,000 acres. Last year's three cereal crops occupied an area of 181,689,000 acres. Adding barley, rye and buckwheat gives 191,000,000 acres for six cereal crops. This area is scattered so widely between the oceans, the lakes and the gulf as to greatly minimize the risks of general failure in any particular crop. For this reason the country is most advantageously situated in dependence upon its supply of foodstuffs.

One of the most encouraging matters coming to light during the week was the report of the Treasury Department showing that the deficit for the first eleven months of the present fiscal year has been kept down to a trifle above $97,000,000.

HIGH PRICES OF MEATS.

Secretary Wilson, of the Department of Agriculture, gives the following brief and comprehensive summary of the reasons for the existing high prices of meats. (1) The production of stock cattle has been diminished by range abandonment; (2) new demands for corn on farms for meat production; (3) high price of corn; (4) high prices of all meats partly because of high corn prices; (5) the production stock of hogs was reduced in 1907; (6) high farm land values; (7) both supply and cost of meat production unite to raise meat prices; (8) for seven years the production of meat has declined relative to population; (9) meat exports increased until 1906, after which they sharply declined; (10) there has been a decreasing meat consumption per capita; (11) increased per capita consumption of cereals, vegetables, fruits and saccharine foods.

NEW YORK'S MILK SUPPLY.

In an article on the purity of the milk sold in the city of New York, the Times of that city says:

Dr. Darlington, when health commissioner, labored diligently to keep the milk sold here uncontaminated, a task not easy in a territory covering half a dozen states, extending north into Massachusetts and west into Ohio. Commissioner Lederle, as shown by a recent statement of his method of dairy inspection, has not permitted the work to lag a moment. Not only are practically samples of all the milk brought into the city analyzed daily in the health department laboratories but a keen lookout is kept over the entire city for sectional outbreaks of disease which may be traceable to the milk supply. Dr. Lederle's statement shows also that the closest practical reckoning is kept of the thousands of dairies which supply the city. This inspection is maintained by a corps of trained men who visit the dairies at regular and often irregular intervals. For each dairy a score card is kept by the inspector for the health department and each dairy has its rating. It is 80, 90 or 95 per cent. good, as the conditions found by the inspector warrant. If it falls below the high standard required its milk cannot come into New York until the objectionable conditions are removed. The fact is, the requirements on the dairies are more exacting in cleanliness of cows and milkers than are usually maintained for private consumption anywhere in this country. The Attorney General, who has investigated this question, says that the charges for milk are exorbitant. But it's clean and rich, and it is far better for the people that it is such than if it were not clean, not pure, mixed with water, and possibly dirty water at that, and yet cheap.

CORN SYRUP LABELED GLUCOSE.

According to a recent ruling of the Wisconsin Supreme Court, all corn syrup shipped into that state must be labeled "glucose." This decision was handed down after the matter had been in court for over two years, having been carried to the higher courts by the Corn Products Refining Company to test a ruling made by the State Food Commissioner that all corn syrup be labeled glucose. As a result of the court's decision there has been established practically a boycott on the article, as the large manufactures refuse to label their product glucose, claiming that glucose is not the proper name, and that in labeling it "corn syrup" they say they are following the provisions of the national pure food law. So far no attempt has been made by the manufacturers to evade the Supreme Court's interpretation of the law, but the manufacturers doing business in the state of Wisconsin have notified their customers to withdraw the article from sale unless properly labeled and in accordance with the decision just handed down by the Supreme Court of that state.

FREEDOM FROM FLIES.

A successful grocer from Toledo describes the following method which he uses to dispose of flies. About fly season time he takes a narrow strip of wood and tacks it at the ceiling at the edge of the shelf; to this strip he tacks mosquito bar which extends to the floor. These strips of netting overlap each other from eight to twelve inches so that in taking the goods from the shelves the overlap will not leave space between the drops. In order to keep the netting in place little loads of lead are tied at the bottom. The front windows about once a week are emptied and the whole store is darkened. A little light is left in one window where the flies will gather. At this point fly paper or fly poison is used in sufficient quantity. In the course of half a day the store is well rid of flies.

ACTIVE WOMEN'S CLUBS.

A healthy public sentiment is the first essential to the enforcement of any good law, remarks a Special Bulletin of the North Dakota Pure Food Department. Before pure food laws may be successfully enforced people must know of the conditions that exist and demand a reform. Before fakirs of patent medicine can be driven out of business the public must be aroused to the injury that comes from the methods which they pursue. The business methods of a community will be just about what the public sentiment of the community demands. If every town and city in the state had a live organization, thoroughly imbued with the necessity for reform, for the cleaning up of our cities and towns, for having proper sanitary conditions in every place where food stuffs are produced, handled or stored, it would not be long before there would be a general cleaning up and improvement throughout the whole state. We have such a sentiment in one of our cities, Grand Forks. We have there a Civic League which is more than in name; it is up and doing; it has made up its mind that the city shall be cleaned up; that the handling of food products shall be done under sanitary conditions. The people are becoming interested and the business men are asking: "What must we do in the way of improvement to have our business satisfactory to the consuming public?" The women of Grand Forks are working as a unit. They have appointed committees to visit every establishment in the city of Grand Forks. Already they have listed 115 business places. They are going to the slaughter houses, meat markets, restaurants, grocery stores; they go into the basements, back rooms, in the alleys and to the refrigerator. They note how things are cared for; they note whether or not the food products are being protected from flies, filth and contamination of all kinds. The slaughter houses, if necessary, make changes and improvements to put their places in better sanitary condition, or the public will go elsewhere to purchase their food products. This is as it should be and if this work is continued Grand Forks will become a city where sanitary conditions are such as to make far better homes, healthier bodies and for the upbuilding of a better city.

THE COLOR QUESTION IN OLEOMARGARINE.

A great many city and professional people fail to see why it is not just as legitimate to color oleomargarine as it is to color butter. Possibly they would not see why it is not just as allowable for a private citizen to make and stamp a piece of gold with the insignia of the American gold dollar, as it is for the government to do it, but nevertheless, the law forbids it. But in reality there is no similarity between the two cases, remarks Hoard's Dairyman. With the coin the individual might put one hundred cents worth of gold in the counterfeit substitute and the receiver not suffer in fact, although the nation would. But with oleomargarine the substitute is a fraud, a wrong, a substitution of an inferior fat made possible by the similarity of color.

J. S. Abbott, Dairy and Food Commissioner of Texas, like many other of our southern brethren, entertains the view that it is just as legitimate to color oleomargarine as butter. In a recent letter he expressed his views as follows:

"In regard to the tax on colored oleomargarine, I am of the opinion that it is an unmistakable case of class legislation, undemocratic, unjust and robbery according to law. It is a tax on one product for the benefit of another product. I see no more reason why butter should be protected by heavily taxing oleomargarine than that oleomargarine should be protected by taxing butter. The food law officials stand for an honest, straightforward representation of all food and drug products, and our laws demand that all food products be honestly represented to the public, and this represents our attitude toward oleomargarine and butter."

The above shows how so many men mislead themselves into placing the tax, not on its true ground, which is the imposition of another burden on the colored counterfeit because of its purpose to deceive the consumer and rob the producer of his rightful market.

To Mr. Abbott's argument Secretary Slater replies as follows: "In regard to your statement regarding the present tax of ten cents a pound on colored oleomargarine, I feel that you do not understand what the real purport of the law is or that you are laboring under a misunderstanding of what The National Dairy Union is striving for. I have also been in state pure food work and I know that in order to prevent fraud it is sometimes necessary to restrict the sale of certain healthful food products to a degree that to the uninformed person is very obnoxious. I am so strong a believer in pure food legislation that I stand on the principle that if it is necessary to prevent fraud in the manufacture and sale of a product the prohibition of a certain product is not only in strict conformity with police regulations but that it is consistent with justice. Of course, such a result is not even contemplated by those who are attempting to properly regulate the sale of oleomargarine. They only wish to have the product sold for what it is, and I might add that there are very few food officials in the United States who do not think that it is absolutely impossible to prevent the sale of oleomargarine for butter when it is colored to resemble butter. This is verified by the fact that in thirty-two of the states of the Union the state legislatures have enacted laws which prohibit the sale of oleomargarine which looks like yellow butter. Why is butter colored? It is colored to satisfy a demand for uniformity and it is still butter after it is artificially colored. Why is oleomargarine colored? To make it look like butter and for no other reason. It is made to taste like butter and smell like butter to the person who is not a butter expert and when it is colored to look like butter the imitation is complete and it is my opinion, an opinion that is backed up by a large majority of the food officials of the country, that no label law can ever be invented which will eliminate fraud in the sale and use of the product. This is the reason why I make the statement that if it is necessary to eliminate the product entirely in order to prevent fraud, such elimination is justifiable. I make this point for the purpose of emphasizing that the dairymen are not asking for anything unreasonable. They are only asking the government at Washington to enact such legislation as will prevent fraud, and instead of asking for the suppression of oleomargarine, a request which would be absolutely justifiable in case fraud could be prevented in no other way, they are merely asking that oleomargarine shall not masquerade in butter's color.

IMPROVED MILK SUPPLY FOR THE SMALL CITY.

"It is frequently stated that the milk supplied to cities is not what it should be, but it is true that improvement in quality has come much more rapidly in larger cities than in those of small and medium sizes," states Prof. E. G. Hastings, agricultural bacteriologist of the College of Agriculture of the University of Wisconsin. "In many cities the demands made by boards of health have insured milk of an excellent grade but the factors at work in the large cities tending to improve the milk supply have been absent in small cities and towns. The need for clean, fresh, healthful milk is no less in the small cities than in the large ones. The reason why the demands for better milk are not met by the dairy farmers is that it is expensive to produce clean milk and the producer is afraid to do so for he thinks that at the price he must charge to make a profit, he will be unable to dispose of such milk in a small town. The difficulties of producing clean milk have been magnified by boards of health, speakers, etc., until the producer looks upon it as a most complicated business."

A number of cases have come under Prof. Hastings' observation of farmers who are producing milk of a quality that will compare favorably with certified milk. This milk is sold in small cities at prices within the reach of everyone, and at the same time the farmers are making a profit. One farmer milks eighteen cows on a farm of 115 acres. The milk is sold in a city of 15,000. He began by selling the milk at five and a half cents a quart; later the price was raised to eight and third cents a quart, and the demand increased even at the higher price. This demand grew in spite of the fact that another milk company was selling milk for six and a quarter cents a quart. Last year he sold $3,800 worth of milk from eighteen cows. Produce sold from the farm paid for the feed purchased and the labor bill was less than $1,400. During four years the returns from the cows have purchased the herd, farm equipment and made many improvements on the buildings. Particular attention was paid to cleanliness, the cows being groomed daily. The owner believes that this care resulted in the production of least one quart more of milk per cow a day. The stable is old and crowded and the barnyard far from satisfactory The equipment of the milk room is good, with a bottle washer, can sterilizer and steaming oven, the latter not being used constantly, as reliance is placed on thorough scalding of the bottles in the vat. Cold, pure water is secured from a deep well. This dairyman thinks it does not cost much more than a cent a quart more to supply this milk than it would to supply ordinary milk. An examination of the milk from this farm in comparison with three certified milk farms showed that 87 per cent. of the samples examined contained less than 10,000 bacteria per cubic centimeter, while on the three certified farms the numbers were 79, 58, and 96 per cent. respectively. It showed that this farm without expensive buildings or appliances was producing milk of a high order.

OLEOMARGARINE MOONSHINING.

The federal authorities have been giving considerable attention to oleomargarine "moonshining" the past few weeks, especially in Chicago, and it may be of interest to read an extract from the testimony of Mr. Cabell, United States Commissoiner of Internal Revenue, given at the recent oleomargarine hearings. He explained the operations of these "moonshiners" as follows:

"Now, as I said, if a man is going into this business on a big scale he will buy ten 60-pound packages. They are boxes or tubs or firkins, as they are called, holding 60 pounds, and each one has a stamp on the end of it, stating the name of the manufacturer and the date, and so forth, and showing that it is artificially colored and tax paid at the rate of 10 cents a pound; it is in bulk, 60 pounds in it. He gets 600 pounds and pays the price, which includes the $60 tax. He puts that in his place of business and sells out of these various boxes, but he never lets them get quite empty. The law requires that when these boxes get empty the stamp shall be destroyed. The courts have decided that as long as these boxes or receptacles contain any quantity of merchantable oleomargarine they are not empty, and consequently they cannot destroy the stamp. Now, having let the contents of these boxes or firkins get down to a pound or two pounds each, he will buy a great number of cases of oleomargarine stamped at a quarter of a cent a pound and have them delivered to his store. You will find them in the upper floor incased in pressed-steel sheets, or we have found them in the basement or rooms adjoining the store; it depends on what chances a man is willing to take; and he will have on that upper floor or in that basement or adjoining room a little apparatus for heating. You do not have to heat it very hot. Less than 100 degrees will will make the material plastic; then he will have a little churn in there, sometimes worked by a little gasoline engine and sometimes worked by hand power, and he will take those packages of uncolored oleomargarine and put them in this room, where they will be heated until they become plastic, and he will have his coloring matter mixed with a little milk or something like that, stir it up, and have it in the churn; he will just pour his uncolored oleomargarine into the churn, have his colored package empty, all except one pound, and convenient, give the dasher half a dozen turns, and pour the product out in the package with his 10 cent stamp, and he is safe."

The reason they are able to thus violate the law with impunity is because the internal revenue officers do not possess the same authority in enforcing the Grout law that they enjoy in enforcing other revenue measures. Congressman Tawney, of Minnesota, very clearly pointed out this defect when he testified before the committee as follows:

"Now, that fraud can be perpetrated only in secret, and, as Mr. Cabell stated to this committee, one of the serious defects in the existing law is the fact that the courts have held that the inclusion of certain sections of our internal revenue law in the present oleomargarine law excludes all others, and the section of the internal revenue law which permits the courts on the application of an internal revenue officer to issue a search warrant does not apply in the enforcement of the present oleomargarine law, and that not applying it is therefore impossible for the agents of the Government charged with the duty of collecting this revenue to make any search of premises where they have reason to believe the fraudulent manufacture of oleomargarine is carried on, for the practice detailed here by the commissioner constitutes that man a manufacturer, and he would be subject to a tax of $600 a year, and in addition to that a tax of 10 cents a pound on the product which he is thus fraudulently manufacturing. The right of search, therefore, is one of the chief essentials in the enforcement of this internal revenue law, as well as in the enforcement of all of our other internal revenue laws, but the government does not at present possess that right under the decision of the courts."

THE LABORING MAN'S INTEREST IN OLEOMARGARINE LEGISLATION.

Editor of the Bulletin: During the last few weeks of the session of Congress just closed, a determined effort was made to interest the different labor organizations in the attempt to secure the repeal of the Grout law, which imposes a revenue tax of ten cents per pound on artificially colored oleomargarine. The parties behind the movement, some of whom are members of Congress, either ignorantly or wilfully misrepresented the requirements of the present law and the result its enforcement has upon the present price of butter.

Believing that your readers are interested in learning the truth regarding this matter, the writer requests this space for the purpose of briefly stating the facts.

The Grout law imposes a tax of ten cents per pound on artificially colored oleomargarine and one-fourth cent per pound on uncolored oleomargarine. Less than three per cent. of the oleomargarine produced in the country last year was tax paid at ten cents per pound The other ninety-seven per cent. was tax paid at one-fourth cents per pound. This is sufficient evidence that the ten cents tax has nothing to do with the price of butter.

The ingenuity of the oleomargarine manufacturers has enabled them to produce yellow oleomargarine without the use of artificial coloring matter. The result is that a larger percentage of the oleomargarine sold is yellow but is taxed only at the rate of one-fourth of a cent per pound.

Oleomargarine manufacturers refer to their product as the "poor man's butter" and seek to influence the laboring man with that argument. The laboring man is just as much interested in knowing that he is purchasing butter when he calls for butter, as any other man on earth, and this attempt to arouse his antagonism to protective legislation is nothing less than an insinuation of ignorance on his part.

The man who chooses to purchase a cheap substitute for butter is entitled to that privilege but he should be able to purchase it at a butter substitute price. He should remember that yellow oleomargarine is always sold at a price nearly equal to butter, while natural colored oleomargarine is sold at a much less price. He should also remember that only three per cent. of the oleomargarine manufactured last year was taxed at ten cents per pound and that the repeal of the present law cannot possibly result in lowering either the price of oleomargarine or butter. It can only result in the decrease in the manufacture of natural colored oleomargarine, which is the only kind that is sold at oleomargarine prices, and which by any course of reasoning can be termed the "poor man's butter."

The writer is of the opinion that the laboring people of this country are not so ignorant as to be misled by such misrepresentations as have been made by those who are interested in perpetuating a fraud upon the consumers of the country, and that when they are familiar with the facts they will resent the imputation which is contained in such an attempt to gain their influence.

The consumer of oleomargarine and the consumer of butter are both entitled to protection, both in the choice and in the price of the article they choose to purchase.

Thanking you for the opportunity to place this matter before your readers, I beg to remain,

Yours very truly,
THE NATIONAL DAIRY UNION,

"PLAISANTE LEGISLATION."

From the Louisville Courier Journal.

Le Courier des Etats Unis, of New York, the leading French Journal on this side of the Atlantic, publishes under the heading "Plaisante Legislation" an amusing article in which it quietly pokes fun at the workings of the pure food law in the United States.

Running through a list of thirty-four cases in which prosecutions for violations of the pure food law resulted in convictions, the writer selects a number to show "the extreme severity of the punishment" meted out to offenders.

One defendant in Massachusetts was convicted of having sold as a mixture of pure Mocha and Turkish coffee, a mixture containing neither of the varieties described by the labels. "In consequence of that violation of the law," exclaims the sarcastic French journal, "he was fined a dollar."

A Washington merchant put upon sale certain cured fruits which were infested with insects. The court resolved to make an example. "It ordered the destruction of the fruits."

A Chicago merchant put on sale a quantity of decomposed meats. "The punishment was severe; the destruction of the merchandise was ordered."

A Cincinnati business house put on sale as "Very Best Strawberry Extract" a fraudulent chemical decoction. Dire punishment overtook that house. It was fined all of $10!.

In Ohio a firm sent to the markets a product under the label "Red Cherry," in which there was not one cherry or the juice thereof. It was an entirely artificial syrup with a slight trace of fruit and colored with coal tar. This time the merchant was unmercifully treated. He was gravely warned not to repeat the offense against the law!

In this way, says the critic of American law enforcement, are the malefactors punished. Results in other cases in the list, more or less identical, are equally instructive as showing the efficacy of the famous law to protect the purity of food products. An exceptionally severe penalty was imposed in the case of a man who sold cottonseed oil and recommended it to his patrons as pure olive oil. He was fined $15.

"If we have a good memory," says Le Courier des Etats Unis, "among the arguments in favor of the pure food law, in the debates which preceded its enactment, was that it was necessary to protect the public health in the United States against the intrusion of adulterated European products. But we have not had occasion to read of the seizure of fraudulent products from foreign countries. * * * A pleasant law, in truth. * * * Cannot one, says an old proverb, know the tree by its fruits?"

That the pure food law will never be a real guarantee against fraud as long as minimum penalties are inflicted is, of course, plain enough. It is extremely doubtful whether it will ever be even fairly effective unless prison sentences are substituted for fines in cases where wilful and dangerous fraud is proved. Small fines, where large profits are made illegitimately, constitute a tax that is never prohibitive. Where a bar room can "lift the lid," and make sufficient profits on the day's business more than to cover the fine, the law putting on the lid is of little effect. The pure food law, which was enacted unwillingly by Congress as a result of widespread agitation by the press and the magazines were merely a step in the right direction. It must be followed by rigid enforcement and improved where its provisions are found inadequate to cope with existing evils, or it had as well be repealed. Everyone who buys food knows that there are still misleading labels upon goods whose fraudulency is discoverable even to the consumer, to say nothing of the chemist. Fines of $10 or $15 will not have the effect of abating the nuisance and providing that protection of the public health, and protection of the consumer's purse, that was aimed at when the law to let the label tell was put upon the Federal statutes.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

This business of swatting the flies is becoming rather fashionable, but the war promises to be of long continuance. For the fly is very wary, very prolific and greatly aided by human carelessness or indifference.

While typhoid fever originally comes from infected water it is frequently carried from house to house by the meddlesome fly. That is one reason out of many why every prudent householder should make war against this household pest.

Quite evident it is to any dispassionate citizen that manufacturers who deliberately adulterate the articles they make for general consumption deserve the severest sort of punishment. Imprisonment, with widespread publication of the particulars of their offense would be the proper thing.

The persistent desire of the manufacturers of oleomargarine to put up their product in exact imitation of yellow butter is resented by the butter makers of the country as conclusive evidence of the desire to deceive the consumer into purchasing oleomargarine under the delusion that they are buying butter.

The national government tells the millers that they must wait until after the courts have decided whether or not bleached flour is adulterated flour before selling any more of the bleached product. If they fail to obey this warning proceedings will be instituted against them in the criminal courts.

We are told by experienced food manufacturers that the use of any preservatives aside from the old-fashioned ones employed by our grandmothers is of doubtful utility at best. Some authorities take decided ground against the use of preservatives.

The death list of babies during the last few weeks showed a very heavy increase, especially in the large cities. During the six weeks ending with August 1 Philadelphia's record was a decidedly gloomy one, the increase in the number of deaths as compared with last year being considerable.

The various states are becoming more and more interested in the protection of their people from adulterated or preserved foods.

The federal authorities are gunning after violators of law with sufficient frequency to create some anxiety among offenders.

Short weight is not so serious an offense as food adulteration, because it does not affect the health, but it is a rascally piece of business and deserves the severest punishment.

The record of the operations of the Dairy and Food Division of the Department of Agriculture during the first seven months of the year is particularly gratifying.

What a pity it is that so little is done to prevent the terrible mortality among infants that is one of the invariable accompaniments of the heated term in our country.

There are food manufacturers in this country who care more for their reputations than for a few more pennies of profit. They are the ones the wise householder should patronize.

It is a particularly mean man who will first adulterate the food of the workingman and then sell it to him by short weight methods.

The annual conventions of the manufacturers of food stuffs as well as of the wholesale and retail venders of the same are exceedingly useful if their programs are prepared with wisdom and if the members give attention to the proceedings.

The weekly and monthly trade journals are usually edited with much ability. They are very interesting to outsiders, in many instances, which leads to the supposition that they are of every day use to those for whose benefit they are specially prepared.

Because milk is essential to the life of the babe and because in so many instances mothers are unable to nurse their little ones, it should be pure and cheap.

The wise grocer sells no goods which have not been guaranteed. That provision of the law providing for the guaranty was inserted for the express purpose of protecting the retailer from unjust prosecution and punishment. He should not fail to take advantage of it.

In the matter of foods it is still true that eternal vigilance may be the price of good health and protracted life. But the situation is getting better from year to year, no matter how slowly.

The fifth national dairy show will be held in the Chicago coliseum, October 20th to 29th, 1910, instead of at Milwaukee, as previously announced. This action was taken at a meeting of the board of directors of the National Dairy Show Association.

Reports from the Pacific coast state that all plants will be operated this season in an effort to put up a record pack of salmon. As this is one of the off years in British Columbia and Puget Sound, it is expected that the pack will be a million cases short of last year. It is said that three new canneries will be ready for business in Alaska this season.

The clerks as well as the grocers of the thriving city of Ogden, Utah, evidently do not propose stores there shall be kept open on Sunday. The vice president of the Ogden Retail Clerks' Association, acting for that body, lately had four Hebrew merchants who refused to join their grocers' association movement to close all stores at 7 o'clock Saturday night, arrested for keeping open on Sunday.

The large western packing house interests last week agreed, voluntarily, to accept increases in freight rates, averaging 11 per cent. on all products manufactured by them.

A Canadian writer says that a store employing three clerks will waste the astounding total of $1,127.31 worth of goods in a year. We suppose he means such waste would occur under the management of a very careless proprietor and three indifferent clerks.

Wilmington, Del., put into effect August 1 a set of new rules intended to govern the sale of meat in that city. The rules were framed with special reference to the peddlers and sidewalk dealers who are quite numerous in Wilmington. They are of a decidedly stringent nature and will insure the consumer pure meat if they are properly enforced.

Statistics show that the cost of living in England has been steadily mounting during the last ten years, just as it has been in the United States. Beef has gone up from 4 to 6 cents a pound, veal 4 cents and pork 2, although the latter was exceptionally dear in 1900. In groceries and provisions it is said that one pound will not go as far now as seventeen shillings would a decade ago. Bread is about the same but eggs cost more.

The Southern Wholesale Grocers' Association, against which the federal government has brought a suit for dissolution on the charge of restraint of trade, has been incorporated under the laws of Tennessee. The charter, according to a statement made by the president of the association, "relieves all members of individual liabilities of any nature." As the association has been engaged in considerable litigation it was deemed advisable to take some such step for the protection of the members.

The University of Nebraska has issued an interesting document in the form of a bulletin of the Agricultural Experiment Station of Nebraska. It deals with the important problem of "Storing Moisture in the Soil," and is the work of W. W. Burr, assistant in soils and crops, Nebraska Agricultural Experiment Station, and assistant agriculturist, office of dry land agriculture, bureau of plant industry, United States Department of Agriculture. Its fifty-two pages contain much of value to the farmer.

Out in Nebraska the law requires that the following articles shall be branded as to net weight or measure and should bear the minimum net weight: All dairy products, milk (canned), cheese, butter, ice cream, lard, cottolene and substitutes, wheat products (raw or cooked), flour, buckwheat flour, crackers, farina, macaroni, wheat starch, oats products (raw or cooked), oat meal and rolled oats, oats breakfast foods, corn products (raw or cooked), corn flour, corn meal, corn flakes, hominy, corn breakfast foods, corn starch.

The Attorney General of the United States has decided that compound lard is a meat product and that it must be inspected by government inspectors. This is in accordance with the practice of the government ever since the meat inspection law was passed and the decision simply confirms the opinion of the authorities at Washington.

The Grocery World calls attention to the fact that "this is an age when ingenuity is being prostituted to base ends." Federal inspectors recently seized what was put on the market as "odorless cloves." They were true to their name, emitting no odor, but that was because all the oil had been pressed out of them and they were valueless.

The Independent Biscuit and Cracker Manufacturers' Association, which held its last annual convention in Boston, passed resolutions endorsing the pure food and full weight laws passed by the national congress.

SOME RECENT PURE FOOD JUDGMENTS.

Toward the close of November, 1909, the Henry Sloan Company, of Buffalo, N. Y., shipped from the state of New York to the state of Massachusetts nineteen cans of frozen eggs. A sample of this product was taken and shown to be adulterated, whereupon a libel was filed in the United States district court for the district of Massachusetts against the said nineteen cans of eggs. In due course it was found that they were about all that eggs should not be and as the owner did not appear to claim them they were forfeited and, we suppose, ultimately destroyed. As for the firm that shipped them, it does not seem to have been harmed save by the loss of its rotten eggs. The same thing happened in the same court to 574 cans of "frozen egg material," shipped into Massachusetts by the Max Malter Company, of Chicago. It will occur to the ordinary layman that there should be some way by which the principals in such incidents should be sent to prison for a time. The men who deal in rotten eggs, whether as sellers or buyers, are engaged in an infamous business. The punishment should bear some relation to the crime.

In the same district court of Massachusetts Jasper Wyman & Son, of Millbridge, Me., were charged with having put on the market and shipped into the sovereign state of Massachusetts 300 cases of canned blueberries, each can purporting to weigh two pounds. The sample package procured by the government officer proved to weigh but one pound eight ounces. The owners admitted the truth of the allegation but promised that the law should no longer be violated if the government would return their short weight goods. Whereupon it was ordered that the blueberries be restored upon condition that the defendant firm pay the costs and file a bond in $300 conditioned upon the faithful performance of their pledge.

Ettore M. Garrassi, of Philadelphia, was another gentleman who got off easily in the same United States district court. Mr. Garrassi mixed cotton seed oil and olive oil in the proportion of about seven parts of the former to three of the latter and sent it out into the world to do service as olive oil. Two barrels were shipped into Massachusetts and eventually seized. When the matter came to a hearing the owner appeared in court, admitted that the oil was adulterated but claimed that it was not injurious to the health of the consumer. He was permitted to take the "olive oil" back to Philadelphia after paying the costs and filing a bond in the sum of $150, conditioned upon obeying the law.

In the same district court Rosenstein Brothers admitted that the sardines they had sent into Massachusetts, a sample of which had been examined by a government officer, had not been packed in "the finest quality of salad oil," as claimed on the label, but in cotton seed oil. They were permitted to take their misbranded goods away upon the usual conditions. And F. Romeo & Co., of Brooklyn, N. Y., were also allowed to redeem some macaroni which had been labeled in such a way as to convince the purchaser that the goods had been manufactured in Italy. Just think of it! A modern descendant of the immortal and romantic Romeo misbranding macaroni in the United States in the twentieth century. Nothing romantic about that. It was the district court of the state of Washington that heard L. Nunziato, of San Francisco, confess that the spaghetti he had labeled in such a manner as to convey the impression that it had come from Naples was really not of foreign manufacture. He received his misbranded goods back upon paying the costs and entering into bonds to refrain from violating the national food and drugs act.

In some cases, it is true, the misbranding does not reveal any effort to conceal an injurious adulteration. The intimation that a certain product was made abroad does deceive the purchaser, but it is not the sort of deception that injures the health or shortens the life if the constituent parts be pure. That may be considered a mitigating circumstance in the case of those detected in this sort of deception. The manufacturers of headache powders and other articles that are falsely labeled, do not deserve any consideration. On the contrary, they should be severely punished, especially those who imperil the lives of their patrons while pretending to be greatly aiding them.

The activity of the Department is a matter for congratulation. That of itself will have a first class effect upon would-be swindlers of the general public. Some day its patience will be completely exhausted; then persistent violaters of law will get something like adequate punishment they so richly deserve.

NOT A VERY GOOD EXAMPLE.

Once upon a time a certain housekeeper who was a very busy woman concluded she would utilize the telephone instead of making a personal visit to the grocer. Also she determined to try a certain grocer who had often importuned her to become a regular customer. She asked him if he had any good cooking apples. "Prime," was the response over the telephone. Other articles were inquired about and he always had what she wanted and it was of superior quality. So she gave the order.

When the goods came the housekeeper discovered that the apples were sweet, nice looking and good to eat, but not what she had ordered. There was a defect of some sort about every article the grocer sent her. She did not promptly return the goods, as many of her sisters would have done. She had paid for them before she discovered the whole truth and she made up her mind to make no fuss about the matter. But she hasn't bought a penny's worth of goods from that dealer since, and she says she never will.

Now, if this grocer had belonged to the twentieth century, if he had been animated by the scientific exactitude which governs the conduct of the modern salesman, as depicted in an article on another page, he would have told the lady who called him over the telephone the exact truth, so far as he knew it, about the articles he had for sale, then she would have exercised her judgment concerning the eventual purchase. Of the apples he might have said: "No, madame, we do not have any cooking apples at this moment, but we are looking for some. In the meantime we have a sweet apple that looks well and has a delicious sweet taste. Don't you think you would like to try a few? I'm sure the children would enjoy them."

The grocer in that case would have made a friend and retained a good customer. If he failed to make a sale on that particular occasion the lady would not have forgotten his frankness and his courtesy and would have given him a liberal share of her patronage. The chances are that she would have spoken to her friends and commended him as a grocer whose word could be relied upon. And this would have tended to the enlargement of his business. Nobody advertises us more effectively than our friends, the men and women who have confidence in us.

This state contains a great number of grocers who are fully abreast of the spirit of the times. They know that the dealer who is both honest and frank wins widespread patronage and retains the friends he makes.

SALESMANSHIP AS A SCIENCE.

Perhaps an article dealing with the topic indicated by the headline is not wholly appropriate to a pure food publication, and yet there is a vital connection between the two. At least some of us think so. And for that reason we herewith reproduce a recent editorial in the Chicago Tribune:

A hopeful note in the morals of business was struck by the speeches in the annual convention of the National Sales Managers' Association in Chicago, and the temper and sentiments shown and expressed indicated how far salesmanship has progressed from its chaotic conditions of the past into something like a science. These men, representing the selling departments of concerns whose trade covers the entire country, and who do millions of dollars' worth of business annually, were not afraid to place honesty and decency of life and methods as necessary factors in the work of putting their competitive wares upon the market.

The old time salesman with his often dubious methods is now discredited by the majority of concerns. The personnel of the average salesmen is immeasurably raised from that of the brethren on the road a quarter of a century ago, as is the method by which they do business, and the sales managers who direct and control the salesmen are persons who, while never losing sight of the main idea of selling their goods, are trained protagonists of the new spirit of trade, the spirit which recognizes that there is a large element of science even in the smallest transaction of barter and trade.

This recognition has come about through the huge increase in competition, the changed conditions of business, and the fact that salesmanship has attracted the attention of thinkers who have successfully applied to it some of the principles of psychology. That there was any better method of selling goods than the old way, with its ofttimes shady details, its tricks and chicanery, was a subject of ridicule by many for years, but the astonishing results obtained by the alert and intelligent young men who brought to the work minds trained to regard their tasks in the light of an almost exact science have caused salesmanship to be quite revolutionized and to make it a field to be scorned by no man.

NOT AS IN THE OLD DAYS.

Yes, it is quite true that there were no pure food laws in the days of our grandparents and that they enjoyed a reasonable degree of health and of immunity from the malevolent microbes of whose very existence they were ignorant.

This statement meets one with more or less frequency in the journey through life. It is encountered particularly by officers of the state who are charged with the duty of enforcing the pure food laws. Some folks still believe that the modern insistence upon sanitary precautions is all nonsense.

For one thing it needs to be remembered that the familiar saying that each generation is "weaker and wiser" than its predecessor is not true. The new generation knows many things that were a sealed book to former generations, but it is not weaker, not by a long shot. The age of a generation used to be 33 years; now it is said to be over 40.

But then our grandparents did not need pure food laws. The world in which we live is not their world. Nearly everything has undergone a complete revolution. The storekeepers got their goods twice a year. They went "to the city" in the spring and in the fall, returning with an array of goods suitable for the season. Boys who are now men remember what excitement reigned in the village when those goods came. What happiness to be allowed to help unpack them!

Our ancestors bought very little of their food. The grocer sold them coffee, sugar, rice, tea, and a few other articles for the table. Mostly they produced their own food or bought it from their neighbors or the nearby farmers. They all had their gardens; many owned farms of greater or less extent. In any event the food industry as it has developed in modern times was wholly unknown. "Home-grown" and "home-made" were words that could be truthfully used concerning the greater part of the family food in those good old days.

The growth of city population gave the inspiration to the men who inaugurated the wonderful business of manufacturing and supplying the food of the people. There could be no gardens in the city. It was unlawful to keep a pig there. The city denizen depended upon others for what he ate and drank. The business grew to great proportions. The insistent demand for cheapness and the necessity of making the foodstuffs keep for considerable periods of time suggested certain expedients which soon grew to such proportions as to become dangerous; hence the beginning of the agitation.

THE COW.

The dairy cow, if able to express herself in a way which the human family would comprehend, might well lay claim to being man's best friend. She might establish such a claim by calling attention to the fact that from her product and from her carcass man manufactures more of the necessities of life than from any other similar source. She furnishes these necessities to him from infancy until such a time as temporal things are no longer associated with his existence, and she does it ungrudgingly and constantly.

In addition to contributing to man's necessity and his pleasure, the prosperity of an agricultural community is more closely identified with her than with any other of the domestic animals. The horse is quite essential in tilling the soil, but where necessity requires it the sturdy son of the cow can take his place, as he has done in every agricultural section on earth. The horse can only furnish labor and can only return a profit to his owner when conditions are right for returing satisfactory grain crops. It is a well known fact that the dairy cow is the salvation of the farmer in times of poor crops as she is able to convert the rough crops which are never a total failure, into dairy products which always have a cash value.

In addition to this she furnishes skim milk and buttermilk for the calves, pigs and poultry and fertility for the soil, without which a farm becomes less valuable each year and the whole country less prosperous.

The elimination of the dairy cow would necessitate an almost revolutionary readjustment of man's tastes and requirements. It would mean untold suffering and hardship. Of course she will not be dispensed with but her value can perhaps best be appreciated by contemplating such a loss.

She will continue to be man's best friend as long as the human family exists and will keep on supplying him with his greatest needs just as she has done through all the ages.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

Do you think the inquisitive and dangerous fly knew there was a crusade waging against him this summer?

The health of the people is a matter of supreme importance and should command the serious attention of the federal and the state governments.

Milk is a product of such sensitive qualities that the utmost care must be exercised by all who handle it, from the time it leaves the cow until it is prepared for the use of the baby, the invalid or the family.

The dealer who knowingly sells tainted milk to innocent and unsuspecting customers is guilty of an atrocious crime. There are circumstances under which such a dealer may easily become a murderer.

The conscientious dealer is usually the most popular and the most successful in the long run.

The food laws of Pennsylvania are so fairly framed that the dealer who innocently sells adulterated products need suffer no inconvenience. For that reason those who choose to ignore the law have nobody but themselves to blame when they get into trouble.

Many grocers in Pennsylvania are still cherishing such friendly feelings towards the housefly and holding such intimate partnership with it that they haven't the heart to shut it out from the freedom of their berries, fruits, vegetables and such articles.

There is a bit of a flurry between the food commissioner of Indiana and the federal health officials over the mooted question of preservatives in foodstuffs.

The world is getting very much more particular concerning the quality of its food than it used to be. That is one explanation of the gradual lengthening of the life of a generation.

The fly will meet its doom some time. Civilization does not seem able to get along without it yet, however, judging from the results of the "crusade" inaugurated by health authorities.

Another thing the people are beginning to learn is that the wise man eats to live instead of living to eat.

There is a growing impression that those men and women who are most regular in their habits and most moderate in the quantity of food they eat are likely to live longer than their more reckless neighbors.

Absolute purity in food products is never likely to be attained. At the best there will always be a few million malevolent germs about; still, that is no reason why officials or housekeepers should abate their vigilance on behalf of pure food.

The babies of Pennsylvania have not had a particularly pleasant or happy experience during the recent heated term. The summer was more than usually hot; considerable quantities of impure milk seem to have been sold to consumers, some mothers have not known how to care for their infants. And so there are many new made graves in the state, little graves.

The question of the food of the people, the relation of the manufacturers to it, the necessity of vigilance and wise concern by the state, these are exhaustless and perennially interesting themes of discourse.

There isn't a great deal of poetry in the work of enforcing the pure food laws of Pennsylvania but there's a heap of satisfaction that the work done is in the interest of human health and happiness, not to mention the prolongation of life.

Our European friends are increasingly interested in enforcing the idea that the consumer should be the ultimate judge of the sort of food he desires to eat. That is the idea back of every American pure food law now on the statute books.

The grocer who always tries to treat every patron fairly, who keeps the purest food products on his shelves, who never undertakes to deceive anybody, usually wins a wider and a more substantial clientele with each passing year.

The label is the thing to examine, good housewife. It may tell you an interesting and a fateful story.

Some manufacturers of food products act as though the chief duty of life consists in evading pure food law restrictions and endangering the health of the consumer.

The idea back of all pure food laws is a thoroughly admirable one. It is that the purchaser of an article of food has a legal as well as a moral right to the precise article which he believes he is buying.

It is quite as much an offense against good morals to cheat an unsuspecting family respecting an article of food as it would be to rob the family pantry of its Sunday dinner.

Oleomargarine may be a perfectly harmless product; still there are men and women in the world who prefer genuine butter and their inclinations should be respected.

The healthiest folks are by no means the heaviest eaters. The reverse is generally the case. A little food slowly eaten, carefully chewed and moistened only by the natural juices produced in the mouth of the eater will do far more good than a large quantity bolted down because the eater is in a hurry. Men and women are beginning to understand and act upon this very important truth.

The figures show that the Dairy and Food Division has been more than self-sustaining during the past year. This is not required; still it should be some satisfaction to the taxpayers to know that the food laws are being enforced without any cost to law-abiding citizens.

The Chicago Tribune is puzzled over the persistency with which some manufacturers of food products in its thriving city violate the pure food laws. It is quite right in the assumption that the head of the business is not guiltless and that imprisonment for that head is the only thing that will bring about a reform in methods.

Pure beverages are as essential to health as pure foods. This state has an admirable lot of laws dealing with foodstuffs and non-alcoholic beverages. The next Legislature will be confidently expected to enact a measure supplementing the national food and drugs act to prohibit the manufacture and sale of adulterated liquors.

The festive fly has not gone yet, in spite of the war waged against him in many quarters during the summer. He is a very persistent creatur,e as most who have anything to do with him well know, and he seems to have as many lives as a cat. And yet it is true that more has been done this year to dethrone him than ever before.

Even when one succeeds in evading the law and cheating justice the results are not always agreeable.

In a matter so important as the health of a whole people too much pains cannot be taken concerning food and drink.

The good genius of the grocer warns him to take no risks with unguaranteed goods. The law protects him thoroughly if he acquaints himself with its provisions and takes pains to obey them.

Any manufacturer who deliberately adulterates the food products he manufactures deserves a prolonged residence in the penitentiary and justice will never get her own until he goes there.

There are sneak thieves who are a whole lot more respectable than the rich man who seeks to add to his millions by giving the people unfit or poisoned food.

The fortunate thing about this our mortal life is that the benevolent microbes are far more numerous and powerful, as a general thing, than their malignant enemies.

It is still true that "honesty is the best policy." Perhaps those who undertake to practice it as a mere matter of policy frequently find themselves failing miserably; yet, on the whole, it proves a far better advertiser than crookedness.

The judicious dealer seldom undertakes to evade the law or to hoodwink his patrons. The law has a habit of making it rather expensive for those who plan to get by it, while the customer, hood winked too often, has a habit of changing grocers. And no sensible person will greatly wonder. It is about what one might expect to happen, because it is just what has always happened in other years.

There will be no controversy between the dairyman and his patron if he undertakes to supply genuine milk, free from adulteration of all sorts. Nor will the sensible mother resent as a liberty the kindly warning of the dealer when he advises her to carefully protect the milk from contamination after it has passed into her keeping. One cannot be too cautious when the life of the baby is involved in the quality of the milk supply.

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE.

Under the foregoing heading the Chicago Tribune indulges in the following statements, reflections and suggestions:

"New suits for violations of the pure food law have been started against several Chicago manufacturers. They are charged, some of them not for the first time, with adulterating and misbranding. Why should these prosecutions be necessary? The pure food law has been in force for some time. Its provisions should be, and doubtless are, familiar to manufacturers. Confessedly it is hard to teach an old dog new tricks, but that ought not to be true of intelligent business men.

"It was the duty of a manufacturer, after the passage of the pure food law, to order all his subordinates to quit calling cotton seed oil olive oil, or Santos coffee pure Java. Where such orders were given the presumption is that they were obeyed. No employe would deliberately set about getting his employer into trouble with the federal authorities. If he did, he would surely be detected and unceremoniously dismissed. If he were to plead that he wished to make a little more money for his employers that would not save him.

"It looks as if in these cases of false labels and adulterated goods the man higher up or the man highest up were the guilty party. It was so in the New York sugar frauds. The elaborate system of false weighing was devised or was connived at by men in high places. The head of a great company engaged in the manufacture of food products, or the men who come next to him cannot be ignorant of an extensive misbranding of their goods.

"They are the men who will have to be brought into court ultimately if the imposition of small fines does not reform them."

No; small fines will not reform them. Many of them laugh at the practice of the government in returning their confiscated goods after they have promised not to expose them to sale in pure food territory or in imposing small fines, which do not materially affect their profits,

They feel like the violaters of Pennsylvania's Sunday laws that it is no great risk one runs since the fine is a mere bagatelle. They do not take the matter seriously.

Now, this is all wrong. The manufacturer knows precisely what his products contain. If they are adulterated the adulteration is done with his knowledge and consent. The only cure for a case like this is imprisonment at labor for a sufficient term to enable the offender to come to his senses.

A SELF-SUSTAINING BUREAU.

Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust makes the following report of the operations of his Bureau during Governor Stuart's administration, including the period from January, 1907, to August 1, 1910. The number of food samples of all classes, including soft drinks, confections and condiments, analyzed was 23,571. Total number of cases prosecuted and terminated was 2,093, of which 861 were cases under the Oleomargarine Act. The amount of fines collected on account of these cases was $105,964.84, of which $63,243.44 was received from Oleomargarine Fines. In addition to these fines for violations of the Oleomargarine Law, eleven defendants were given jail sentences ranging from twenty days to six months. The amount of fees received from oleomargarine licenses was $176,410.14, and from Renovated Butter licenses $5,385.84. The total receipts from all sources were $287,760.82. The total disbursements for the same period were $279,049.37. These figures show that the Bureau was $8,711.45 more than self-sustaining.

From this statement it is clear that during the present administration, with its active enforcement of the food laws, the receipts of the office have been more than sufficient to defray the cost of this branch of the public service. The Commissioner states that his Bureau is not to be regarded as a revenue collecting agency, because its purpose, first and last, is to protect the consumer from the public sale of food injurious to health and from fraudulent labeling. It should be understood that under present laws all receipts of the office are turned directly into the State Treasury for the use of the Commonwealth and all its expenses are paid from specific appropriations made by the Legislature; so that as a matter of fact the Bureau is not dependent upon receipts from fines for the funds necessary to enable it to perform its duty.

The taxpayer will, nevertheless, be gratified to know that effective service can be maintained under the existing laws without the imposition of an additional burden upon him.

A CREAMERY TRUST.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 19, 1910.

The oleomargarine interests have accepted the present era of general opposition to combinations which increase prices on the necessities of life, particulary food products, to proclaim that the dairymen of the country are attempting to drive oleomargarine out of existence so that they can boost the price of butter; that they seek to create a monopoly or some sort of trust that will take from the poorer classes of people both butter and the opportunity to purchase a substitute.

Of course such claims are unfounded and are absolutely nonsensical, but they accomplish their purpose among certain classes of people who are both unfamiliar with the creamery business and frightened over the question of prices for food products.

The impossibility of such a thing was well pointed out by Hon. Andrew French, Dairy and Food Commissioner of Minnesota, at the last oleomargarine hearing, as follows:

"If there is any possibility of a creamery trust, if there exists in the mind of any member of this committee or of any other person an idea that there is an opportunity for the organization, let alone the perpetuation, of a creamery trust by the combining of those several co-operative creameries, I want to say that that individual has not the proper conception of the average agricultural mind. It requires considerable ingenuity upon the part of the local co-operative creamery manager, as you can imagine and some of us well know, to conduct the business of the creamery itself in such a manner as to be generally satisfactory to the patrons of that plant. Then how much more difficult would it be to satisfy the individual members of these several creamery associations in the combining, or attempt at combination, of these several associations into one great organization, which you and I might denominate, and as some of them have denominated in their imagination, a dairy or a creamery trust?"

INTOXICATING MEDICINES.

The government has been a long time arriving at a determination to check the sale of intoxicating medicines. At last it has decided to compel drug and other stores handling some 200 patent preparations, the principal ingredient of which is alcohol, or rum, or whiskey, or what not of that kind, to take out federal licenses. Possession of such a license and the purveying of concoctions that have been placed on the internal revenue ban list will serve as conclusive evidence for the prosecution by local authorities in regions where public sentiment is opposed to the traffic. This is expected to help considerably in enforcing better conditions, says the Pittsburg Gazette-Times

The most prosperous fields for the sale of this brand of "medicine" are the Indian reservations of the west or points adjacent thereto. The law with respect to the introduction of liquor on reservations is severe, the penalty heavy, and, as a rule, enforcement is rigid. This is a regulation in the interest of peace, life and property, but storekeepers have evaded it by means of alleged medicines. It is a fact which any observer may note for himself that in some of these establishments the quantity of medicine is scandalously in excess of the amount of any other kind of goods in the place. The result is to make the Indian problem more difficult and the expense of patroling more expensive than it ought to be. Then there are the known and accepted prohibition territories of various states. These have been made so by the votes of the people, but the expressed will of the people of the community is defied and what good repute the "drys" might otherwise enjoy is besmirched through the machinations of merchants and medicine men who see only the abnormal profits and care little for the immorality or injurious effects of the system. Besides, irrespective of these considerations, in sections where the liquor business is legalized the unrestricted traffic in strong medicines is unfair to men who pay lawful fees to the state for the right to conduct a bar. They are entitled to protection under the statutes as long as they have a legal status.

Speaking on the same subject, the Pittsburg Post says: One of the essential facts in a democratic brain connects with the ideas of the largest measure of personal liberty. But the rational democrat readily reconciles this fundamental principle with the supreme notion of strict obedience to just law. Hence when we consider the Commissioner of Internal Revenue lists 200 preparations which drug stores may not sell without payment of a regular government liquor license, there ensues a feeling of satisfaction over law enforcement, and not one particle of resentment because individual license is obstructed. It does not transcend the fair and valid province of the Treasury Department to exact a regulation liquor license from druggists who sell decoctions wherein alcohol is the known principal ingredient. It is a fraud upon the national revenue, it furnishes a method of elusion to the drunkard, and it is an unfair invasion of the privileges of the recognized saloon keepers, whose business, so long as it is licensed, deserves ordinary justice, whatever we may think of its detrimental consequences. Hence, we would commend the new orders to demand government licenses of sellers of alcoholic preparations, and the exaction of state saloon licenses would not far transgress fair play. There is no infringement of personal liberty, but only the suppression of the dodge. If the drug store patron desires a medicine he should be compelled to swallow it in prescribed doses, and not guzzle it as whiskey.

INCREASED COST OF LIVING.

The Senate committee appointed to investigate the high cost of living, in its report stated that various causes were responsible for the prevailing high prices. According to the report it is due in part to the disproportionate drift of population away from the farm to the cities, and that there has been a disproportionate increase in demand due to higher standards of living. In addition the committee finds that there are a variety of contributary abuses, all of which have had their part in the advance in prices. According to the report wholesale prices in the United States in 1909 as measured by the prices of 257 commodities included in the price index number of the Bureau of Labor advanced 3 per cent. over 1908 and 14.5 per cent. over 1900. The price in 1909, however, was 2.3 per cent. below the high point reached in 1907. Beginning with September, 1908, wholesale prices increased month by month without a break until March, 1910, when prices were 21.1 per cent. higher than the average for the year 1900 and 18.5 per cent. above the price in March, 1900.

Some of the causes contributing to the advance in prices given by the committee are: Increased cost of production of farm products by reason of higher land values and higher wages; increased demand for farm products and food; shifting of population from food producing to food consuming occupations and localities; immigration to food consuming localities; reduced fertility of land, resulting in lower average of production or in increased expenditures for fertilization; increased banking facilities in agricultural localities which enable farmers to hold their crops and market them to the best advantage, which results in steadying prices but also tends to advance prices; reduced supply convenient to transportation facilities of such commodities as timber; cold storage plants which result in preventing extreme fluctuations of prices of certain commodities with the seasons, but by enabling the wholesalers to buy and sell at the best possible advantage; increased cost of distribution; industrial combinations; organizations of producer or dealers; advertising; increased money supply; overcapitalization; higher standard of living.

The cause of the advance can best be discussed by first indicating the groups of commodities in which the advances have occurred during the period from 1900 to 1909. The general wholesale price level in the United States represented by 257 commodities advanced 14.5 per cent. Farm products advanced 39.8 per cent.; food, etc., 19.7 per cent.; lumber and building material advanced 19.6 per cent.; miscellaneous commodities advanced 14.7; clothes and clothing advanced 12; fuel and lighting advanced 6.9; house furnishing goods advanced 5.3; metals and implements advanced 3.6; drugs and chemicals declined 2.9. The per cent. of advance in farm products was twice as great as in any other group of commodities. The second greatest advance was in the food group, and the third greatest in lumber and building material. A somewhat different grouping of the commodities presents further information relative to the nature of the present advance. The 257 commodities included in the United States Bureau of Labor compilation upon which the above statements are based divide, naturally, into several groups as follows:

Groups.	Number of commodities.
Products of the farm crude,	22
Products of the farm, manufactured,	45
Products of forests,	13
Products of mines and wells,	11
Products of the fisheries,	4
Products of manufacture,	134
Products imported,	17
Products not quoted for whole period,	11

The greatest increase between 1900 and 1909 was in products of the forests, which increased 40.3 per cent. The second greatest increase was in crude products of the farm, 36.1 per cent. The seven groups are arranged in the order of increase in the following statement:

Group.	Per cent. above 1909.
Products of the forest,	40.3
Products of the farm, crude,	36.1
Products of the farm, manufactured,	24.2
Products of mines and wells,	13.5
Products of manufacture,	5.7
Products of fisheries,	5.1
Products imported,	1.7

From the preceding statement it is seen that under both groups the greatest advances have taken place in products of the soil. The demand for the products of the forests has resulted in a rapid consumption of the available supply in the United States. The forests are of slow growth and the greatest consumption has taken place without any particular attempt to replace the timber consumed. The only other groups of commodities which show what may be termed extraordinary advances are the crude farm products and the manufactured farm products. The commodities are of domestic production and come either directly from the soil, or are produced by, or manufactured from farm products.

HENS THAT LAY BAD EGGS.

There has been a good deal of newspaper discussion lately as to what "strictly fresh eggs," the real kind are, says the Grocers' Magazine, and a Washington paper suggested that the public should be able to buy six dozen strictly fresh eggs for a dollar in April and at least three dozen for a dollar in mid-winter. A New Jersey man calls attention to the fact that hens lay many rotten eggs, due to the unhealthy condition of the hens, the result often of the careless way in which they are fed. Many hens, he says, are given diseased animal food and refuse grain. The average farmer pays little attention to his hens, picking up eggs when he finds them and selling them for the best price he can get, always as fresh eggs, because they are newly laid, although a portion of them are rotten when laid. A hen raiser near Boston tells the Grocers' Magazine that he found not long ago that one of his hens laid a rotten egg every day, the result being that he killed the hen as soon as he made sure which one it was. The hen was diseased although there was nothing about her to indicate it. This man says that if you give a hen garlic or onions in her food that in two days an egg from the hen will be strongly flavored with the garlic or onion.

The up-to-date poultry man keeps his poultry houses clean, feeds his hens good, clean food, gets good eggs as a result, and his eggs always command or should always command a premium. He gathers his eggs every day and ships them the day they are gathered. It costs a great deal of money to carry on a poultry place in the right way and with feed as high as it has been lately there isn't money enough in it to enable the up-to-date poultryman to compete in price with the careless farmer whose eggs are never really worth fancy winter prices, although they get to the market as "strictly fresh eggs" just the same. Numerous men known as "egg collectors" visit country districts in search of eggs, especially when they are high, buying everything in the way of eggs they can find where they do not have to pay high prices. These eggs are passed off as "strictly fresh"—an outrage on dealers and public and a thorn in the side of the scientific poultryman.

BOUQUET FOR OUR FOOD LAW.

Nearly two years' experience with the Pennsylvania food law leads the grocer to the belief that it is a pretty good law and one to which the grocer can readily conform, says The Grocers' Review. The editor of that journal goes on and says:

"We believe that no change should be attempted by the next Legislature. Indeed, we believe we have the model to which the other states might conform to consummate uniformity, but we would recommend to the Legislatures of other states that they incorporate in their laws a provision prohibiting the giving of any premium or evidence of a premium with any article of food, as premiums tend to lower qualities and increase cost by secretly reducing quantities."

HOW TO KILL FLIES IN SHOW CASES.

The Michigan Tradesman gives this recipe for killing flies in show cases: Take a small glass mortar, or other suitable container, place in it a small sponge and pour on the sponge from one to three ounces of formaldehyde. The amount of formaldehyde will depend upon the size of the case. Place the mortar containing the formaldehyde in the case and close the door tightly. This can be done in the evening. In from twelve to twenty-four hours all the flies will be dead. The formaldehyde may then be removed. The gas liberated will in no way damage the goods in the case.

OLEOMARGARINE MOONSHINING.

The Dairy Record says: The Federal authorities have been giving considerable attention to oleomargarine "moonshining" the past few weeks, especially in Chicago, and it may be of interest to read an extract from the testimony of Mr. Cabell, United States Commissioner of Internal Revenue, given at the recent oleomargarine hearings. He explains the operations of these "moonshiners" as follows:

"If a man is going into this business on a big scale he will buy ten 60 pound packages. They are boxes, or tubs, or firkins, as they are called, holding 60 pounds, and each one has a stamp on the end of it stating the name of the manufacturer, and the date and so forth and showing that it is artificially colored and tax paid at the rate of ten cents a pound; it is in bulk, 60 pounds in it. He gets 600 pounds and pays the price, which includes the $60 tax. He puts that in his place of business and sells out of these various boxes, but he never lets them get quite empty. The law requires that when these boxes get empty the stamp shall be destroyed. The courts have decided that so long as these boxes or receptacles contain any quantity of merchantable oleomargarine they are not empty, and consequently they cannot destroy the stamp. Now having let the contents of these boxes or firkins get down to a pound or two pounds each, he will buy a great number of cases of oleomargarine stamped at a quarter of a cent a pound and have them delivered to his store. You will find them in the upper floor incased in pressed steel sheets, or we have found them in the basement or rooms adjoining the store; it depends on what chances a man is willing to take; and he will have on that upper floor or in the basement or adjoining room a little apparatus for heating. You do not have to heat it very hot; less than 100 degrees will make the material plastic; then he will have a little churn in there, sometimes worked by a gasoline engine and sometimes worked by hand power, and he will take those packages of uncolored oleomargarine and put them in this room, where they will be heated until they become plastic, and he will have his coloring matter mixed with a little milk or something like that, stir it up and have it in the churn; he will just pour his uncolored oleomargarine into the churn, have his colored package empty, all except one pound, and convenient, give the dasher half a dozen turns, and pour the product out in the package with his ten cent stamp and he is safe."

The reason they are thus able to violate the law with impunity is because the internal revenue officers do not possess the same authority in enforcing the Grout law that they enjoy in enforcing other revenue measures.

Congressman Tawney, of Minnesota, pointed out this defect when he testified before the committe, as follows:

"Now that fraud can be perpetuated only in secret, and as Mr. Cabell stated to this committee one of the serious defects in the existing law is the fact that the courts have held that the inclusion of certain sections of our internal revenue law in the present oleomargarine law excludes all others, and the section of the internal revenue law which permits the courts on the application of an internal revenue officer to issue a search warrant does not apply in the enforcement of the present oleomargarine law, and that not applying it is therefore impossible for the agents of the government charged with collecting this revenue to make any search of premises where they have reason to believe the fraudulent manufacture is carried on for the practice detailed here by the commissioner constitutes that man a manufacturer, and he would be subject to a tax of $600 a year and in addition to that a tax of ten cents a pound on the product which he is thus fraudulently manufacturing. The right of search is, therefore, one of the chief essentials in the enforcement of this internal revenue law, as well as in the enforcement of all our other internal revenue laws, but the government does not at present possess the right under the decision of the courts."

PURE FOOD LAWS.

The rigid application of the pure food law in the United States, remarks the Food Law Bulletin, has accomplished a vast amount of good, and Congress is given great credit for its enactment.

There may be some difference of opinion regarding the use of benzoate of soda and of the practice of bleaching flour by the Alsop process, but no such difference of opinion exists regarding the wisdom and necessity of the law itself. Other countries have pure food laws and they are rigorously enforced. The German laws are especially drastic, and offenders are severely punished. Dealers or producers who are found guilty of offending against the pure food law as it is popularly called, and suffer a penalty affecting their personal liberty are subject, for three years after the expiration of their term of punishment to have the premises in which the incriminating objects have been sold, stored or produced supervised as frequently as conditions may warrant. The severity of the law may be judged from the fact that gross offenders may be punished with lifelong imprisonment with hard labor.

A public laboratory at Plauen, in Saxony, makes a specialty of examining all kinds of food, that may, under certain circumstances, be injurious when made in part of deleterious substances, as well as all kinds of utensils. The German federal law authorizes the police to secure, upon payment, from dealers for examination in the established laboratories all kinds of food products, toys, carpets, paints, eating, drinking and cooking utensils, and kerosene.

It is incumbent upon the laboratory at Plauen to take annually for chemical analysis, for each thousand inhabitants in the neighborhood, thirty miscellaneous samples purchased of different dealers. At the same time the samples are bought the store and adjacent rooms may be inspected. Only after preliminary warning has been found to be of no avail is a guilty producer or dealer punished with fine or imprisonment or both. The supervising officials instruct and help by giving information concerning the condition and preparation of various classes of goods. Suspicious samples brought to the laboratory by purchasers were examined free of charge, in the interest of the public. One result of the inspection of food product is the prevention of illegal competition and underbidding, especially through the detection of foreign substances that may have been added to the product.

MILK AND ITS RELATION TO HEALTH.

Charles K. Holmberg, Commissioner of Health and Civic Beauty, at Grand Junction, Col., has this to say about milk and its relation to health: All authorities are agreed on the food value of clean, pure milk for adults as well as for children, but uncleanly, unwholesome milk is not only one of the filthiest foods that one can put into the stomach but very dangerous to the health. Being a great absorbent, milk exposed to impure air and bad odors readily becomes contaminated with impurities and micro-organisms. This fact cannot be too strongly impressed upon the people. At this season it is very important that special care be taken of the milk in the home. Milk obtained from perfectly healthy cows will become a hotbed of germ development if not kept perfectly protected from dirt and infection. This is especially true in summer, when the temperature is most favorable for the rapid development and growth of all kinds of germ life. When milk is kept at a temperature of 70 degrees Fahrenheit the development of germ life occurs with amazing rapidity, and at a still higher temperature the multiplication is much greater. A few germs present in the milk delivered in the morning will increase so rapidly at a temperature above 70 degrees that, after standing twelve hours or more, it will contain enough of them to transmit disease to any susceptible person. When these facts are understood it will become evident to every householder that the milk in the house should be protected against every infection and micro-organism, and that it be kept at a temperature which will retard the multiplication of the germs that may be present when the milk is delivered. First it should be protected from the rays of the sun and from flies. During the warm weather it should be placed in the ice box or refrigerator immediately after delivery by the milk man. Care should be taken that the bottle or can is covered at all times to protect the same against flies and dirt. Filthy and unwholesome milk cannot always be traced to the door of the dairyman. Milk should be properly handled in the home. At this season the bottle or can should be kept on ice. At meal time or when feeding the baby, the required amount of milk should be taken from the original bottle. To place the bottle on the table exposes the milk to dust and flies and leads to its warming and to the rapid development of bacteria which it may contain. Pour out whatever is needed for the meal or for the baby and leave the original bottle in the ice box or refrigerator with the cap replaced. A safe and convenient way of closing the mouth of the bottle is to invert a small drinking glass over the neck of the bottle. Every bottle should be cleansed before returning to the milk dealer. The proper way to clean the bottles is to first rinse them in cold water, then scrub with warm water and soap, and finally rinse with clean hot water. Unwashed bottles may become very foul before they are returned to the dairyman and properly washed. No housekeeper should return unwashed bottles to the milkman during the summer or in fact at any time.

DAIRY PRODUCTS AS FOOD.

The products of the dairy are perhaps the most useful included in the human diet, remarks the South Bethlehem Globe. A meal made up of dishes into which no product of the dairy cow enters would not be such as to inspire confidence. "The turnpike road to the people's heart lies through their mouths, or I mistake mankind," says a writer on health. Take away the butter for the bread, the cream for the coffee and the porridge, the shortening in the crusts and the biscuits, the milk in the gravy and puddings, the cream for the dessert and the various kinds of cheese which please and satisfy, then take away the cup of milk for the little one and the meal that would be left would be neither tempting nor nutritious.

The health of the people depends so much on an adequate supply of pure dairy products that even a scarcity is always attended by suffering and death.

Butter is sometimes referred to as a luxury. This is a mistake, say health experts. Butter is not a luxury, but one of the necessities of life, and its composition is such that nothing can take its place and perform the same functions. It is nature's product compounded in accordance with nature's laws, a law which man can imitate but cannot understand. The animal body is developed best by foods which have been little manipulated by man and machinery. Dairy products are, as a rule, consumed nearly as nature produced them. This is particularly true of milk upon which the growing body must depend. In the case of butter only a small percentage of other products is added to the fat extracted from the milk. Man only manipulates it in order to put it in convenient shape for use. It can be still termed a product of nature, designed as only nature can design for use as food by the human body.

THE COCOA BEAN PRODUCT.

Within fifteen years the world's crop of raw cocoa beans has increased from 75,000 to 205,000 tons. Should the Gold Coast crop continue to increase at its present ratio, and all other crops remain stationary, by 1913 the world's crop will have reached 360,000 tons, and hence by that time the Gold Coast singly, with a crop of 180,000 tons, will be producing as much raw cocoa as the world now consumes. While the cocoa crop from 1903 to 1909 increased 65 per cent., the nine leading consuming nations advanced their requirements by only about 60 per cent. The United States imported 53,378 tons of beans in 1909, with Germany 40,724, and the United Kingdom, 24,264, following. The indications are that prices will drop sharply for the next few years unless production is limited.

MILK BOTTLES.

New York state has a law requiring that after next January all bottles for milk or cream be full measure. The name of the owner of the bottle must be blown in the same. A heavy penalty is provided for dealers using bottles not so marked. In Massachusetts dealers are required to use bottles with their names stamped in them, but the law is of little use, as it is impossible to prevent the constant exchange of bottles, much milk being delivered before daylight in the morning and often milk intended for two families is left on the same step. The milkmen are, therefore, obliged to use other milkmen's bottles, occasionally coming into possession of some with their own names on them after they have once gone out.

THE STATE'S LAWS AGAINST FOOD ADULTERATION.

There are better ways of treating the laws of the Commonwealth than by clamoring about their defects or criticising the manner of their enforcement.

This is true of all laws; we think it is specially and emphatically true of the laws regulating the manufacture and sale of the food of the people.

Here in Pennsylvania we have a body of laws for the protection of the consumer that have no superior either in the nation or the states. Perhaps they can be improved, but they are well adapted to the purpose of their creation.

The laws regulating the sale of milk have been criticised very severely by some dairymen who felt that the State was exacting too much of them for the sum they procure from their patrons. But after their attention had been called to the vital importance of pure milk to the little ones of the State the majority acquiesced and gladly complied with the law.

An overwhelming majority of the retail dealers of Pennsylvania are sincerely and cordially supporting the laws concerning food. They are anxious to deal in nothing that is of an injurious or false nature and the timely aid they have given the Dairy and Food Bureau has been greatly appreciated by the Commissioner and his assistants.

Many of the manufacturers are doing well by the consuming public. It has been impressed upon their minds that to them the State must look in the end for the purity of the food of the people. They have advanced the standard of manufacture and have endeavored to show their willingness to deal fairly by the State, the retailers and the consumer.

Considered as a whole the situation is all that could be expected, if not quite all that could be desired. Here and there one finds a manufacturer who thinks more of the "Almighty Dollar" than he does of the health of the consuming public or of his own good name But the majority are not inclined that way.

Now if the consumer will simply aid the officers who are trying to enforce the law and the dealers who are trying to obey it by carefully examining the labels of all goods purchased they will render a real service to themselves and all honest dealers and promote the cause of righteousness in food manufacture.

PAYING ITS OWN WAY.

The events of the year thus far in the administration of the food laws show that the Dairy and Food Division of the State Department of Agriculture has been conducted without any cost to the taxpayers. On the contrary, as has been stated already, there has been a handsome surplus to the credit of the bureau after the cost of administration was deducted.

While it has not been the aim of the division to secure such a result there is some gratification in the thought that if men were determined to violate the various acts of Assembly regulating the manufacture and sale of articles of food the agents of the State have been sufficiently vigilant to detect the offenders and to bring them face to face with justice. The more efficiently the laws are administered, the more certainty there is that Justice will come into her own, the less likelihood of extensive violations of law.

There has been a constant effort to supervise the situation from month to month. The agents of the bureau have been kept busy in securing samples of food products which have been properly analyzed and reported upon by the chemists employed to determine the quality of the samples taken. The results of the investigations have been promptly reported to the Dairy and Food Commissioner and whenever adulterations have been detected and reported instructions have been promptly issued looking to the prosecution of the offender. This accounts, in part, for the fact that the office has been self-sustaining. It is in accordance with the conviction that eternal vigilance is the price of freedom from dangerous adulteration of the food of the people.

And yet, while the receipts of the Dairy and Food office have been large it is not to be inferred that the State contains a great number of reckless dealers who are constantly defying the food laws. Such is not the case. The greater part of the food sold in this Commonwealth during the present year has been pure and healthy. There has been a general and sincere effort upon the part of most manufacturers and retailers to live up to the requirements of the law and to furnish their trusting patrons nothing that does not comply strictly with the requirements of the various acts of Assembly.

We are still hoping that the day is not far distant when there will be no conscious violations of the food laws of Pennsylvania. That will be a great hour for manufacturers and dealers as well as for consumers.

LET NO GUILTY MAN ESCAPE.

The truth of the matter is that very few manufacturers of foodstuffs which fail to comply with the requirements of the national food and drugs act are in any way intimidated by governmental interference which simply puts them to a little temporary inconvenience, if they are found out and requires them to be more careful in the future or to sell their products beyond the jurisdiction of the United States.

Under existing circumstances no manufacturer who is determined to get all he can out of the consuming public in the shortest possible period and who has permitted greed to lull his conscience to sleep, need concern himself greatly about consequences until after he has been arrested for the second time on a charge of violating the national law. Then, indeed, it would be up to the government to teach him a salutary lesson.

But it may be many months before the food adulterator is caught in his crookedness. He may go on week after week, month after month and even year after year selling an inferior product and getting big prices for it. Nobody among the consumers knows what's the matter with the stuff and if he did he would probably say nothing about it. The government officers do not fall upon his goods for purposes of examination and analysis and he is in no immediate danger.

He takes the risk, as the gambler takes the risk, as the counterfeiter takes the risk, as all manner of criminals take the risk. But he has a decided advantage over his fellow violaters of law. For whereas they are always in danger of the law's extreme penalty he knows that for him nothing worse will follow detection than the necessity to pay the costs of the proceedings and to give a bond conditioned upon refraining from selling that particular lot of goods within the jurisdiction of the United States. He knows he will not even run the risk of having his goods confiscated unless decomposition has actually set in.

It is the opinion of some students of human nature that so long as such a condition of affairs continues to exist laws will be violated and the federal food and drink law ignored by many unscrupulous manufacturers. It is their belief that adulterated or misbranded goods should be confiscated wherever and whenever found and totally destroyed. They think that food which is not fit to be sold to the people of the United States should not be sent abroad out of motives of common humanity, not to mention trade considerations and the proper desire to preserve our nation's good name.

WHY TAKE WHOLLY UNNECESSARY RISKS?

The average grocer has no chemical knowledge. He must accept the word of the jobber or wholesaler or manufacturer from whom he purchases his goods. For that reason the State of Pennsylvania makes generous provisions for his protection, so arranging matters that if he can produce a guaranty from the person from whom he bought adulterated or misbranded goods the penalty for violation of law does not fall upon him. In case he has such a guarantee and ceases to sell the goods after they have been condemned, he is clear, having committed no offense under the law.

Here and there a retail dealer gets into serious trouble because he chooses to disregard law. Perhaps he has never taken the trouble to read it, although it vitally affects his business and it ought to greatly concern him to familiarize himself with its contents. Sometimes he acts as though he believed himself superior to law, the one individual in the State who can do precisely as he pleases without being any the worse off or paying the penalty. Sometimes he means to get a guaranty from the next person who sells him a bill of goods but he forgets to bother about it at the proper time.

Here and there a dealer takes the proper precautions and gets his guaranty all right. Presently it is discovered that he has been selling goods which do not come up to the standard prescribed by the laws of the Commonwealth. He is duly notified. But instead of taking the defective article from his shelves or ceasing to sell it he keeps right on, either in actual ignorance of the requirements of the act or in the belief that nothing will happen. Perhaps he is arrested and fined. Great is his surprise—real or imaginary—and severe his anger against the State and its officers. He totally ignores the broad fact that he alone is responsible for whatever of expense or annoyance or worse may come to him.

It is the duty of all retail dealers in Pennsylvania to familiarize themselves with the provisions of the laws affecting their business and then to obey them implicitly. This is the only safe path. All experiments outside the beaten way are risky. Sometimes they are very expensive. In nine cases out of ten they are followed by serious trouble. Those who persist in violating law, in face of repeated warnings must even accept the hardships that Fate brings them. And if they are fair-minded they will be above blaming the law or its representatives for the difficulties produced by their own stubbornness, folly or inattention.

CLEANLINESS PROMOTIVE OF HEALTH.

Dr. W. S. Wheeler, health commissioner of Kansas City, Missouri, returned to his home city from the recent meeting of the American Public Health Association, in Milwaukee, according to the Kansas City Star. Now it is the pies, says the Star. They are to be wrapped in paraffine paper. And the men who handle these pies fresh from the factories by the wagon load must have health certificates. This order is accompanied by a similar one requiring bakers' bread to be wrapped also. "We have to do these things," Dr. Wheeler said. "Other cities are ahead of us. We are trailing behind in many things."

The doctor added that he had taken the matter up with the leading bakers and pie producers. Some are disposed to protest. The doctor thinks he can show that it will pay them to obey the order. It will create better appetites for that class of food and more housewives will be induced to forego baking at home when they can buy bread and pies properly guarded against contamination.

They likewise have a food screening ordinance in Kansas City. The health commissioner says that while it is not the measure that the health department endorsed the department means to enforce it to the letter. All dealers must supply themselves with screens and glass cases. Those who neglect the matter will be brought to task after a few days have passed, just enough to give them time to make the necessary arrangements.

Cleanliness is the order of the day concerning articles not only of food, in Missouri, but throughout the country. While there may be an impression in some quarters that the malevolent microbe has been slightly overworked it is clear that carelessness has cost many lives, is costing many now and that a little care in the preparation and keeping of food products is going to return large dividends in the way of increased vigor, continued health and prolonged life.

It should not be forgotten, however, that the increased care necessary in the manufacture of articles of food imposes additional expense upon the manufacturer and the dealer. For that reason a moderate advance in price should not be resented by the consumer. It is far better to pay a little more for an article that can be depended upon to be exactly what it claims to be than to get a cheaper article and then pay out a considerable sum to the doctor and the druggist, not to mention the undertaker.

Cleanliness is not only akin to godliness; it is also the essential thing if one would preserve the health and protect the lives of dear ones

THE TEN PER CENT. TAX.

E. K. Slater, secretary of the National Dairy Union, says:

The present oleomargarine law which provides for a tax of ten cents per pound upon artificially colored oleomargarine does not prevent fraud in the sale of oleomargarine. Congress intended to make the manufacture of yellow oleomargarine unprofitable so that oleomargarine should not be made to look like butter. In framing the law, Congress failed to "reckon with its host." The manufacturers of this butter substitute soon devised means for producing their product without artificially coloring it. So largely is this done that only enough tubs of artificially colored oleomargarine is produced to furnish enough packages from which to sell the yellow stuff from stamped packages into which tub after tub is emptied before the original tub is quite empty. Dealers are not required to destroy the stamp until the tub is empty, hence it takes a long time to empty it.

In doing this, even when selling the product for just what it is, the dealer can demand an exorbitant price (just a few cents less than for butter) and throw the blame on the ten cent tax when in reality the stuff is taxed at only one-fourth of a cent per pound.

This fact should be kept in mind; less than three per cent. of the oleomargarine put upon the market has been tax paid at ten cents per pound. Quote this when an uninformed friend refers to that "burdensome tax" on oleomargarine.

The present law needs amending so that it will prevent fraud. Oleomargarine men insist that its weakness is a reason for its repeal. The National Dairy Union insists that its weakness is a reason for its amendment so that it will be effective in preventing fraud.

ARE THEY SINCERE?

An uninformed listener at the oleomargarine hearings last spring might have gained the impression that both sides to the controversy were seeking the same results. Nearly every witness who appeared before the committee emphasized that his whole aim was to prevent the fraudulent sale of oleomargarine. He was anxious to protect the buyer of butter against oleomargarine and the buyer of oleomargarine against butter. The oleomargarine people were loud in their claims that they want their product to sell for just what it is and that they wish to build up a reputation for their product upon its own merits.

They even went so far as to attempt to prove that the person who consumes dairy products is in danger of contracting tuberculosis and that oleomargarine is a more healthful article of food.

Let us see if these two claims will bear an analysis. If they are sincere in their position that they wish to have their product sell upon its own merits, why are dairy terms used in putting it upon the market? Why is it necessary to call it "Jersey," "Holstein," "Creamery," etc., "butterine" and why do they use the word "dairy," "creamery," etc., in the names of their companies?

If dairy products are not healthful, why are they used in the manufacture of oleomargarine and why is the wholesale price of the product regulated by the percentage of dairy products in it?

It is not unreasonable to conclude that they are not sincere in making these claims. If they are not, then is it reasonable to conclude that they are sincere in whatever specific remedies they may propose for the accomplishment of the purpose to which they claim to be committed?

Let no one be deceived by the scheme which they have presented in the Burleson bill for preventing fraud in the sale of oleomargarine. Would you follow the suggestions made by a law violator in formulating a plan to compel observance of law? If not, then don't be deceived into believing that the oleomargarine interests really wish to prevent the sale of oleomargarine for butter.

ARE THEY CONSISTENT?

Each oleomargarine witness at the hearings last spring was very emphatic in his claims that he was exceedingly anxious to prevent fraud in the sale of oleomargarine. He did not wait for anyone to accuse him of being insincere—just seemed to take it for granted that he was suspicioned and that he should make answer. No one can blame him for exercising this caution, it prevented embarrassing questions being asked.

Occasionally, however, the mask slipped off and the witness was shown up in his true light. Mr. Geo. E. Green, secretary of the Illinois Retail Merchants' Association, who claimed to be "speaking for probably 250,000 or 300,000 dealers in a food product in these United States," said:

"I want to answer Mr. Flanders as to my conception of fraud. You speak of fraud. Can a fraud be perpetrated without particularly injuring the people—unless it particularly injures the people? Now, assuming that oleomargarine is sold for butter, does it, in its fullest sense, perpetrate a fraud, because nobody is injured under it?" (Official record of hearings, page 222.)

Of course he had no sooner uttered the words before he realized his mistake and was most emphatic in his claims that he didn't want this done. But the "cat was out of the bag." It was too late.

Mr. Green should not, however, be selected as the chief offender. We have quoted him because he talked for so many (?) people. We have been wondering how the thousands of honest retail dealers who are fully in accord with all pure food laws, one of the fundamental principles of which is the proposition that an article shall sell upon its own merits, enjoy such a (mis)representation.

THE CONSUMER HUMBUGS HIMSELF.

Ever hear of a man humbugging himself? It's a common fault of mankind, finding expression oftentimes through one's inability to make connections between income and expense. This fact was forcibly impressed upon the writer one day recently in the public market at Indianapolis, Indiana. At one of the booths where "butter, cheese and eggs" were sold were two boxes of oleomargarine in prints and country rolls. The color was a light yellow and there were no distinguishing marks on the package except the familiar "inspected and passed" government label and that was not exposed to the view of the purchaser.

Stepping up to the counter and inquiring the price of butter, we were given the information and the oleomargarine was included with the different grades of butter. Pointing to the country rolls, we asked the direct question, "Is that butter?" and the reply was "Yes." Upon being asked whether he would so testify under oath, the clerk smiled and said "No."

Just then a lady stepped up and ordered "two rolls of that butter." After contemplating her purchase, the writer asked her if she knew what she had purchased. She smilingly replied, "Yes, I know what I am getting."

This lady was humbugging herself—and perhaps the rest of her family. And she is probably but one of a large number of people who are aiding disreputable dealers in violating the pure food law in this way. Of course many customers calling at this same counter and asking for butter do not attempt to humbug themselves but are furnished with oleomargarine. When a few customers know that they are getting the counterfeit when they ask for the genuine, it gives the dealer an opportunity to use them as witnesses in case of trouble, thus placing the customer's stamp of approval upon the dealer's dishonest methods for the purpose of prejudicing a jury and clouding the issue in general.

In spite of the wide publicity given the operations of the oleomargarine dealers, a very, very, small proportion of our people—even dairy people—really appreciate the extent to which fraud has entered into the traffic in the stuff.

BUTTER AND BUTTER SUBSTITUTES.

The great majority of people eat butter and much prefer it to any of the substitutes which have been put upon the market. However, a great many people must use a substitute on account of the high prices which prevail during certain months of the year.

Oleomargarine is the most common substitute for butter and millions of pounds of this product are consumed each year. The difference in cost of production between oleomargarine and butter is so great that when butter is retailed at forty cents per pound, oleomargarine may be retailed at twenty cents per pound at as great a profit to the dealer.

The person who chooses to purchase the substitute should be allowed to do so and he should be required to pay only the price of the substitute. The difference in price between the genuine product and the substitute is so great that dealers are tempted to sell the latter for the former. Only by requiring that the consumers may differentiate between the two articles can honest traffic in the substitute be insured.

This was contemplated by Congress when the present internal revenue tax of ten cents per pound was levied upon "artificially colored oleomargarine." Many people think that all oleomargarine is taxed ten cents per pound. This is not a fact. Oleomargarine which is "artificially colored" so that the consumer cannot distinguish it from butter is the only oleomargarine that is thus taxed. When it is put upon the market in its natural color it is only taxed one-fourth of one cent per pound.

It is only when the product is made to look like butter so that it may be fraudulently sold as butter that a burdensome tax is imposed upon it. The imposition of the tax is not to suppress the sale of oleomargarine or to make it more expensive to the consumer, but to prevent fraud in its sale.

DAIRYING IN THE SOUTH.

Dairying is growing in popularity among the farmers of the southern states. They are learning that the dairy cow can do for the cotton grower of the south what she has done for the wheat grower in the north, i. e., increase the fertility of the soil in addition to making most satisfactory returns for labor and money expended for feed.

The United States Department of Agriculture has been giving particular attention to this question in the southern states the past few years and a great service has been rendered. A great impetus has been given to the dairy movement until now there are thousands of influential dairymen singing the praises of the dairy cow and demonstrating by actual experiments that dairying is the salvation of that section of the country.

Certain politicians, in order to create an issue by which they might retain office, have greatly retarded the development of the dairy industry in the cotton growing states by creating the impression there that the interests of the cotton grower are opposed to those of the dairyman. It has been brought about in this way: Cottonseed oil is used in the manufacture of some kinds of oleomargarine. This has been used to prejudice the cotton producer against any and all kinds of legislation which in any way regulates or restricts the sale of oleomargarine.

A careful estimate compiled from government reports shows that through the sale of cottonseed oil which was used in the manufacture of oleomargarine last year, the cotton growers of the south actually received one and one-half cents for every acre planted to cotton!

For every dollar's worth of cottonseed oil used last year in making oleomargarine, one hundred and seven dollars' worth of butter was produced in those same cotton growing states.

These are facts which every cotton producer should consider before lending his support to any movement which is intended to retard the growth and development of the dairy industry in the south.

DAIRY PRODUCTS AS FOOD.

The products of the dairy are perhaps the most useful article included in the human diet. A meal made up of dishes into which no product of the dairy cow enters would not be such as to inspire "the turnpike road to people's hearts I find lies through their mouths, or I mistake mankind." Take away the butter for the bread, the cream for the coffee and the porridge, the shortening in the pie crust and the biscuits, the milk in the gravy and in the puddings, the cream for the dessert and the various kinds of cheese which please and satisfy, then take away the cup of milk for the little one and the meal that would be left would be neither tempting nor nutritious.

The health of our people depends so much upon an adequate supply of pure dairy products that even a scarcity is always attended by suffering and death.

Butter is sometimes referred to as a luxury. This is a mistake. Butter is not a luxury but one of the necessities of life, and its composition is such that nothing can take its place and perform the same functions. It is nature's product compounded in the maternal organism and the process is in accordance with nature's law, a law which man can imitate but cannot understand. Man can manufacture from various fats and oils a substitute for butter but it cannot take the place of nature's product because man cannot understand the needs of the human body as nature understands them.

The animal body is developed best when nourished by foods which have been little manipulated by man and machinery. Dairy products are, as a rule, consumed nearly as nature produced them. This is particularly true with milk upon which the growing body must depend. In the case of butter only a small percentage of other products are added to the fat extracted from the milk. Man only manipulates it in order to put it in convenient shape for use. It can still be termed a product of nature designed as only nature can design for use as food by the human body.

UNIFORMITY IN WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

The International Stewards' Association is an organization composed of the hotel stewards of the country and others connected with the business of catering to the physical needs of the American people. According to the conditions of membership "any white male of the age of 21 or more who has served as steward, assistant steward, caterer, manager or proprietor of any reputable hotel, club, cafe, steamship line, dining car system or apartment house, who is and has acted as caterer and employer of help, for one or more years, is eligible to membership.

This is a very energetic and active association, composed as it is of men who are engaged in the very interesting and the very responsible task of feeding the public. They held a very practical and helpful annual convention this year in the city of Pittsburg and transacted some very important business during their meeting. The activity of the association and the energy of the membership will make the influence of the body felt along many lines in the near future.

One of the things dear to the hearts of the International Stewards is the adoption of a law that shall be national in its scope, having for its chief purpose the elimination of frauds in weights and measures. All honestly disposed men and women will sympathize with the purpose of the association, even if some of them should be obliged to differ from it concerning the best means of accomplishing this desirable reform. The aim of all who favor the amendment of the laws so as to make cheating in this matter more difficult and far more dangerous than it is at present should be to get together upon some broad general proposition and from that standpoint work slowly but surely toward agreement in a more specific way.

The International Stewards' Association has a legislative committee on weights and measures, of which Mr. Milo E. Westbrook, of the Hotel Endicott, New York, is chairman. This committee has just issued a supplement to the International Stewards' Bulletin, of which Mr. Westbrook is editor, an appeal to its members and to the general public in favor of the proposed enactment. The supplement contains the names of senators and representatives who constitute the present Congress of the United States and it urges communication with these gentlemen to the end that they may be induced to look with favor upon the bill containing the ideas of the association. The following is the circular:

"To the members of the I. S. A. is herewith submitted the names of the U. S. Senators as well as the congressmen representing the U. S. Senate and the House of Representatives at Washington, D. C.

"These honorable gentlemen representing the Senate and the House of Representatives have it within their power to enact a law that will abolish deception and fraud in weights and measures, and that will guarantee our employers and the public in general honest weights and measures; a law that will compel the manufacturer, etc., to stamp the net weight on all food containers; a law that will compel all packers and fillers to stamp the net weight of the contents on such containers.

"So that your representatives at Washington, D. C., may become thoroughly impressed with the urgency and the public demand for such legislation it is suggested that each and every member address a letter to the United States Senator, as well as the congressman representing your state and district, advising him of the necessity of the enactment of such legislation. Advise him that you are a legal voter in the state or district represented by him. Send him a copy of the bill and urge all your friends and acquaintances to send letters urging enactment of the law. Interview every voter possible and get him to write to the representative, and, if possible, have the letter ready for his signature and see that it is signed at once."

The circular concludes by suggesting that the more petitions and letters senators and representatives get from their immediate constituents the more likely they are to heed the request. Gentlemen who represent the people are never indifferent to public sentiment and the International Stewards are going about the business of securing favorable action in the right way. This Bulletin agrees with them that fraudulent weights and measures constitute an evil under the sun that should be abolished. The city authorities, the state governments and the national congress and executive should cordially co-operate to the end that a better state of affairs may be inaugurated. Every citizen of the country is interested in this matter for false weights and measures affect the whole people.

UNIFORMITY OF FOOD LEGISLATION.

Some Views Concerning a Topic of More Than Passing Interest Expressed by Competent Authorities at Governors' Meetings.

The following article is taken from a recent issue of the quarterly published by the National Civic Federation and contains certain matters touching proposed uniformity of legislation concerning the manufacture and sale of food products which may be of interest to the readers of this Bulletin. We are not to be understood as endorsing every point made by the various speakers represented in the following extracts. Where quotation marks are used it is understood that the persons quoted are responsible for both the matter and the form of their expression.

Nevertheless the Bulletin is convinced that those who favor uniformity of legislation are on the right track. The direction toward national supremacy in every department of the varied activities that distinguish American life has awakened some alarm and no little resentment in many quarters but it seems to be an inevitable tendency, the result of the developments of modern business enterprises and present day civilization. Perhaps nothing has done more to hasten the trend toward national supremacy over the states in matters hitherto left to the entire control of the individual commonwealths than the growth of the automobile industry and the development of public sentiment in favor of pure food laws. These matters are attracting more and more attention with each passing day.

The citizen who owns an automobile, for instance, cannot take an interstate journey these days without securing a license from every state through which he means to travel. The annoyance and expense of this proceeding naturally inclines him toward national authority in matters of this sort. He feels that it would be a great advantage and no little saving if a single license sufficed. The same idea moves manufacturers and dealers in food products. Varying and contradictory laws confuse them and put them in constant peril. Uniformity of legislation would cure these evils. There is much to be said in favor of this proposition. The one essential thing is that the uniform legislation should be sufficiently sweeping to give the consuming public adequate protection. Pennsylvania, for instance, would not like to exchange her excellent legislation for something less complete in its care for the consumer.

The article mentioned follows:

The National Civic Federation's movement to promote uniformity in State and Federal legislation has met with enthusiastic responses in all states where the matter has been presented. Meetings have been held and state councils organized in a number of states. The representative character of the citizens attending these meetings afforded impressive proof that the need for more perfect harmony and co-operation among the states, as well as between the states and the nation in legislative matters is thoroughly appreciated by thoughtful public men. In all the states where councils have been organized the Governors rendered most effective assistance, and in most instances presided at the meeting.

In an address at the Madison (Wis.), meeting Dr. Charles R. Van Hise, president of the University of Wisconsin, speaking for the necessity of uniformity in the regulation of drugs and food said:

"Probably no question so vitally concerns the health of the masses as that of the strict regulation of drugs and food.

"Until recent years the subject of food regulation and control was neglected. Up to 1905 only twenty-five states had food laws that were in any way adequate and these statutes were so poorly enforced that interstate shippers hardly felt the need for uniformity and were little concerned by the diversity of state statutes.

"About this time, however, the agitation for pure food and better methods of manufacture became so pronounced that food officials all over the country were stirred to a decided action which immediately resulted in such a conflict of state decisions based on varying laws that manufacturers and dealers found themselves confronted with the necessity of preparing and labeling their products in as many different ways as there were laws in the respective states.

"An interesting illustration of the serious possibilities of such conflict was the experience of a big wholesale grocery house recently in Chicago. The pure food law of Wisconsin provided that the common commercial article of lemon extract must contain a certain percentage of lemon oil, while the Michigan law required a lesser percentage of oil. Through some mistake a shipment of extract intended for Michigan was sent to Wisconsin, where the sale of such oil is an indictable offense. There was no question of the purity of the extract in either case, but simply the question of strength."

William C. Breed, general counsel for the Wholesale Grocers' Asso- ciation, in speaking of this conflict in the laws, said at the Washing- ton meeting:

"The handicap of this condition of affairs from a practical, as well as commercial, point of view can hardly be imagined. The business of preparing and distributing food products had long since ceased to be confined to the boundaries of any one state. Certain states whose soil or climate nature had especially smiled upon, had become the producers and packers of specific articles of food for the entire nation. The avenues of trade were national, not local, and it was a national and commercial absurdity that an article of food should be considered legally pure in one state and impure in another; that harmful substances could change their character as they cross state lines; that a truthful label in New York should become false in California. Purity, harmfulness and truth are not supposed to be variable terms.

"So it was that the merchants, manufacturers and trade organiza- tions turned their energies toward relieving in some manner the chaotic conditions with which they were confronted, and not from any alleged eleemosynary motives, but from motives of pure self- protection lent their support to the passage of the National Food and Drugs Act, which became a law in June, 1906.

"This statute, so far as it relates to foods, covers all articles used for food, drink, confectionery or condiment by man or other animals. Its terms are broad and comprehensive. It provides against all adulteration, the use of harmful substances and false labeling. It does not attempt to legislate on scientific questions, but leaves such questions for scientific determination and regulation. It provides opportunity for the injured party to be heard in defense of his prod- ucts before court proceedings or seizure. It provides a means for co-operation between National and State food officials by requiring the nationality authority administering the law to examine and report upon any specimen of food submitted by the health officer of any state. It is the only present basis for uniformity on this sub- ject throughout the various states."

Referring to propositions to amend the act Mr. Breed said:

"Among the bills or amendments most frequently suggested in state legislatures have been those providing for a set of food stand- ards. Standards are definitions of the required ingredients, chemical strengths and percentages of ingredients going to make up certain food products. It is urged by various food officials and chemists that the existence of standards will materially assist in the enforce- ment of food legislation and that they should be added to the body of the law. Trade associations generally do not deny that the exist- ence of standards would be mutually helpful to both merchant and food official, but they vigorously assert that if standards are ever to be fixed and established they must be national standards under the expectation that the other forty-five states would accept the same definitions covering a countless number of food products is wrong in principle, would lead to hopeless chaos and confusion, and instead of accomplishing standardization would result in demoralization of all methods of food production and control.

"Colorado would certainly not swallow the Wisconsin standards whole. California will have her own ideas as to fruit standards. Minnesota will not complacently follow Texas in fixing the precise proportions of fibre, ash, nitrogen and moisture that must be found in 'statutory flour.' Louisiana would hardly be expected to copy the nice fractions that New Hampshire might fix for molasses or cotton seed oil. State legislators who have for a hundred years failed to agree on a vast variety of subjects, will hardly be expected miracu- lously and suddenly to order jam of the same sweetness as their neighbors or decree in unison that the refractive index for olive oil shall be not less than one and forty-six hundred and sixty ten thou- sandths.

"Clearly, the very idea of a standard implies correctness and uniformity, and the establishment of such should come only as the result of careful, scientific considerations of the questions involved. It has been well suggested that if standards are to be adopted they should be officially framed by a national commission established under an amendment to the National Food and Drugs Act. The membership of the commission should include representative state food officials, food chemists, experienced legal officers and practical food producers.

"Such standards so established would find ready acceptance by the various states whose food officials under the usual state law now have implied authority to adopt standards as guides and rules for departmental action.

"Standards should never be enacted into statutory law by any state or by the nation, for the very reason that they necessarily are the result of scientific study and subject to change and alteration as the science of food production improves and new ingredients and new methods are discovered."

The reference of Mr. Breed to amendments of the State Pure Food laws, as is generally known, pertains to a desire in some states to have a more exacting law than the Federal law. This embraces the whole question involved in the benzoate of soda controversy and the proposition to standardize food in general.

The Association of State and National Food and Dairy Departments has discussed this matter for several years and has finally, by a substantial majority, endorsed the Federal act, but that does not mean that the Association would not favor amendments to the Federal act, which amendments could be adopted afterward by the states.

The benzoate of soda controversy is now before a Federal court in Indiana. Some six years ago that state placed on its statute books a law prohibiting the manufacture and sale of food in which "deleterious preservatives" are used, and constituting the State Board of Health the authority in the determination of what is and what is not "deleterious." By the decision of that body benzoate of soda went into the prohibitive group and the doors were closed to the food stuffs in which it is used as a preservative. This interfered with the sale of merchandise manufactured in other states and sold to dealers in Indiana. Producers of canned goods and pickles in Rochester, N. Y., and Detroit, Mich., brought suit against the State of Indiana and some of its officials, asking through a Federal court an injunction restraining the state authorities from preventing the sale of their merchandise in Indiana.

A telegram to the New York Sun, referring to this case says:

"Of the right of that state to prohibit the sale of a deleterious substance there can be no more question than there is of its right to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors. The question is whether benzoate of soda is properly classed as a deleterious substance. If it is not properly so classed, the sale of foodstuffs in which it is used is not prohibited by state law, and the canners and picklers of other states may use in merchandise for sale to the Indianians as freely as they might use salt on meats or sugar in preserves.

"If the decision of the Federal court in Indiana supports the opinion of the Remsen board, the result will doubtless be the issuance of a Federal injunction overriding the state law and the interpretation of that law by the state officials. Presumably, the state would carry the case to the higher courts. If the decision shall be in accordance with the experience and view of the experts of the bureau of chemistry of the Department of Agriculture, the accepted opinion of the Remsen board would be so discredited as to make its rejection almost a necessity."

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

Obedience to law is the duty of every citizen.

Manufacturers should be held to strict account.

The laws should be specially severe upon the deceiver.

Every manufacturer is supposed to know what his goods are.

The manufacturer who sins against his patrons has no excuse.

The retailer is justly protected against the sins of the maker.

Few retailers are able to analyze the goods they display for sale.

But the manufacturer puts the ingredients in and is fully responsible.

For good and substantial reasons the federal government should sharply punish dishonest manufacturers.

Few offenses against mankind are more dastardly than the deliberate adulteration of the people's food and drink.

In other years human life has been materially shortened by the nefarious practices of dishonest and greedy manufacturers.

There has been great improvement during the last ten or fifteen years, but the markets of the country still contain impure food products.

During the last few years the agents of the federal government have detected many impositions upon the consumer in the way of adulterated articles of food and drink.

In each instance the manufacturer deliberately violates the law. He takes chances on escaping. Should he be picked up he hopes to be treated with the utmost leniency.

It is the opinion of many students of human nature that the government should punish with great severity all such manufacturers. It should send the principals to jail.

Nothing would act more effectively upon the manufacturer who adulterates his food products than the imposition and enforcement of jail sentences upon several prominent offenders.

So long as a manufacturer who violates the law is permitted to redeem his goods upon filing a bond to refrain from selling them within the jurisdiction of the United States and paying costs there will be trouble.

Under such circumstances the guilty individual hopes to escape for a long time without attracting the attention of the federal authorities. What he sells is clear gain. When caught he simply pays the costs and puts up a bond to behave within Uncle Sam's jurisdiction. But see the harm he has done already.

Is deception ever justifiable?

Is deception ever justifiable in business?

Is it right for the manufacturer to deceive the retailer?

And then may the retailer proceed to deceive his patrons?

Is this the modern idea of a successful business operation?

Is it true that business will not succeed without falsehood?

Would it ruin the manufacturer if he were to be absolutely square?

Are there not manufacturers in the country to-day who would scorn deceit?

Do not most citizens know of certain brands of goods that are all the manufacturer claims?

Do not the manufacturers of first class products always win the confidence of the public?

And do not the virtues they have practiced become one of the most valuable assets in their business?

While deception in business often brings in large profits does it do this permanently? Is that your experience?

Is it not true that success attained by fraudulent practices is apt to turn to Dead Sea fruit at the last moment?

Does not the history of business enterprises demonstrate beyond the shadow of a doubt that those founded upon wrong soon vanish?

In how many instances within the personal knowledge of the reader has it not been true that those who flourished by iniquity lost their all?

On the contrary, does not the testimony of human experience as well as the records of the business world demonstrate that the way of the wrong-doer is a slippery one?

The overwhelming majority of the manufacturers of food products in our country have the confidence of the consumer, have they not? Why, then, should the minority be permitted to practice arts that are both dangerous and violative of the requirements of law?

In the end, did anybody ever know of a case in which the dishonest business man failed to come to grief in some way? Is it not true now, as it always has been, that honesty is the best policy and that wrong-doing is certain to bring its own evil reward?

Thus the long and the short of it is that manufacturers of food products intended for consumption by the people will make more in the end by strictly honest and upright practices than their rivals who resort to all sorts of dishonest, not to say dangerous practices.

The booster is always more influential than the "knocker."

The best way to have laws adjusted to suit one's notions of the eternal fitness of things is to be cheerful and good-natured while arguing the point.

The better the butter delivered to the market the more secure will be that important product's place in the face of bitter competition.

The dairy interests of Pennsylvania are of the utmost importance. In every respect they deserve the protection and assistance of the authorities of the State, legislative and executive. Nor is there any reason to suppose they are not receiving it.

The disposition of the federal authorities to be easy with the oleomargarine people and pass oleo with a distinctly yellow tinge as "white," distinctly complicates the situation in the states and embarrasses officers of the law. There should be only one definition of the word "white," and it should be uniform, possessing the same significance in nation and state. When it is otherwise much confusion and corresponding irritation are the inevitable result.

The educational processes which undertake to teach the tenement house mother how to care for her babe so as to assist it to surmount the perils of infancy and the dangers of the hot months should be supplemented by a liberal and cheap supply of pure milk. Our infantile mortality was entirely too great during the summer just past.

Selfishness is still a mighty factor in the conduct of human affairs. And yet it defeats its own efforts nine times out of ten.

The grocer who makes a special effort to supply the market with articles of food that are worth the price and that add nothing to the already numerous perils of modern life, are always appreciated by his patrons who grow in numbers from month to month.

The Grocers' Review advises dealers to shun price cutting as they would the plague. But it admits that there is little reason to suppose its advice will be followed by all grocers.

The Retailer's Journal advises every grocer to try on his own table all the articles he keeps for sale. Personal knowledge will be a greater factor in his business relations with the consuming public.

They have food inspectors in Illinois who are handicapped in many important respects because the law gives them no power over the sanitation of the places inspected. The legislature was asked to pass an act curing the evil, but it declined to do so. At the next session another effort will be made to persuade it to enact the required legislation. One of the recent interesting exhibits of the food department was a shovelful of dirt gathered in one scoop from the floor of a factory in Chicago where food is manufactured.

Another little section of truth revealed by the investigations of the food department of Illinois is that whenever the demand for milk increased in certain sections of the state it was met by simply adding water to the milk already in stock.

The State Board of Health of Kansas has been making some investigations recently which convince it that much of the flavoring extract sold in that state is adulterated. In many of the cases where the goods were not up to the required standard the manufacturer turned out to be a drug house.

Frozen eggs are getting a very bad name from the food authorities, and from the number of confiscations that have been made one is led to believe that the majority of eggs put on the market in this form are not fit to eat.

PRICE AND QUALITY.

The two considerations most powerful in making for or against the popularity of a store, are the price and the quality of the goods sold. There are, of course, other considerations, but none of them so powerful as these; and no man can pretend to an understanding of his business who does not keep them constantly in view, and does not use his utmost endeavor to give satisfaction under both heads, says the American Grocer. It is not often, however, that one neglects to consider price for the sake of quality, the great danger is in the other direction—in neglecting quality for the sake of low prices, in the effort to undersell competitors. And yet it is a great mistake to think that cheapness is the only consideration that prevails with the consumer, and this holds true among the poorer classes, as well as the rich. It is a fact that even poor persons will grumble less at what they consider too much for an article that pleases them, than they will at being served with a thing they dislike that is "dirt cheap." The reason for this is very simple. Persons of all classes desire the best living they can afford, and only accept the inferior from necessity. Though some of the poorer classes buy as cheaply as possible, they are no more indifferent than others; and the trifle saved does not atone with them for a really bad article, while if they get something that is better than common, their satisfaction reconciles them to the payment of the extra charge. It is plain, therefore, while a person naturally desires to sell as low as others, that there is a point at which to draw the line, and that a wise rule is, never for the sake of cheapness, to sell goods that will not give, at least, a reasonable amount of satisfaction. Besides this, of the two, to lean too much in the other direction is to err on the safe side, and the more so, the better the class of trade amid which one is located. With persons in easy circumstances, the surest way to win popularity is through quality rather than by extremely low prices, and this precept is supported by universal experience. Among all classes of desirable customers the remarks respecting the grocer are almost universally as to the quality and not the price of his goods. Such a grocer sells the best tea or may be depended upon for the uniform quality of what he sells; and if the difference in prices is in his favor, that is mentioned only incidentally as an additional recommendation. A thing may become popular from being cheap, but it must be good likewise; mere cheapness of itself, without quality, is not sufficient to commend anything. Brands of goods of all kinds, that have an established reputation have gained it on the ground of quality. With quality as an indispensable requisite, low prices, of course go far to assist in the introduction of an article among the masses; but so strong is the recommendation of quality that where an article is confessedly the best of its kind, persons who can afford it, will often pay a fancy price for it, in preference to taking any other. We believe that the familiar adage, "the best is the cheapest," is becoming better understood among consumers, and whether it be that of late years the purchasing power of the masses has been greater or that they are becoming better informed on food subjects, we have heard it remarked that the people are giving preference to a better class of goods than formerly. Such goods are every way a greater satisfaction to handle than the poorer kinds, and the grocer who assists in this movement in every way possible is going with the times and traveling in the right direction.

EXCESS MOISTURE IN BUTTER.

Nothing has been said lately about excess moisture in butter, but things have been happening just the same, says Chicago Daily Produce Revenue officers do not make any announcement of when and where they will appear, but they are persistent in performance of duties, keep at it every day and though not looking for butter that has been adulterated with water, are apt to appear at any time with that object in view. A case that happened recently has been called to our attention. A dealer in this market was notified that one tub in a line of butter, still at one of the depots and shipped to his firm, showed 17 per cent. of moisture. He was notified to hold the line at his store for examination and, of course, complied with the order. Examination by government officials proved this line to contain 17 to 24 per cent. of moisture. The creamery was notified and told that it was held liable by the government for ten cents per pound on the butter. This money had to be paid and if the creamery got off with simply paying the tax it was lucky.

NEW ENGLAND OYSTERS.

New England oysters have been hit hard by Dr. Wiley, chief of the Pure Food and Drug bureau of Uncle Sam's government, at Washington, says the Baltimore American. Dr. Wiley decreed that a man was not getting his money's worth when he bought oysters which were immersed in fresh water. He said that bivalves treated to such baths became bloated and when eaten the epicure was swallowing only bags filled with water. The aforesaid epicure, he said, could eat shriveled oysters, swallow a glass of water and get the same food product in his stomach. New England oysters, raised in Long Island Sound and in other direct arms of the Atlantic ocean, have a briny taste that makes them unpalatable and, therefore unmarketable. They are immersed in fresh water to wash the brine away. Incidentally, it may be said that Chesapeake Bay oysters do not have to be subjected to this treatment. Chesapeake Bay oysters, as far as fresh water immersions are concerned, are not subject to Uncle Sam's anti-bloating laws.

There is another kind of oyster that has come under the ban of Dr. Wiley's laws. It is the oyster that is born, reared and fattened near sewers. New Englanders get mad when told of the fact that oysters grow and thrive near the sewers of New Haven, Providence and of the innumerable towns along Long Island Sound. Uncle Sam is after this sewage-nourished oyster. * * * Rhode Island oystermen and oyster dealers kicked against the regulations that placed a ban on bloated oysters and oysters that imbibed sewage and grew fat thereon. The State Shellfish Commission declared that oysters taken from beds within the state must be inspected and must come up to government's standard. Three oysters out of every five must be free of a bloated bag and of typhoid and every other germ. There is no liklihood that Maryland oyster interests will suffer by any inspection however rigid, by the government. This fact ought to be of great advantage to Maryland oystermen who come in competition with the New England product in northern and western markets.

SANITARY CONDITIONS IN FACTORIES.

The Trade says: Cleanliness and sanitary conditions, in all factories producing food products, has been the keynote of nearly all pure food men, but very few men realize how much attention, care and labor it requires to maintain sanitary conditions. Spasmodic efforts at different times during the day will call for a greater amount of labor than systematic and persistent care. What we mean by this is that while many think that by cleaning up at noon and night they are achieving the result desired they will find that the cost of doing this is much greater than if they had one or two persons detailed to keep things clean all day long. Also there are very simple mechanical means of facilitating the cleansing of canning utensils, and conveyors of raw products, that are practically self-cleaning. By the adoption of these up-to-date methods much more can be accomplished than by the exertion of a great deal of energy at stated periods.

Any practical cannerman will agree that after the help have worked from six to ten hours continuously they are not fit mentally or physically, nor have they the inclination to properly clean up as should be done, whereas, if special help should be employed to do nothing but clean up, the work would be much more efficiently done and at a great saving of money, as the help that would be used for cleaning would, on the average, only cost about half what skilled help costs. This method has been applied to some of the most modern canneries and the managers are unanimous in their praise of the method, and we would earnestly advocate it to our readers for a trial.

SALTS OF TIN IN FOOD.

The attention of the board of food and drug inspection has been directed to canned goods which contain salts of tin derived from the solvent action of the contents of the package upon the tin coating. Pending further investigation on this question, says the Inland Grocer and Butcher, all canned goods which are prepared prior to January 1, 1911, will be permitted to enter and pass into interstate commerce without detention or restriction insofar as their contents of tin salts is concerned. All foods which are canned subsequently to January 1, 1911, will be permitted importation and interstate commerce if they do not contain more than 300 milligrams of tin per kilogram, or salts of tin equivalent thereto. When the amount of tin, or an equivalent amount of salts of tin, is greater than 300 milligrams per kilogram, entry of such canned goods packed subsequently to January 1, 1911, will be refused, and if found in interstate commerce proper action will be taken. It is the opinion of the board that the trade will experience little hardship in adjusting itself to this condition, as the results of the examination made by the bureau of chemistry of various types of canned goods indicate that in a very large majority of cases inconsiderable quantities of tin are found, well within the limit herein set.

MUST HAVE EGG PERMITS.

The determined efforts of the food inspection department of the Board of Health of New York, to stop the sale of doubtful eggs for food purposes have caused some stir among the wholesale merchants.

The Board of Health has adopted new regulations by the terms of which egg dealers are required to take out permits for selling eggs broken out of the shell, "spot," dried or frozen eggs. Some of the dealers have believed that they were required to take out a license to sell fresh eggs and protested. B. C. Fuller, head of the Food Inspection department of the Board of Health, said that as soon as the purpose of the new regulations were understood reputable wholesale dealers readily submitted to them.

ADVERTISING VALUE OF PURE FOOD.

Tell them that the stuff you sell is pure, advises the National Provisioner. Everyone knows there are pure food laws galore and all are interested in the fact that nothing but pure foods are sold, at least without the labels showing the impurities, and they are familiar with the line on every carton which states that the contents are guaranteed under the meat inspection or the pure food and drug act, but the dealer who will take the trouble to dig down to the bottom facts of manufacture and then tell the people in his advertising why the various things he sells are pure and clean, the pureness and healthfulness of the material, the cleanliness with which it has been handled in the course of preparing it for market, etc., will do some advertising which will not only do his own store good, but will give people a better idea of the care taken in the preparing of food for them, and will give them more relish for such food than they might otherwise have. Manufacturers ought to be glad to furnish any retailer with all the information he may need for this kind of advertising, and it will be well worth the effort for an ad. which gives out real information is always read.

FOOD AND NUTRITION CHARTS.

The wide-spread discussion of the high cost of living has aroused great interest in all phases of domestic science, and has greatly increased the demand for the publications of the Department of Agriculture on all subjects relating to food and nutrition. The Department has issued a series of fifteen charts on the composition of food materials; these charts are printed from photo-lithographs in six colors and show in the case of each material the protein, fat, carbo-hydrate, ash and water contents and the fuel value expressed in calories. The percentage composition and fuel value are given in figures and the relative proportion of each constituent is represented graphically. For example, in the case of whole milk a glass of milk is shown. Eighty-seven per cent. of the figure is colored green to represent the water content; 3.3 per cent. red, to represent the protein, 4 per cent. yellow to represent the fat; 5 per cent. blue to represent the carbo-hydrates, and 0.7 per cent. drab to represent the ash content. The fuel value of 310 calories per pound is represented by printing in solid black nearly one-third of a square inch on each edge, since one square inch represents 1,000 calories. The figures for the percentage composition of the various materials are average figures based on as many analyses as are available in each case.

EGGS BY WEIGHT.

The New York Commercial says: Unquestionably the sale of eggs by their weight instead of by the dozen is the fairest way of measuring the quantity as between seller and buyer; and Commissioner Driscoll of the bureau of weights and measures has the law to enforce—has no option, apparently: Mayor Gaynor is on record, too, as insisting on the enforcement of the law to the letter and in the spirit in which its provisions were conceived, drawn and enacted. At the same time there is much force in some of the arguments against the change as presented in the memorial in protest from a special committee of the Mercantile Exchange. It is pointed out that to remove eggs from the packing cases and to weigh them by themselves would all be an enormously expensive process—and it is very easy to understand how this is so: this additional expense of handling would all be imposed on the "ultimate consumer," and while he might actually get by the weighing process more "yolk-and-white" than by the time-honored process of counting, there might be a decided disadvantage to him in the change because of this increased cost of handling the product. In most "down-East" cities tomatoes, onions and some other vegetables are commonly sold at retail by the pound, although the dealer buys them by the crate or other measure; the system is generally very satisfactory, because such vegetables vary so much in size that when sold in small measure the amount is largely guesswork. But "an egg is an egg," and the difference in the size of them is as a general thing so inconsiderable that in the course of a year neither seller nor buyer suffers any material loss through measuring them by the "count."

QUESTION OF THRIFT.

This is the view that a contributor to Farm Machinery takes of the causes of the high cost of living:

"We have ceased to be thrifty. The nearest approach most of us make to that virtue is to get our banks to let overdraw our accounts.

"The fathers have eaten grapes and the children are eating grapefruit. We used to buy apples by the barrel; now we buy them as we would buy jewels—each in its separate wrapper. We used to help the general house-work girl with the cooking; now we need two maids, a laundress and a man to wash the windows. When we were boys we did the chores; nowadays the American boy needs an allowance, stockings that match his necktie, and a tuxedo jacket. We used to think that it was an extravagance to keep a hundred-and-fifty dollar horse; now we buy an automobile and mortgage our house to pay for it.

'"Easy come, easy go,' was the old motto; 'easy come, gone before it comes,' is the modern.

"Our chief cause of high prices is trust—our creditors' trust. Everybody wants to sell us something and charge it to our account. So we accomodate and acquire a habit of reckless expenditure. What difference does it make whether eggs are twenty-five cents or eighty cents if we do not have to pay cash for them? We are spendthrifts in the midst of credit-system orgy. When we sober up prices will come down.

WHY PRICES ARE HIGH.

According to a statement credited to a cold storage trade paper there is now being held in cold storage, says the United Presbyterian:

Fourteen million cattle.

Six million calves.

Twenty-five million sheep and lambs.

Fifty million hogs.

This number is enough for one entire animal for each adult in the United States, with enough whole animals left over to give two to each family.

This meat is being held by the big packing houses in 558 cold storage plants. In addition, it is said that in seventy-eight fish freezing plants in the United States there are fish waiting to be doled out that are valued at $25,000.000.

In other cold storage plants during any year now, according to the storage man's own statistics, there are—

One billion eight hundred million eggs.

One hundred and thirty million pounds of butter.

Fruit valued at $50,000,000.

Then, besides, there are millions of pounds of potatoes, onions, thousands of turtles, eels, cases of canned goods, milk, butter and cheese, valued at $100,000,000.

The total value of meat and other food stuffs placed in cold storage during a year at present is, according to the figures of the cold storage concerns, close to three billion dollars. These cattle and other food supplies have been bought when prices were low and stored to force up prices. With 85,000,000 whole animals and 1,800,000,000 eggs, etc., held indefinitely, it is no wonder there is a shortage in supply and consequently high prices. It is the old law of supply and demand. Only in this case the supply is short not from lack of production, but from combination which enables the middleman to hold a portion of the supply from market and to create an artificial shortage.

If the figures given above are correct, and they appear to come from a reliable source, it is evident that law was needed to prevent the holding of food supplies in cold storage longer than a "reasonable time." Such laws, if enforced, would equalize the supply to the demand, and at the same time would prevent the creation of an artificial shortage.

ONE FOOD LAW FEATURE.

A recent judgment in the federal court, remarks the American Miller, under the food and drug act, marks the positive progress made in commercial honesty in the matter of breakfast foods in the last few years. The plea of guilty to the charge of misbranding was entered by the manufacturers of a certain breakfast food. In this case the misbranding consisted of a label stating that the food in question had "accomplished great work with the sick." It was decided to be false and misleading and tending to deceive the purchaser into believing that the product was of value for medicinal purposes, when as a matter of fact, it was not materially different from wheat bread. That such a statement, relatively mild and innocent, should be deemed reprehensible shows how far on the road of progress we have traveled in the last decade. It is not so many years since the manufacturers of breakfast foods, almost without exception, advertised their products precisely as nostrums were advertised. They unblushingly claimed that the simple products of wheat, corn, oats and barley, nutritious as they might be, were specifics for brain fag, physical exhaustion and almost every ill that flesh is heir to. Of course they overworked the matter and these dishonest claims of medicinal virtues for simple foods was the greatest contributing factor to the downfall to the hundred different varieties of cereal fads. People discovered their virtues were fictitious. The pure food laws can stop the misleading of the public into the purchase of fad foods by preventing their being advertised as medicines; but the law's services must end there. It cannot appoint guardians for people who are willing to pay five or six prices for food because it is widely advertised or has a taking name.

ADVANCE IN MEAT PRICES WORLD WIDE.

According to the Grocer and Butcher meat prices have advanced in all the principal producing and consuming sections of the world. Compilations made by the bureau of statistics of the Department of Commerce and Labor seem to prove this assertion. The figures which the bureau has compiled consist chiefly of the export prices of the principal meat exporting countries of the world and the import and quoted wholesale prices of the meat importing and consuming countries. The chief meat exporting countries are Australia, New Zealand, Argentina, Canada and the United States, and the chief meat importing countries the United Kingdom, Germany and, in a large degree, the other European countries. All of the meat exporting countries show higher prices per pound in their exports in recent years than those of a decade ago, and all of the meat importing countries show higher rates in their import figures and in the current market quotations.

Curiously, however, the advance in fresh meats is less than that in salted and preserved meats, and in nearly all cases the advance in beef is less than in pork or mutton. The fact that the percentage of advance in prices of fresh meats, especially those exported in the chilled or frozen state, has not been as great as that of salted or preserved meats is supposed to be due, in part at least, to the reductions made in the past decade in the cost of chilling or freezing and transporting meats of this class, and to the increased supply of fresh meats in European markets resulting from the growth of the system. On the other hand, prices of fresh mutton have advanced more than those of fresh beef, the reason being, presumably, in part at least, the comparatively slow growth in the world's supply of sheep and the consequent advance in the price of wool. The method employed by the bureau of statistics in determining the export and import prices of meats in various countries is a comparatively simple one. It takes from the official statistics of the importing or exporting countries considerable quantities of meats the stated quantities of meats exported or imported, and the stated value of the same and by dividing quantity into value determines the average export or import price per pound.

RICE AS FOOD.

As a food material rice is nutritions and easily digested, says a trade journal. In comparison with wheat it is poor in nitrogenous material and fat and correspondingly rich in non-nitrogenous substances (carbohydrates). Analyses show that a hundred pounds of cleaned rice contain 87.7 pounds of total nutrients, consisting of eight pounds of protein, 0.3 pound fat, 79 pounds carbohydrates and 0.4 pound ash. In comparison with this one hundred pounds of wheat flour contain 87.2 pounds of total nutrients, consisting of 10.8 pounds of protein, 1.1 pounds fat, 74.8 pounds carbohydrates and 0.4 pound of ash. The ease with which the deficiency of the albumenoids and fats can be supplied from legumes and the almost absolute certainty of producing a crop every year are the principal reasons why rice is the staple food in many densely populated countries. It is claimed that boiled rice is digestible in one hour, and hence is an admirable food when ease of digestion is a matter of importance. Rice should be at least three months old before it is used for food. In rice producing countries rice is used as the daily food as a substitute for Irish potatoes and wheat bread. It is eaten alone with a little dried fish or other material to balance the ration. In the rice districts of the United States rice is used in place of the Irish potato. Boiled rice, flaked rice, rice puddings, croquettes, cakes, and many other well known dishes made from rice form part of the diet of many, if not a majority of the well-to-do families. Such dishes are palatable and wholesome and help to give variety to diet. Rice polish or flour, which is now sold at the mills at less than a cent a pound for cattle food, or exported to Germany, will when appreciated, be in demand for human food. It contains 10.95 per cent. of protein, in comparison with 7.4 per cent. for the clean rice.

CLEAN MILK AS FOOD.

From an article on the above subject in Hoard's Dairyman we quote the following:

"There are produced in the United States about 7,226,400,000 gallons of milk per year, of which practically 30 per cent. or 2,180,000,000 gallons are used as milk. Though this figure looks large, it even then amounts to only six-tenths of a pint per day per person, which viewed in that light appears small. If accurate figures could be obtained up to the present time they would undoubtedly be larger than those named, for milk is being more and more consumed as its real value becomes known. At present milk and cream furnish about 16 per cent. of the total food of the average American family. The demand for clean milk is growing quite rapidly. The health authorities, aided by many of the best informed consumers of our cities, are active throughout the land in establishing laws and rules to govern the quality of milk sold in their respective cities. Whereas the milk inspectors formerly had to do principally with the retailer of the milk, the actual producer is becoming more and more involved, so that the health regulations of Boston and New York and other large cities are very materially affecting the routine work of the dairy farms throughout New England and New York. That this demand is inincreasing is apparent to everyone at all conversant with the situation.

There are in the United States approximately three-quarters of a million babies under one year of age at the present time, about one half a million of whom are dependent entirely or largely on cow's milk for their nourishment and the per cent. of bottle fed infants is increasing. Although adults consume considerable quantities of milk, infants and young children furnish the principal market for milk. What relation is there between cow's milk and the well-being of these babies? Statistics in this country are wanting on the subject but we have reason to believe that the figures obtained from Berlin, Germany, are accurate for their conditions, and approximately so for ours. In the following table we note the death rate per thousand of infants fed on different foods:

Fed on mother's milk, ...	7.4
Fed on mother's and cow's milk, ...	21.4
Fed on cow's milk, ...	42.1
Fed on milk substitutes, ...	67.7
Fed on cow's milk and substitutes, ...	125.7

"From the above we note that where one child dies that is being breast fed there are nearly six when fed on cow's milk. This in itself would indicate either that the cow's milk is not adapted to the infant, or that there is a great fault somewhere in the handling of the cow's milk. In comparing the composition of human vs. cow's milk we notice that they differ principally in the following points: The fat in cow's milk is 30 to 40 per cent. higher than in human; sugar in human is nearly twice as high as that in the cows; that the protein content of cow's milk is more than twice that of human; that the ash content of cow's is more than three times that of human; that the nutritive ratio in the case of the cow is approximately 1.4 and approximately 1.8 in the human, with an acid reaction in the cow's milk and an alkaline in the human.

WHERE OLD CANS GO.

The raw material of a number of large establishments in this country, says Harper's Weekly, consists of empty fruit and vegetable cans, rescued from the dumps. The principal products of these manufactories are window-sash weights, elevator weights and ballast for boats. After delivery at the foundry the cans are piled into a large iron grating, under a sheet iron hood, which terminates in a smokestack. They are sprinkled with crude oil and then set on fire. This process consumes the labels, loosens the dirt, and melts the solder, which falls through the grating, and is collected, cast into ingots, and sold to be used again. Some of the cans, which have simply lapped and soldered joints, melt apart completely. These are sorted out, and the sheets straightened and bound into bundles, to be sold to trunk makers for protecting corners. They are also bought by button manufacturers, who stamp from these the disks used in cloth covered buttons. The machine made cans do not come apart, and they are loaded into large carts, taken on an elevator to the charging floor, and dumped into the cupolo, which is fed alternately with cans and coke. The cans are so light that some of them are carried out at the top of the stack by the force of the blast, and a large screen is arranged to prevent the pieces from falling on the roof.

SHORT-WEIGHING THE PUBLIC.

The sealer of weights and measures in Chicago, says the Louisville Courier-Journal, remarks in a newspaper article that every trade or line of business he has investigated in that city "contributes instances of short-weights or measures, either through design or custom." As the city sealer keeps nineteen inspectors "extremely busy" looking out for these matters, it will be seen that the practice of short-weighing the public is widespread.

Chicago has an ordinance which provides that if milk or cream is sold in glass bottles each bottle must have the capacity blown in the glass or otherwise permanently indicated. The sealer undertook to enforce this ordinance, and on his first investigation of milk bottles he found that seven thousand out of ten thousand did not hold the quantity for which the customer paid. The milk dealers were arrested and fined. They appealed to the Supreme Court. The court hold that a pint is a pint, and that if it was impossible to make all bottles alike they could be made to hold a little bit over the stipulated pint or quart, but they must not come under it.

It used to be a common practice in Chicago, as it is in other places, to sell 1,800 pounds of coal for a ton. An ordinance was passed requiring that a ticket showing the net weight must accompany every load of coal and must be given by the driver to the purchaser when delivery is made. Inspectors now stop coal wagons and demand to see the tickets. If the weight is short or there is no ticket the firm which sold the goods is asked to explain why the ordinance was violated. If the explanation is not satisfactory prosecution follows.

The Illinois legislature at the last session passed a law giving city councils and boards of trustees the power to adopt ordinances requiring the sale of various commodities by weight instead of measure. This is intended to reach peddlers who buy by weight and sell by measure and thus contrive to make five pecks out of a sixty-pound bushel of potatoes. An effort was made to get a bill through the legislature requiring that all goods sold in original packages should bear the net weight, the net measure or numerical count of the contents. This bill failed despite the fact that it would have gone a long way toward securing the customer honest weight and measure and fair return for his money.

The experiences of the Chicago sealer show the difficulty that must be encountered in enforcing the laws which are intended to provide a square deal for the buying public. They also show that in many particulars these laws are inadequate. Even the National Pure Food laws are not equal to protecting the purchaser as to the weight of goods sold in original packages. It is required merely that the weight shall be stated correctly if stated at all—a very convenient loophole for the manufacturer who is disposed to profit by giving short weights.

One thing is evident from the revelations being made by officials who have been working along this line—the consumer is being victimized every day by these fraudulent practices. While the loss thereby may be small to the individual purchaser, it mounts up rapidly as purchases increase, and when it is considered that the entire consuming public is levied upon daily and hourly it will be seen that the aggregate loss sustained is of gigantic proportions.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

Sacramento, Cal., hotels, restaurants and boarding houses serving eggs must apprise their customers of the standing of the egg, and the menu card must be made to tell the story. Grocers and retailers must take eggs from plainly included packages, easily read by a casual observer. Even the general term "eggs" must, unless qualified, denote eggs that are solid, sweet and full. This is due to a decision of the California State Board of Health. Hereafter an egg that is held for more than fourteen days must be labeled as a cold storage egg, except in the case of "fresh eastern eggs," which may be held for twenty-one days.

The Indiana State Board of Health is seeking to have passed an amendment to the food laws of that state so as to hold the dealer who sells eggs responsible for their character. There is a law on the statute books at the present time which makes it a criminal offense to sell or offer for sale "knowingly eggs in a rotten or decaying condition to be sold for food." The use of the word "knowingly" in the phraseology of the bill has practically nullified its usefulness. The Board of Health takes the ground that a dealer can through any of several methods satisfy himself as to whether or not the eggs he has on sale are bad and intends to make a strong effort to place the responsibility on the dealer, believing that he has facilities for protecting himself against the farmers who attempt to load him with unsalable goods.

The dairy department of the University of Wisconsin has for many years carried on a cheese factory, a creamery and a city milk and cream supply business in connection with the teaching and research work of the department.

Deputy United States marshals have seized 10,000 cans of clams alleged to have been labelled in violation of the pure food law at a wholesale distributing house in Boston. The clams were canned in Maine and labelled "little necks," the authorities say, whereas they were of the ordinary kind.

Consul Hernando de Soto, of Riga, in his annual report states that during the past year he succeeded in interesting a leading dealer in canned goods in American sweet corn theretofore entirely unknown in that Russian district. It was with much hesitancy that he ordered twenty cans, which he sold in a few days. His second order was for fifty cans and for several months he has been ordering 100 and 200 cans at a time. One of the first class restaurants has "American canned corn" on its daily menu.

Western grocers intend to have introduced in congress a bill calling for a coin worth two and a half cents. This coin, the grocers contend, is made necessary by the increased cost of edibles. As the wholesaler advances the price on the retailer a half or fraction of a cent so must the retailer harpoon his customers to make a profit. With the present currency they contend that the customer loses about 2 per cent. on the dollar.

A large quantity of goods, claimed to be an egg substitute, put up by a California concern and mainly composed of starch and milk curd, have been seized in St. Louis by the government. The goods are not injurious, but are not, it is said, what they purport to be.

Andrew French, Dairy and Food Commissioner of Minnesota, is gratified over the decision of the Supreme Court of that state in the case of Jacob Nieman vs. the Chennelene Oil and Manufacturing company, in which the court held that the jobber or manufacturer "who sells adulterated or poisonous cooking oil to a retail merchant is liable to the vendee for his consequent loss of business in selling the product to his customers."

The Boston Morning Globe remarks that by contracting for nearly one million pounds of canned corn beef from Chicago the British government shows that it has complete confidence in our pure food law.

The more goods a grocer can sell the more he widens his avenue of sales. Every new line represents so much extra profit. Where a line has the merit of novelty it is much easier to sell.

Prosperity, says the Irish Grocer, never wears dingy clothes. With paint at its present price, and so easy to put on, you can't afford to let your store front get dim.

The best clerk he ever had is what a prominent grocer in a Boston suburb had for a dozen years, until the young man opened a store on the opposite corner, when he became the meanest grocer and the meanest competitor in the city. Conditions sometimes change things very much.

The weight system for buying and selling groceries is gaining popularity all over Ohio, and in many cities of the state the majority of the merchants favor the weight system over the measure for selling fruits and vegetables.

The use of tobacco in meat markets and grocery stores should not be tolerated in the opinion of many. Customers at some of these stores where the practice is permitted complain that the smell of tobacco on articles of food had become so offensive that it was necessary to destroy the food. Merchants could stop the practice by simply displaying placards forbidding the use of the weed in their places of business.

Following out the idea that organization is a good thing, it is now proposed to organize an association to be known as the National Tea, Coffee and Spice Association of the United States for the purpose among others of securing mutual trade benefits and protection, proper freight or transportation classification, and the proper application and administration of the tariff and other laws relating to the above named lines.

The moderate use of good food is essential to prolonged health.

The festive fly survived the organized assaults of the scientific sharps, but they'll end his career some day.

Interest in the food of the babe is becoming widespread. It is understood that our present high rate of infant mortality is a disgrace to civilization.

The upright manufacturer of food products generally makes out well in a financial way; and then he has the comfort of a good conscience.

The controversy between the dairymen and the oleomargarine manufacturers ought to greatly interest the consumer, for it concerns one of the most important of human foods.

The butter men are in the right when they object to the close imitation of their product by the oleomargarine people. This imitation, as they say, even extends to the names given the various brands of butterine.

The housekeeper is a vitally important member of the family. One would scarcely know how to get along without her.

The laws of this Commonwealth amply and securely protect the retailer who is careful enough to take advantage of their provisions. Here and there one cannot be persuaded to obey law. Then trouble camps on his trail.

The chemist has a good deal more to do with the food of the people today than he did in the days of our grandmothers. In those old times nearly every family largely manufactured its own food supplies.

The honest dealer has a good conscience, a treasure the price of which, like that of the virtuous woman, is above rubies. The longer he lives the better a friend this conscience becomes and the more cheerful its communications to his spirit.

There is a continued and obstinate prejudice throughout the land against what the people have come to designate "doped" goods. And it will not down at anybody's bidding.

During the cold weather the effort to provoke an all pervasive and determined anti-fly sentiment should be kept up with all diligence.

The short-weight scoundrel is falling into the hands of justice every here and there. He is a scurvy thief, worse than those who have more need, and he deserves punishment and ostracism.

Adulteration of food products, even by the use of perfectly harmless but cheaper substances, is likewise a violation of both the federal and the State food laws. It is giving the consumer a cheaper article than the one he has paid for and in that respect it is cheating him and disappointing his family.

After all, the experience of violaters of the food laws during the past few years has not been of such a character as to encourage others to imitate their example.

Many of the cities of the United States are doing better work by way of aiding in the enforcement of pure food regulations now than they ever did before. They are admirably reinforcing the efforts of the various state boards.

The consumer who prefers oleomargarine to butter, either because he fancies it or because he finds himself unable to keep up with the price of butter, has a right to that article, but nobody has any right to sell it to him under the name and guise of genuine butter.

The federal government can never be too active in its enforcement of the food and drugs act, so far as the rank and file of the people are concerned. They want the best foods and drinks, the best medicines the market produces and they depend upon their public servants to protect them.

Constant agitation has brought about a wonderful sentiment on behalf of the best sorts of food in this country. There was a time when nobody gave much thought to the food he ate, and if he found anything that didn't seem to be exactly what it purported to be there was no way of becoming sure or of bringing the offender to justice. But that's all changed now. We haven't reached perfection yet, but we're getting there.

Representatives of the National and State Food and Dairy Bureaus Meet in New Orleans.

The fourteenth annual convention of the Association of State and National Food and Dairy Departments, was called to order in the Grunewald convention hall, New Orleans, at 10 o'clock A. M., on Tuesday, November 29, George L. Flanders, of Albany, N. Y., presiding. The session was not protracted, consisting of an address of welcome by Mayor Martin Behrman, a response by Professor M. E. Jaffa, of California, the annual address of the president and the appointment of committees on resolutions and finance.

The annual address of President Flanders was comparatively brief. It went into the history of the organization and outlined some of the chief work. It will be found elsewhere in this number of the Bulletin.

Reference was made to the unexpected death of the Rev. Dr. Beverley E. Warner, of New Orleans, who had a place on the convention programme. It was decided to send a floral tribute to the home of the great preacher whose death was universally mourned in New Orleans.

Announcement was made of the death of Professor A. C. Bird, of Michigan, and Professor Albert E. Leach, of Denver, Colorado, members of the association, after which the convention adjourned out of respect to their memory.

Thirty-seven states were represented at the opening session, as was developed by the roll call.

Tuesday Afternoon.

At the afternoon session the first event of importance was a paper by Attorney B. T. Waldo, of the Louisiana Board of Health on "Police Power as Applied to Health Questions." This was a very valuable production and is reproduced in full in this number of the Bulletin.

Secretary of Agriculture James Wilson was unable to attend the sessions of the convention. He sent a letter, however, which was read at this point. It follows:

"It is a matter of great regret to me that I cannot be present at the annual meeting of the Association of State and National Food and Dairy Departments at New Orleans. I had expected to be present, but the work of the department is heavy just at this time, particularly in connection with the issuing of my annual report, and the time is very near when Congress will meet to consider the money bills for the next fiscal year. Accordingly, I do not feel at liberty to leave the department at this time.

"I wish to say to the association, through you, its president, that it is my hope that the meeting at New Orleans will not only be harmonious, but productive of great results in the furtherance of the cause of pure food, pure drugs and fine dairy products. The department stands ready to co-operate in the fullest degree with all state officials charged with the enforcement of food and drug and dairy product control laws. Any information on the subject of dairy products, foods and drugs which is in the possession of the department is available for all state officials. I look forward to the time when all state officials and all national officials may reconcile whatever differences of opinion there have been in the past and fight shoulder to shoulder the great fight for the protection of the stomachs of the people.

"With expressions of the highest regard and personal esteem, believe me, etc."

The report of the executive committee was then heard; also the report of Treasurer James Foust, which is produced in full in this number.

After some discussion concerning various topics Hon. H. E. Barnard, State Food and Drug Commissioner of Indiana, read a valuable paper on "Sanitation." A protracted discussion followed, lasting until the hour fixed for adjournment.

An Auxiliary Association.

No meeting of the convention was held on Tuesday evening. Accordingly the opportunity was embraced by the heads of the various dairy and food departments to meet and organize an association of State Food Executives auxiliary to the parent organization, but composed exclusively of those engaged actively in the supervision of Dairy and Food work. The following officers were elected:

President, James Foust, of Pennsylvania.

Vice President, Charles D. Woods, of Maine.

Secretary, W. D. Saunders, of Virginia.

Treasurer, R. M. Allen, of Kentucky.

The executive board consists of A. H. Jones, of Illinois; E. F. Ladd, of North Dakota, and H. M. Potter, of Connecticut.

The object of the new association, which, as has been suggested, is subsidiary to the larger organization, will be the discussion and interchange of opinion on food laws and their execution. Membership will be confined to officers authorized by law to administer state food and dairy laws. Meetings are to be held at the same time and place as the annual meetings of the parent organization. It is expressly provided that the programme of the subsidiary organization shall not conflict with that of the parent body.

Much profitable discussion consumed the time, after the organization had been effected and it was the general conviction of the Food

Commissioners that the society was going to be of practical value in connection with their work.

Session on Wednesday Night.

The members of the Association of State and National Food and Dairy Departments spent the daylight hours of Wednesday in enjoying some of the special attractions prepared by the Louisiana committee, but at night an interesting address on "State and Municipal Control in Relation to Food Products," was read by Hon. George M. Whitaker, of the United States Department of Agriculture. Quite a discussion followed and the rest of the evening was devoted to festivities.

Thursday's Proceedings.

The third day's session was productive of much general discussion on subjects of vital interest to the members of the convention as well as to the general public. Though the discussion on Milk Standards announced on the programme was not undertaken because of the absence of the announced speaker, that subject cropped up in pretty nearly every other discussion that took place.

The afternoon session was marked by a symposium on labeling which took a wide range, embracing medicines, quack doctors and newspapers that print patent medicine advertisements. Delegate Abbott, of Texas, directed some animated censure against that section of the religious press which lends itself to these nostrums.

The morning session was featured by a lengthy discussion of butter substitutes, criticism being directed particularly against oleomargarine. The merits or demerits of oleomargarine as a foodstuff did not enter into the discussion, but by some of the commissioners the federal government's plan of taxing the colored article was condemned whilst by others it was applauded. The repeal of all laws permitting the coloring of oleo was advocated by many of the participants in the discussion.

The Final Session.

With the adoption of a resolution urging the adoption of a standard food commission, the selection of Duluth, Minnesota, as the scene of the 1911 convention, and the election of officers to serve through the ensuing year, the business of this the fourteenth annual convention of the Association of State and National Dairy and Food Departments came to a harmonious close at noon on Friday, December 2. The general opinion was that the convention was a highly successful one as much work was accomplished and some old differences safely buried.

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

Meeting of Association State and National Food and Dairy Departments, New Orleans, La., Nov. 29, 1910.

On August 25, 1897, representatives from the states of Colorado, Connecticut, Iowa, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin, met in Detroit, Mich., for the purpose of forming a national association in which and at which the perplexing questions involved in enforcing the dairy and food laws of the different states might be discussed and mutual aid rendered, with the end in view of producing, as nearly as conditions and laws would permit, uniformity of action in the enforcement of such laws.

A committee on permanent organization and by-laws was appointed and its report was adopted without amendment. There was but one difference of opinion in the committee and that arose over the naming of the association. The prevailing view was that it should be called the National Association of State Dairy and Food Departments. There were some in that convention who thought it ought to be called the National Association of State Agricultural, Dairy and Food Departments. This view was defeated and the association became one devoted to the consideration and discussion of the problems arising in the enforcement of the laws in the different states relative to dairy and food questions. The name of the association as given to it in Detroit remained unchanged until the meeting at Portland, Oregon, where it was changed so that it became "The Association of State and National Food and Dairy Departments," the broadening of the association at this time being simply to take in the national department that enforced food and dairy laws, but the scope or breadth of the subject matter for consideration was not changed. Article 2 of the By-Laws as adopted read as follows:

ARTICLE II.

Object of the Association.

Section 1. The object is to promote and foster such legislation as will tend to protect public health and prevent deception in the manufacture, sale and use of dairy, food and other products intended for human consumption.

Section 2. To promote uniformity in legislation and rulings relative to dairy and food products.

Section 3. To enhance the efficiency of dairy and food laws by developing an acquaintance tending to harmonize the interests represented by those charged with the enforcement of such state laws.

The object as stated at that time has remained unchanged since. Article 3 of the Constitution provided that the officers should be as follows:

"The officers shall consist of: One President, and Vice Presidents as follows: First Vice President, Second Vice President, and Third Vice President, a Secretary and Treasurer; no two of whom shall reside in the same State."

This article has been amended by providing for a treasurer distinct from the secretary.

Article 4 provided for committees as follows:

1. A Legislative and Executive Committee.
2. A Finance Committee.
3. A Committee on Resolutions.

These are the only committees specifically provided for in the By-Laws or Constitution.

Since the time of the formation of this association there have been regular annual meetings, 13 in all, this being the 14th. At the first meeting there were but ten states represented and thirty-three delegates, while at the last meeting of the association there were thirty-eight states represented, the District of Columbia and the Department of Agriculture of the United States.

The number of states having dairy and food laws have increased greatly since the first meeting. This seems to indicate that the American people are gradually coming to a realizing sense that a proper surveillance must be placed over the distribution and sale of food products—the substances which are placed in the human system for the construction of human fibre. It is not only a question of fraud and finance that is involved, but in many instances it is a question of health and life. With these underlying principles as the motive for action, the different states have enacted laws somewhat similar and yet often different in verbiage, due to one or both of the following reasons:

1. Local demands consequent upon local views.
2. Where the local views are similar, due to different views as to the proper wording to produce the results desired under court decisions of the particular State, which decisions are often not the same due to the different constructions put upon the statutes by the courts of the different states under different constitutions.

The fact that these laws in the different states varied in their wording was to be expected under the conditions prevailing. It was also but natural that a variation in the laws should produce a condition in the business world that would be perplexing and annoying and that those affected should ask for modifications that would reduce such friction to the minimum; that the claim should be made that it was not only in the interest of the dealer but also in the interest of the consumer from the fact that all added friction in the distribution of the necessaries of life must add to the expense of such distribution and that such expense must ultimately be borne by the persons or individuals who were served. This view of the case, if correct, is of sufficient importance to warrant these national meetings and to invite the best endeavors of those engaged in this work to bring about a uniformity in the laws enacted and in the enforcement thereof. If it is not correct, then one of the main reasons for the existence of these meetings disappears.

Object of the Laws.

A reading of the so-called food and dairy laws of the different states and of the national government discloses the fact that the object in enacting the laws is twofold, namely, to prevent the manufacture and sale of foods that are poisonous, harmful or deleterious or that contain ingredients that are poisonous, harmful or deleterious, but to permit the sale of food products—even though they are adulterated—providing they are harmless and contain no harmful ingredients. The first class of goods, the sale is prohibited, and the latter, the sale is regulated. While it is true that the sale of harmful food products or food products containing harmful ingredients is prohibited, it is recognized that it is generally made in blanket terms. The statutes of the different states as a whole are not specific as to just what commodities are harmful; there are some exceptions to this rule. One of the many difficulties facing the executive officer in determining whether a food product may be sold is the question of determining whether such product itself or any of its ingredients are harmful. This becomes a scientific question to be determined possibly by the chemist, the pathologist or the physiologist, as the case may be. From this standpoint the responsibility for a correct enforcement of the statute is upon the shoulders of the expert. Without him the executive officer is powerless. The responsibility here is great and should be assumed by the expert with a due sense of its importance and with an integrity of purpose that will be satisfied by nothing less than the truth. This situation places the executive officer in a position where he must rely implicitly upon his expert; preconceived notions or pride of opinion can, of right, have no place in this work as the results are ladened with weal or woe to the great confiding public. Truth and truth alone must be the ensign and the responsibility for the determination of the facts must rest on the shoulders of our scientific friends. When they differ the executive is at sea, without compass or rudder, from the standpoint of healthfulness and he must wait for further determinations before he can act under a statute forbidding the sale of unhealthful food products. The reason for this is that under the statutes passed forbidding sales of unhealthful products, the burden of proof is upon the shoulders of him who seeks to enforce the statute, or in other words, seeks to curtail the freedom of contract of his fellow men. There was a time before I became familiar with certain fundamental principles of law that I believed that no food product should be allowed to be sold upon the market unless the vendor was prepared to and did prove that his goods were not only not harmful but that they were nutritious and wholesome, thus placing the burden of proof upon his shoulders as a condition precedent to his right of contract. A little thought upon this subject—a very little—is sufficient to show one the havoc that such a doctrine would produce in the business world. Suffice it to say that it has not been adopted by the government or by any of the states; that a careful examination of all the statutes and the practice in the courts will disclose the fact that the burden of proof as a rule is upon the plaintiff, not only in food cases but in all other cases and that, therefore, the position that the executive is powerless to enforce where the scientists disagree to the extent that the court could not reasonably determine the facts is correct and he must accordingly remain on neutral ground as to the mooted questions until more and better light is thrown upon them. Reasonable sagacity and diplomacy would, therefore, make of the executive under such circumstances an agnostic as to the questions involved.

Harmless Adulterations.

As to the sale of food products that are mixtures, compounds, imitations or blends, where the general intent or purpose of the statutes of the different states is mainly the same, the wording of the different statutes is not identical—grammatically speaking they are not uniform—although the general intent is the same, namely, that in the sale of such goods the label shall disclose to the purchaser the nature of the goods. In some of the statutes the provision is to the effect that if the goods contain no harmful or poisonous ingredient they may be sold although they are an adulteration within the terms of the statute, providing they are so labeled as to show that they are compounds, mixtures, imitations or blends. Other statutes make the further proviso that they may be sold providing they are labeled to show their constituents. In the first case it is evidently the intent that the consumer should be informed partially of the facts, that is, that he is buying a compound or mixture. Under other statutes it is evidently the intent that the purchaser should not only be informed of that fact but should be informed as to the names of the constituents composing the mixture or compound. Whichever way the statute is worded it is quite apparent that they both recognize that the consumer has rights that are not to be entirely subordinated to predatory commercialism which usually puts forth as its plea for noncompliance with such requirements that it would be giving away their trade secrets; thus placing their commercial rights above the individual health rights of the people. The trend of legislation, which is indicative of the trend of thought, seems to be against this commercial sophistry and is entirely in keeping with the doctrine that in order to maintain a healthful class of people great care should be given to the food they consume, and that the individual right of choice best subserves that end.

Another provision found in some of the statutes is to the effect that the goods shall not be falsely branded or labeled as to the state or territory in which manufactured or produced and that they shall not be so branded or labeled as to be misleading in any particular whatsoever. These two provisions were required to stop certain misrepresentations that have been largely made heretofore. To illustrate, it has been customary to brand a great many mixtures of syrups as "Pure Vermont Maple Syrup" when neither the commodity itself or any of its ingredients were produced in Vermont nor from the product of a maple tree. It may be fairly stated these and similar provisions in the different statutes have been necessitated from abuses or misrepresentations that have been the direct result of what is too often mistakingly called "commercial enterprise" and which invariably resulted in profit to the seller and a loss to the purchaser or consumer.

Standards.

Legal standards from the standpoint of enforcement of statutes are rules of evidence and if a commodity falls below the standard it is evidence, of itself, of violation. It does not necessarily follow, however, that the sale of food products that do meet the legal standard are of necessity pure and unadulterated. These standards are of great value in the work but are not always conclusive, depending upon their origin. When these standards are created by a statute they serve not only as a guide to the inspector or agent, but as a measure of evidence in court. When they are not a part of the statute, they may serve well as a guide to the agent or inspector in his work, but must, in my judgment, be sustained on trial in court as being equitable and correct in order to give them legal weight and value.

National and State Legislation.

When considering the work from this standpoint we have to face enactments from forty-seven different sources, each piece of legislation being under a different constitution, namely, United States legislation and the legislation in the forty-six states, each piece of legislation to be interpreted by different sets of courts, each set of courts having for its standard a different constitution. These facts make the effort for uniformity both perplexing and difficult. As an illustration, your attention is called to the decision of the court in case of People v. Marx, in the State of New York, reported in 99 N. Y. and case of Powell v. Commonwealth, a Pennsylvania case which went to the Supreme Court of the United States. Both these cases were relative to oleomargarine. The sections of the law in the two states in which the cases were made were alike and the Court of Appeals in New York declared the law unconstitutional while the court of last resort in Pennsylvania held that the Pennsylvania law was constitutional. These two cases serve to illustrate that uniformity in some cases may be impossible owing either to a dissimilarity of constitutions or the difference in construction placed upon the statutes or the constitution, or both, by the different courts. I do not quote this as an argument to the effect that an effort for uniformity should not be made, but rather to call attention to the difficulties in the way so that we may have a full and realizing sense of them at the start so that we may not be discouraged or weary in well doing. In my judgment the remedy for such conditions is a reconsideration of the statute by the law-making body to see if its verbiage cannot be so changed as to avoid constitutional objection and yet reach the end sought for.

The difficulties involved in the food work are approached by the national government from one standpoint and by the state from another, as considered from the standpoint of authority but not necessarily from the standpoint of the ends sought. The national government being a government of derived powers can exercise only such authority as is given it in the fundamental law, the constitution. In handling the food question it exercises what power it has under the authority given to it to regulate commerce between the states, and with foreign countries and the Indian tribes and to legislate for the territories. Its efforts must be put forth as against a commodity entering into commerce and cannot apply to the internal or intrastate traffic. Such traffic must be left to be regulated or controlled by the states under their police power—a power that has not been definitely defined but conceded to be sufficient for the enactment of legislation for the protection of the life, liberty and health of the people and a power which does not extend directly to the regulation or control of interstate traffic, although it is conceded that a state enactment which is fairly within the realm of the police power, properly enacted for police purposes, will not be declared to be unconstitutional from the fact that it indirectly interferes with or places a burden upon interstate commerce. Thus the line of demarkation between the powers to be exercised is fairly well drawn; that of the nation being over interstate commerce and that of the state over intrastate commerce. It is well to note, however, that these powers are to be exercised by a duly constituted authority; an authority created by fundamental laws, namely, the legislative branch of the government. When a legislative branch determines by an enactment the powers that shall be exercised and how they shall be exercised, the executive with whom enforcement is entrusted when confining himself within the limits of the powers conferred is acting on the responsibility and under the authority of the sovereignty which he represents and all his actions are official, and the authority which he represents is responsible for such actions, whether the statute itself is constitutional or unconstitutional. But if he adds to the powers which he exercises—those which are not provided in the statute—his act probably ceases to be either judicial or ministerial, becoming personal, and the responsibilty is his. Such exercise of powers is arbitrary and unjustifiable though justification is often attempted on the plea that the end justifies the means—a plea which is better fitted to cases in which the matters in question are determined by the arbitrament of force and arms. If this view is not correct, then it is hard to see how the would-be law abiding citizen who has had the statute carefully examined by a legal mind with the purpose of determining his rights and obligations is to fortify himself or his business interests against extraneous views that may be advocated or put forth by honest, ambitious but misguided executives. Ambition often plays a destructive part.

An Alexander sitting on the mountain top weeping for more worlds to conquer is not a fitting example for either judicial or executive procedure. Justice and equity should be the mark to be aimed at but the rule or standard for that justice or equity must be the mission or commission given by the duly constituted authority. With that view of the case we shall continue to be as we ought to be, a government by law rather than a government by men.

Respectfully submitted,

JAMES FOUST,
Treasurer.

BENJAMIN T. WALDO, of New Orleans.

If what I have to say falls harsh upon ears attuned to oratorical flights and rhetorical phrases and appears crude and illy prepared, it is partly because the paper I had written has been recast within the past few hours. All of yesterday and last evening I mingled with the delegates who have assembled for this convention and I have been taught many lessons of value in the practical part of the pure food and drug question.

When the flattering invitation to address you reached me, it was coupled with a gentle hint that I was not to occupy more than a half hour of the session; I was to speak to a title so all embracing as "The Police Power as Applied to Health Laws" after the manner of the stereoptican lecturer, who conducts his audience on a tour of Europe in a half hour. The absurdity and impossibility of such an undertaking as this will be apparent to anyone who understands the almost illimitable range of health laws and the police power, and, therefore, I had determined to devote the few minutes of the time allotted to me on your program to a very brief and cursory discussion of one or two matters pertaining to health law questions that have always appealed strongly to me, but I have heard so much from members of the convention, that I realize that I am merely the pupil and they the teachers. However, I shall adhere to my original intention as to one or two points, and promise, in advance, that I will not occupy more than ten of the thirty minutes assigned to me.

To begin with, I want each of you to reflect upon the fact that there is no health body or board, no commission or department represented here to-day but what has relatively greater power over persons, property and things than is possessed by any ruler, prince or potentate on earth. All of this they hold under what is called the "police power," a power at once so great and so elusive that Chief Justice Wait, of the Supreme Court of the United States, in the case of Stone vs. Mississippi, admitted that it was impossible to find a definition for it. Suffice it to say that it is the law of "overruling necessity"—that is to say, the law which overrules every consideration, private or public, when the necessity arises to guard, to protect or conserve the health, the morals or the general welfare of the people.

It would be unprofitable for the purposes of this paper, even if interesting from an anthropological standpoint, to trace from whatever its source may be to the present day the upbuilding of this power. It is fascinating to note, in this connection, that the laws attributed to Moses and Aaron laid down certain "pure food regulations" and "sanitary code" for the children of Israel, and it is wonderful to observe that these laws of the early Jews, which are founded upon anatomical structure, were pronounced to be, in many particulars, based upon scientific principles and commanded by no less an authority than Baron Cuvier, who was the founder of the now universally recognized classification in zoology and who raised comparative anatomy to the dignity of a science.

It was very easy for Moses to say "Whatsoever parteth the hoof and is cloven footed and cheweth the cud among the beasts, that shall ye eat." The ancient Jew had a reverence for the law, as the law, and in its deep rooted and uncompromising character has never been equalled since the dawn of time. It was simple for the rulers over Israel to say do this, or do that. It is no great matter to imagine the easy regulation of the pure food and drug question in any of the countries of continental Europe or England of our day, but had Moses, or any of the supposedly great political economists and sociologists been planted down in charge of the United States Department of Agriculture, or made Food Commissioner of any of the states of the Union, they would have needed not only all of the wisdom of Abraham and Isaac and Jacob, but also some of that Divine Power which, we read, caused the Red Sea to recede and made the water gush from the rock.

In this country we find the condition that every state in the Union, and the United States itself, is cursed with too much legislation. Under the Constitution, the Federal Government may exercise no police power. This is too elementary for discussion and no matter what my private views may, or may not be, it would be equally unwise and unprofitable to broach here the question of the constitutionality of any particular statute we might, or might not have in mind. Whatever these acts of Congress may be, they will, in time, undergo the test before the loftiest tribunal the world has ever known, until the Supreme Court of the United States passes upon such laws, it is not well to discuss them from a constitutional viewpoint in assemblies of this character. But, as I said before, there is too much legislation, State and Federal, and everywhere the police power is, in a measure, abused, by being made to serve an end that education should have long since accomplished.

We find statutes to cover every one of the conceivable relations of man to his fellows—there are multitudinous "Donts"; there are "does" even unto eternity; and when it reaches the points where the "donts" and "does" have to be interpreted by the courts, so many shadings and distinctions are made to these "donts" and "does" that the only practical result is another crop of "donts" and "does" in the shape of remedial legislation.

I do not mean to imply that health regulations and health laws in the form of statute are unnecessary; on the contrary, many are absolutely essential, but I am convinced from practical experience that a large percentage of such laws now upon the statute books would be superfluous were it not for the fact that many of the ethical standards inculcated in the past, and some of those taught in the present, have had the effect of lessening, if not destroying in the body of the people as a whole, the sense of that responsibility which each man should feel for his own conduct, not only as it reflects upon himself, but as it effects his fellow men. I believe, to be concise, that there has been to much hilarity over wooden nutmegs and too much laughter over the milk supply that comes by way of the old oaken bucket.

Except on rare occasions and in great crises, we Americans do not take ourselves, or each other, or the State or Federal governments, seriously. Nothing is quite so humorous as the tale of a sharp business trick. Four generations of Americans have learned to laugh at the wooden nutmegs and the milkman jokes, while four generations of school masters should have been busy teaching that above and beyond that which the written law can possibly express, there is higher rule of conduct. Had the lesson been taught, there would be no need now to attempt to cover with the police power the purely ethical and economic, and supposedly moral, aspect of man's complex relation with his fellows and so develop that narrow tyranny which should have no place in civilized society and which should find no tolerance in the science of the law.

To my mind, the mass of legislation annually and biennially enacted, and through which it is intended to define and lay down specific rules of conduct for every conceivable circumstance of life, in the daily domestic economy of the household as well as in business and manufacture, has had a strong tendency to weaken the moral responsibility of the people and, further, to spread broadcast the belief that anything we can possibly do, without actually breaking into the penitentiary, is not only legitimate, but is absolutely right. Not alone this, but self-confidence is destroyed and the power to judge between right and wrong disappears gradually as right and wrong are moulded and shaped and fashioned into concrete, definite form. I might remark that the most immoral people that the world has ever known, were the people who had the greatest multiplicity of gods. We Americans who have, as a nation and a state, more laws than any fifty governments since the beginning of the known world, have no reverence whatever for the law, as the law, although we are prone to pride ourselves upon being law abiding.

I have no doubt but what some of you will think that what I have said is merely speculative and theoretical; there is, however, a decidedly practical side to the matter that must appeal to us all, whether we are political economists, lawyers, food commissioners or producers, and that side has been dealt with, without as much result as could be hoped for, by every law, medical and food commissioner's convention held in the United States, within the past ten years—I refer to the necessity of uniformity in all health laws, particularly those which deal with the production and manufacture of articles for consumption. I do not propose to argue the question as to whether this can best be done under a Federal law or under a law enacted in each of the states by concert of action among the states nor have I any pet theory to advance and elucidate as to the method of enforcing this law, or, indeed, what the law itself should embrace. Suffice it to say that it is radically wrong to compel a manufacturer or producer to do business under conditions which require one standard for Louisiana, another for Wyoming and still a different one for New York or Rhode Island.

As I have said, it was my original intention to cover other points pertaining to the health law-police power, but I was convinced yesterday and this morning that what every section of the Union needs and what every state in the Union actually requires, is the teaching of the moral aspect of the pure food laws and uniformity in these laws and as a sequence the jurisprudence under them.

You can not legislate mankind into heaven or out of hell; you can not give the people health through the exercise of the police power alone. Written laws are only a part, a small part, of what is necessary and they bear the same relation to physical life as religion does to the moral life—that is, they are forms and expressions, but far above and beyond such forms there is a morality, a teaching, without which all of the laws ever written, from the days of Babylon down to the last amendment to the Act of June 30, 1906, are as idle as the passing winds.

The influence of those who have attended this convention is so far-reaching and so omnipotent that I have felt it my duty as a lawyer, and as a student of the law, to make the plea to you that it should be taught to our youth that the true philosophy of existence—as proven by science in all ages—is that the health and morals of each being should be conserved and protected, because the world is merely a collection of beings and what effects the single individual, affects the whole. Do not stop at teaching the public that wooden nutmegs have no flavor, produce inflammation of the intestines and contravene "Section 9999 of the Pure Food and Drug Law;" continue to battle along the loftier plane that all cheats and frauds are wrong, even in the absence of a written law—even in the absence of a deleterious effect.

All time has no such record of achievement as that of the past ten years in America towards better food, better living conditions, better sanitation and better health. Most that has been accomplished may be attributed to the persistent, ever energetic and too often unappreciated effort of you gentlemen, and of brother scientists following kindred work. Enormous as has been the harvest, gratifying as has been the result, the whole must be cemented to enure for the benefit of generations yet to come and the opportunity is ripe to preach to the people the science, the philosophy, the morality upon which all police power—all law is founded.

THE ENFORCEMENT OF THE LAW IN GEORGIA.

Mr. President, and Gentlemen of the Association:

In Georgia, since the enactment of the Food and Drugs Act in 1906, much progress has been made in the suppression of adulteration and securing the proper labeling of food products. The enforcement of the law has been carried out in such a manner (and not unlike many other states) as to gain the confidence, co-operation, and aid of merchants, dealers, and consumers alike. I take it that the protection of the consumer, no matter what method is employed to bring this about, is the goal that we are striving for, and we have adopted that method which seems to us, thus far, to have accomplished this end.

When samples of products are examined that fail to meet the requirements of the law, notices are at once sent out citing the guilty party to appear and when the proof of guilt is shown, a warning is given them—the matter is published in the daily press and subsequently in bulletins. It is indeed rare that a person has been charged with violation a second time.

We frequently seize a shipment of adulterated goods and warn the merchant not to sell that product and he holds it subject to the order of the firm or corporation which usually resides out of the state. It is subsequently shipped back to the consignor or re-labeled to comply with the law. As a matter of fact, they fear publication more than they would a fine and the public is informed of the violation. Besides this, we have never hesitated to give advice as to what we considered proper labeling, as we have felt it our duty, whenever possible, to be of every assistance. Instead of acting the detective and trying to catch some one unaware, we have endeavored to give those who honestly tried to comply with the law such information as to prevent them from violating it. In this manner, we have made friends for our law and the law is being enforced, which is shown by the large number of analyses that are made in our laboratory showing a decreasing number of violations every month.

The Georgia law is very similar to the National law and has a provision in it that we shall fix standards of purity for food products in accordance with those of the National Government. This has, in a few instances, been very difficult on us in the enforcement of our law. A notable example was the ruling against the sale of Bleached Flour. As soon as this ruling was passed, Georgia issued a similar ruling and the millers of our state and all law abiding brokers and merchants tried to obey the law by demanding unbleached flour. Yet some persisted in shipping into our state bleached flour. We did not care to go into the courts, as the United States Government had pending a number of cases and we felt that they could better carry the cases to a successful termination—so, whenever bleached flour was found, a warning was given that it could not be sold in Georgia, and the shipments were either returned or shipped to other states. So by the time the Government had a favorable decision, our state was practically free from bleached flour. I cite this instance to show that in contested cases, we frequently have to await the contest of the Government in the courts before enforcing that feature of our law. In many cases, we have simply notified the merchant that certain articles, which were misbranded or adulterated, could not be sold, and they have invariably held the articles until they were properly branded or shipped from the state.

During the past year our attention has been more especially directed to the suppression of adulteration and proper labeling of dairy products, beverages, extracts, canned goods, flour, corn, and the detection and elimination of objectionable preservatives.

I wish to say that much attention has been given to the sale of mouldy and damaged corn. The disease, pellagra, has been attributed by many authorities to the use of damaged and mouldy corn. Two years ago we began the work of inspecting this corn and were very active this past spring, as more was being offered for sale than for a number of years past, and some 140,000 bushels of this corn was seized and forbidden to be offered for sale in our state. If it be the cause of pellagra, we believe that much good has been already accomplished, and we do know that less complaint has been had from the death of live stock than ever before, which damaged corn and hay formerly produced.

Our activity along this line brought some protest from some brokers in saying that we had demoralized the corn market, but we thought it better to demoralize the market than allow the health of the people and stock to be jeopardized.

Much work has also been done on Drug Samples, and the same method pursued as in the case of foods.

We have tried to educate the people along better sanitary lines (although we have no law on this subject) and a noticeable increase in better sanitary methods are noted in factories, restaurants, and hotels. We have a score card on which the sanitary conditions are noted and these will be sent to the owners and subsequently published. We hope the next Legislature will give us a proper sanitary law. And we will also endorse a law, which we hope will be passed, showing the net weight on packages as we believe the failure to show the net weight on packages is a source of much fraud.

In a word, our policy has been educational, publicity, and directive by posting dealers how to comply with the law and protect themselves in the proper manner of labeling. We believe it has done more towards ridding our state of adulterated and misbranded foods and drugs and given untold protection to the consumer than if we had instituted proceedings in every case.

COMMISSIONER BROWN, OF TENNESSEE, ONE OF THE ORIGINAL CANDIDATES FOR THE PRESIDENCY FOR 1910-1911, ELOQUENTLY SOUNDED THE KEY-NOTE OF THE CONVENTION, IN HIS SPEECH RE-NOMINATING PRESIDENT FLANDERS FOR A SECOND TERM.

"In the conduct of any deliberative body differences must arise, else there would be no need of conferences. When they do occur if the usefulness of the body as a whole is to continue, the differences must be composed. But the soul of an organization is its principles. If these principles are sound there must be no abandonment of them, and so in composing differences, principles are to be thoroughly held in mind, and if any portion of a body find the differences of principle between themselves and their colleagues to be irreconcilable, their place is on the outside, and a new body must be organized of which they may feel themselves to be an integral part. But the dissenters must always recognize that they may be fallible, that it is given only to omniscience to be always right, and that the honest opinions of honest men must always receive respectful consideration from other honest men. The considerations just enunciated must apply with peculiar force to a body such as ours. We are in our offices not only for the purpose of protecting our people from the rapacity of those who would exploit them for purely selfish purposes, but also, if (and I say it reverently) we may, for the purpose of pointing out to men who seek public patronage for their products, and who are equally honest in intent with ourselves, what we believe to be their mistakes. With the first class no compromise is possible. With the second we must meet on an equal plane, and consider differences in an earnest and reverent spirit yielding where wrong, holding fast to what is good, and seeking always and everywhere the greatest good of the greatest number. Personal prejudices and ambitions must and can have no place in such deliberations, and political and selfish considerations must be as far from our thoughts as the North from the South Pole. And no essential principle of right must be violated. Further, we must as practical men serving in a practical cause remember that we are dealing with conditions and not with theories, that error flies with the swiftness of the arrow, but truth comes with leaden feet. Every step though ever so little is an advance, and they may perchance often have to be retraced. Human nature has been uncounted centuries reaching its present stage of advancement, and other centuries must elapse before the aims of the inspired men of the ages are to be obtained, and so, in seeking the greatest good of our common country let us lay aside prejudice, let us heal the scars of old battles, let us, as good men and true, join ourselves to others like minded and seek earnestly what we believe to be the best interests of those we serve in a broad-minded, large-hearted, tolerant way, putting behind us all littleness and seeking only those large things of life which bring the greatest good of life, not compounding with evil but striving to make our good so great as to overcome evil. Gentlemen, I have the honor to nominate for our President one who has served us honestly and well, the Hon. George L. Flanders, of New York.

OFFICERS AGREED ON.

Contest on Floor of Convention Averted by Compromise.

For three days there has been an underground feeling of impending controversy in the convention over the selection of the officers, there being two distinct factions in the association contending for different principles, and each faction seeking to secure control of the body through the election of the officers. The fight was fought to a finish at the Denver convention, but there have been disquieting rumors of an impending outbreak here, so a number of the gentlemen got together and held a long and serious conference yesterday afternoon, after the adjournment of the session, and last night they gave out the following announcement:

The object of the organization of the Association of State and National Food and Dairy Departments was primarily for the purpose of securing effective uniformity in state and national legislation. After many years of effort a national food and drugs act was obtained. Since the passage of this law the work of the association has largely been directed to the obtaining of uniformity in state and national legislation and in uniformity of the execution of the laws of the various states.

There developed a difference of opinion in the association as to the use of certain preservatives in foods. This reached an acute stage at Mackinac and culminated at Denver. Realizing that such a question cannot be settled through control of the organization, and that its work is being hampered on account thereof, the food control officials have, without surrendering their personal convictions in any way, arrived at a compromise through which, it is hoped and believed, the efficiency of the association will be greatly enhanced. At a joint caucus the following list of officers were agreed upon:

President, Hon. George L. Flanders, New York.

First Vice President, Dr. Lucius P. Brown, Tennessee.

Second Vice President, Hamilton P. Jones, M. D., Louisiana.

Third Vice President, Hon. L. Davies, Washington.

Secretary, Hon. W. M. Allen, North Carolina.

Treasurer, Mr. James Foust, Pennsylvania.

Executive Committee, Dr. Chas. D. Woods, Maine; Dr. S. J. Crumbine, Kansas; Hon. Wm. P. Cutler, Missouri.

Signed by R. M. Allen, H. E. Barnard, W. F. Cannon, A. H. Jones, S. L. Mains and C. D. Woods, committee.

The report of the Committee was adopted and the above named officers unanimously elected for the ensuing year.

Affirmative action was unanimously taken by the Association upon the following motion:

Resolved, That a committee be appointed by the President to submit to the next annual meeting of this Association a revision of the by-laws, and that such committee consist of the following members: C. S. Woods, H. E. Barnard, A. H. Jones, H. R. Maines, R. M. Allen, W. F. Cannon.

The immediate favorable response to this proposal was clearly a note of confidence in these "harmonizers."

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. President: Your committee reports unanimously the following resolutions:

Number 1.

Resolved, That the Association of State and National Food and Dairy Departments hereby expresses its appreciation of and thanks for the gracious hospitality it has received from the State of Louisiana and the delightful and historic city of New Orleans, and particularly to his Honor, the Mayor of New Orleans, for his cordial welcome, to the Leon Godchaux Planting Company, the New Orleans Sugar and Rice Exchange, the officers of the city filtration plant, the New Orleans Lodge B. P. O. Elks, Mr. Walter J. Verlander, President of the Southern Improvement and Ferry Company, Mr. Lawrence Fabacher, President of the Jackson Brewing Company, The New Orleans Progressive Union, and the merchants of the city and state, for the pleasant and instructive entertainment received from them, and espeially to the local committee of arrangements and the Hon. Hamilton P. Jones, State Food Commissioner, for their tireless efforts to promote the pleasure and facilitate the business of this Association.

Number 2.

Resolved, That we are gratified at the progress already made to secure uniformity in food and drug legislation, and urge that this Association use its best effort to bring about complete uniformity in all food and drug laws.

Number 3.

Whereas, It is the belief of this Association that the enforcement of the National Food and Drugs Act of June 30th, 1906, and the enforcement of the Pure Food Laws of the various states, which laws are patterned thereafter, are seriously hampered by the absence of standards for foods; therefore,

Be It Resolved, That this Association urges upon Congress the enactment of a law providing for the appointment by the President of the United States of a Food Standards Commission, to be composed of food law officials and chemists, state and national, connected with the enforcement of food laws, and representative manufacturers, producers and dealers in foods, which commission shall fix food standards to be used in the enforcement of the Food and Drugs Act.

Number 4.

Resolved, That it is the judgment of this Association that each state should enact suitable legislation to secure sanitary inspection of all places where food or drugs are prepared or manufactured.

Number 5.

Resolved, That this Association favors the enactment by Congress and the various states of a Weight or Measure branding law; and that any such law be so framed as to make fair and reasonable allowance for the inevitable variations of weight or measure due to shrinkage, evaporation or other natural causes, and the unavoidable slight variations attendant upon the weighing or measuring of individual packages; and that the interests of consumers, manufacturers and dealers alike demand that weight and measure laws, like all food laws, should be uniform.

Number 6.

Resolved, That experience has shown that efficiency in food control officials increases with experience, and the people are entitled to have continuously, in connection with the enforcement of food control laws, the services of trained, experienced, administrative and technical men,

Therefore, this Association urges that the enforcement of food control laws be divorced from politics.

Number 7.

Resolved, That the Association of State and National Dairy and Food Departments hereby recognizes and acknowledges the value of the services rendered to the cause of pure food by the late Commissioner from Michigan, the Honorable A. C. Bird, and deplores the loss of his wise and conservative counsel in the affairs of this Association, and as a last token of its appreciation of his great worth, we hereby extend to his bereaved family our profound sympathy.

Number 8.

Resolved, That this Association has suffered a great loss in the death of Albert E. Leach, Chief of the Denver Laboratory of the Bureau of Chemistry, late Vice President of this Association, and Drug Analyst to the Massachusetts State Board of Health, whose analytical skill, high integrity and broad good sense made his services of unusual value to the Pure Food cause, and whose work as an author has been of incalculable value in the enforcement of the food laws of the State and Nation. In token of our deep appreciation of the great worth of this modest, industrious, public servant, we hereby extend this token of sympathy to his bereaved family.

Number 9.

Whereas, There appears in many of the papers, journals and magazines of this country, false and misleading statements concerning the therapeutic value of so-called patent or proprietary preparations, which are intended and do deceive the public; therefore,

Be It Resolved, That this Association deprecates such advertisements as being a menace to the public welfare and contrary to the spirit of the National Food and Drugs Act.

Respectfully submitted,

GEO. P. McCABE,
E. W. DUNLAP,
HAMILTON P. JONES,
S. L. MAINS,
JAMES FOUST,
Committee on Resolutions.

NOTES ON THE 14TH ANNUAL CONVENTION OF THE ASSOCIATION OF STATE AND NATIONAL FOOD AND DAIRY DEPARTMENTS AT NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Sowing was done at Mackinac, the reaping at Denver, and peace came at New Orleans. The threshing operation was avoided.

The session was marked by a number of papers of high value to the food executives, but most valuable of all were the spirited, informal discussions which they occasioned.

Among the best things in the way of entertainment were the sazerac and ramos.

A number of the illustrious members of the Association used the opportunity to acquaint themselves with the cookery of the French quarter. On one of the excursions made for this purpose, a filet of duck was ordered after assurance had been received that it was not "cold storage." For richness of flavor and strength of aroma, Mackinac fish faded instantly in comparison with that duck. Upon the suggestion that this fowl was rather high in flavor to Anglo-Saxon tongues, the garcon replied: "Oh, no sir! this duck is fresh!" It was later ascertained that to make fresh duck "a la Francaise," the correct manner is to hang a duck high in the air until ripe, and when so ripe that the body will fall from the head, the duck is ready for table preparation. We have always known that the term "fresh" had a variety of meanings, according to the context used, but we had not before ascertained that geographical position affected meaning of this word.

Commissioner Burke, of Wyoming, during a spirited discussion arose to his feet, walked around his revolving chair, threw his judicial form back, brought his fist down upon the table, demanded recognition from the chairman, and shouted: "Some fellows in this convention swell so fast that they burst their buttons off!" This brought a storm of laughing applause which incensed the Western Commissioner. "It's true," he shouted.

Editor Myers, of the American Food Journal, who handled the whip so well at the Denver Convention, resigned that position on the first day's session at New Orleans and in a very eloquent way turned over his wand of office to Commissioner Cannon, of Colorado. Cannon, who is known to be bashful, accepted the position very reluctantly.

Those who voted on different sides of the questions presented at Denver showed, during the first two days, a pronounced disposition to question the motives underlying every suggestion made—excepting always the motion to take a recess for the acceptance of the warm hospitality of the historic city of the South. But the members of this Association are men of affairs and, though slow to respond to any crack of the lash in the hands of any would-be-driver, showed themselves to be of too great good sense to maintain an attitude of distrust which would defeat the object of the Association, and on the later days of the Convention all united promptly upon the essential matters presented to the Association.

The genial editor of the American Food Journal, Mr. H. B. Myers, rendered valuable assistance to the members of the Association during their stay in New Orleans. His office was open to all and he did everything in his power to facilitate the business of the members by furnishing stenographic assistance and in every other way possible. We hope that he may attend many other meetings of the Association.

A trip to the Godchaux Plantation was one of great interest to all the members of the Association—most of whom had never before witnessed the growing of cane and its manufacture into the finished products, sugar and syrup. The warm hospitality of Mr. Ed. Godchaux will always be a bright spot in our memories of this southern trip.

The contrast between the Denver and New Orleans Conventions is found chiefly in the fact that by the time we had been in the Sunny South for two days, we were all saying: "O, what's the use!"

A few of the members were much stuck on the South. This statement is explained by the fact we were beguiled into visiting the factories of Messrs. Penick & Ford. Condensed sweetness was everywhere, and cleanliness too. The visiting party is under many obligations to Mr. H. M. Shilstone, chemist of the company, for his courtesy and his explanation of the various processes used and of the differences in the raw materials used and blends manufactured.

Commissioner Jones, of Illinois, by his eloquent gestures, made with all grace, entertained his colleagues and their hosts on the occasion of an oyster stew; but we regret to note that the Commissioner's voice is not so resonant as it was at St. Paul. The loss of voice of many of our national spell-binders seems to have developed rapidly during the past few months.

Editor Myers, of the American Food Journal, stated confidentially: "If we could only blot out the memory of the Mackinac and Denver Conventions." In reply, Commissioner Cannon, of Colorado, said: "Brace up, Myers, we all ought to be glad we are still alive!"

Among the new faces appearing at this Convention was that of Dr. F. L. Dunlap, Associate Chemist of the Bureau of Chemistry, Washington, D. C. Dr. Dunlap's genial manner and air of good fellowship won him many friends.

Dr. Jones, State Food Commissioner of Louisiana, made every member of the Association his debtor because of the constant and thoughtful attention he bestowed upon all those in attendance at the Convention. To his leadership is due, in a very large measure, the successful and delightful session of the Convention in New Orleans.

The atmosphere of the Association was darkly clouded during the early days of the Convention and many ominous lightning flashes foretold an approaching storm. It's on-coming was awaited with deep concern, but with square-jawed determination. Suddenly, by vigorous action, three prominent members from each of the two opposing groups, were pushed into a committee room with instructions to "get together" and with the statement, as the key was turned in the lock, that they would not be released until an agreement had been reached. Word of this new turn of affairs spread quickly through the lobbies, and the members, with much curiosity, not uncoupled with anxiety, awaited the outcome of this unique meeting.

The members, thus brought together, proved to be successful harmonizers. After a prolonged conference, it was announced that they had arrived at the conclusion that it was best for the Association that the ticket elected at Denver should be re-elected for the ensuing year; and they naturally bound themselves to support that ticket, believing that the action was the best method of securing the unity essential to the successful development of the work of the Association.

State Analyst Stallings, of Georgia, the food control executive of that thriving Commonwealth, read a very interesting paper upon the publicity methods of the food control in his state. Mr. Stallings was formerly Assistant Chemist of the Pennsylvania Agricultural Experiment Station, and royally entertained his former fellow-citizens, Commissioner James Foust and Dr. William Frear, during their brief stay in Atlanta, on their way homeward.

No face was more missed at the New Orleans Convention than that of the lamented Commissioner Bird, of Michigan.

At this Convention, the United States Department of Agriculture was represented by the following delegation: Solicitor George R. McCabe, Associate Chemist; Dr. F. L. Dunlap, Chief of the Bureau of Animal Industry; Dr. A. D. Melvin, Hon. George M. Whittaker, and Chief of the Dairy Division, Hon. B. H. Rawl.

HARMONY NOTES.

Soon after the Conference, Director Woods, of Maine, and Solicitor McCabe, of Washington, D. C., were seen to come from the hotel, arm in arm.

Mains, of Nebraska, proved to be a successful harmonizer and even Oklahoma shook hands with Duluth.

Cannon, of Colorado, declared before going to election that peace must be restored and he pointed his gun at every man who looked like fighting.

After the Peace Conference, Jones, of Illinois, said: "I told you so."

Allen, of Kentucky, was charged with being somewhat of a side stepper. But his record shows the kind of man he really is.

Commissioner Barnard, of Indiana, who had shown his ability to fight for what the people need, by his action on the harmonizing committee made it clear that he realizes fully that the world contains more than one good thing.

The ladies of New Orleans entertained the ladies of the Convention in such a manner as to add much to the harmony of the Convention.

The Association's hall of fame, when it shall have been endowed and built, will contain the life size portraits of Woods of Maine, Barnard of Indiana, Allen of Kentucky, Jones of Illinois, Mains of Nebraska, and Cannon of Colorado, the "equilibrators" of the Convention.

Upon the report of the "harmonizing" committee, the famous Denver whip was laid away, rolled in chamois skin to preserve it as a relic. Among the chief mourners at this ceremony were Editor Myers and Commissioner Cannon of Colorado.

Peace has been restored. There is now some prospect of good work being accomplished. Don't touch the switch-board; it carries 2,000 volts.

Don't fail to see the cartoons in American Food Journal, as Editor Myers is always on the job.

The entertainment had much to do with bringing about harmony. Of course the oyster stew Thursday night was the round up of the occasion.

Commissioner Allen, of Kentucky, the gum shoe messenger of Peace, stated at the oyster stew that the Harmony Committee did a good job. Now, boys, let us celebrate.

The six men who formed the Peace Commission were in possession of a Cannon.

The Association of State Food Executives, which was organized on Wednesday, contributed it's share in restoring harmony.

Myers, of Chicago, stated on Wednesday that he handled the whip at the Denver Convention. Yes. boys, I did more than that, I directed the fight. Now get together, let us have peace.

After the Peace Commission made its report, both factions who had held caucuses decided that a public sale would take place after the final adjournment, at which time the following would be auctioned off and knocked down to the highest bidder: 5 promises made for president, 16 promises made at Denver, which were never fulfilled, 6 whips which were used at the Denver Convention, 3 promises for the next place of meeting, 4 whips which were not needed at New Orleans, 8 empty cigar boxes, which were used in the caucus, 1 pair of gum shoes which were used by Commissioner Allen, of Kentucky, 28 tips which were given to the bell boys for furnishing ice water, 80 imaginary troubles, 14 bridges which were never crossed.

All of the above items being bought in by Editor Myers.

STATEMENT OF WORK OF DAIRY AND FOOD BUREAU.

Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust issues the following statement of the work of the Dairy and Food Bureau for the calendar year, 1910, which has in some respects been unprecedented in volume. The special agents purchased and the chemists analyzed during the year, 5,594 samples, including 1,848 milks, 1,361 general foods, 938 butters, 499 creams, 288 ice creams, 283 oleomargarine, 278 non-alcoholic drinks, and 99 samples of other classes.

Prosecutions for adulteration, misbranding, departure below standard, and other infractions of the food laws were terminated in 621 cases, affecting almost 70 kinds of food and non-alcoholic drinks. Of these, 231 were oleomargarine cases, 70 milk cases and 62 ice cream cases. Among the less frequent, but highly interesting classes of cases were those for the sale of rotten eggs, of cakes and crackers adulterated with boric acid, marshmallow confections adulterated with sulphurous acid, sausage containing added starch and water, pie filler with artificial color imitating that of fruit, decomposed potatoes and wormy chestnuts.

The Commissioner adds that the fines and costs imposed by the courts in these cases amounted to $30,405.84, of which those for the violation of the oleomargarine law amounted to $15,456.92, or more than one-half.

The total receipts of the Bureau for the year, including $79,697.11, derived from oleomargarine licenses, amounted to $110,802.95, the disbursements to $79,661.65, leaving a balance of $31,141.30 excess of receipts over expenditures.

The public will, the Commissioner believes, be gratified that the work of the year has been accomplished without any addition to the tax burden. It is, he says, more important, however, that the annual record shall exhibit progressive decrease in the adulteration and misbranding of the foods and beverages sold in the State.

It is a matter of congratulations for all concerned that in the case of many of the chief food staples, the record marks a distinct decrease in these nefarious practices.

Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust makes the following report of the operations or his Bureau during Governor Stuart's administration, including the period from January, 1907, to December 31, 1910. The number of food samples of all classes, including soft drinks, confections and condiments, analyzed was 24,500. Total number of cases prosecuted and terminated was 2,382, of which 904 were cases under the oleomargarine act. The amount of fines collected on account of these cases was $120,524.26, of which $85,785.02 was received from oleomargarine fines. In addition to these fines for violations of the oleomargarine law, eleven defendants were given jail sentences ranging from twenty days to six months. The amount of fees received from oleomargarine licenses was $181,709.25, and from renovated butter licenses $5,585.84. The total receipts from all sources were $307,710.35. The total disbursements for the same period were $311,786.41. These figures show that the Bureau was practically self-sustaining.

From this statement it is clear that during the present administration, with its active enforcement of the food laws, the receipts of the office have been more than sufficient to defray the cost of this branch of the public service. The Commissioner states that his Bureau is not to be regarded as a revenue collecting agency, because its purpose, first and last, is to protect the consumer from the sale of food injurious to health and from fraud and deception. It should be understood that under present laws all receipts of the office are turned directly into the State Treasury for the use of the Commonwealth and all its expenses are paid from specific appropriations made by the Legislature; so that as a matter of fact the Bureau is not dependent upon receipts from fines for the funds necesary to enable it to perform its duty.

The tax-payers will, nevertheless, be gratified to know that effective service can be maintained under the existing laws without the imposition of an additional burden upon him.

DR. DIXON AND THE DAIRY FARMERS.

In a recent discussion of the milk question State Health Commissioner Dixon indulged in the following observations:

"As an old farmer myself who has led the reapers around the wheatfield, swinging a cradle and then in the evening milking my share of the cows, I am naturally favorable to the dairy farmer, but it is the close study of actual conditions that convinces me that the first disease germs often, perhaps more frequently, get into the milk after it has passed out of the farmer's control.

"The farmer appreciates more to-day than ever the necessity of keeping milk clean. He knows that if it reaches the market sweet and pure the demand will be increased. He is up against a difficult task to make money out of his milk dairy when he has to constantly buy new cattle to take the place of those that have gone dry, become sick, or died.

"He must produce or purchase food for them, keep up the stable, pay his help, constantly replenish his supply of pans, buckets, etc., and haul this milk over all kinds of roads, through all sorts of weather and then receive for all this 4 or 4½ cents a quart from the dealer.

"The milk often begins to receive pollution on the railroad, when an attendant takes off the lid of a milk can, helps himself to a drink and then replaces the lid, drippings of milk which have reached his lips going back into the can.

"Does this sound like an exaggeration? Let me cite you a case. I remember a baggage master who once called upon me for medical advice. I found him suffering with pulmonary tuberculosis. When I advised him to drink plenty of milk he informed me that he was drinking a great deal of it. He said he hauled milk in his baggage car and that he was in the habit of drinking out of the lids of the cans.

"At the stations and along the streets the milk dealers often purchase from each other. The purchaser sticks his finger into the milk and then into his mouth to determine the sweetness and then into the second can until he tests as many cans of milk as he proposes purchasing.

"Only a few days ago a gentleman came into my office to tell me he had just witnessed his own milkman hand a street cleaner a drink of milk contained in the lid of his can and then replace the lid.

"I have witnessed over and over again milkmen collect bottles from their customers, poke the index finger in the mouth of one and the thumb in the other to carry the bottles to the wagon. Trusting that they had been properly cleansed by the housewife, the bottles were at once refilled, caps taken out of a pocket which also contained a handkerchief and then these bottles of milk were delivered to the next customers. It is not worth while to enumerate other instances to make my point clear, that is, we must not confine ourselves to the dairy farm in looking for conditions that render milk impure. Our municipalities throughout the State will have to keep their eyes open to the way in which the dealers and others are handling the milk after it has left the farmer's care."

The Bulletin reproduces the foregoing remarks by Dr. Dixon because they seem to be particularly pertinent to the milk problem. Unless there is carefulness and cleanliness all along the line from the moment the cow produces the milk until it enters the stomach of the consumer, there is constant danger that it may become contaminated by dangerous disease germs. While there has been a very decided advance in methods of caring for milk, there is still much ignorance and considerable carelessness. We venture to say that there are dairymen or venders of milk still in the land who do not recognize the vital importance of rigid sanitary methods. They would be surprised and offended if anybody were to complain about the practice of sticking thumb and finger into the mouths of milk bottles.

In addition to what has already been said, it must be added that much of the infected milk in the State receives its infection after it enters the homes of the consumer. In spite of the activity of health boards and the attention devoted to sanitary matters by the newspapers many housekeepers are not wise concerning the nature of milk and the importance of preserving it from contact with any substance that may render it unfit for human food. Many young mothers are especially ignorant, and this accounts in some measure for the heavy mortality among infants. Many think little about sanitary precautions and wouldn't know how to take them if they did. Some are as incredulous concerning the revelations of science as their remote ancestors would be if they returned to earth for a season.

Thus we find that a portion of the responsibility for infected milk must frequently be placed upon the home. The farmer is not always blameless, the vender is frequently careless and slouchy, an occasional railroad man, in ignorance of the possible result of his action, drinks out of the lid of a can and the housekeeper is sometimes responsible for the sickness or death of her babe. But we are steadily moving along the upward way.

WHERE DAIRYING IS A COMPLETE SCIENCE.

A correspondent of the London Cowkeeper who has been studying dairy farming throughout Europe remarks that the time spent in studying dairying in Holland was devoted to the most intensive dairy regions, viz: the provinces of North Holland and Friesland, which take the lead both in quality and number of dairy cattle. The country is a network of canals, the water being pumped to higher levels by means of engines or windmills, and thence to the sea.

All the county roads are macadamized or paved with brick, while the drainage system makes fencing unnecessary excepting along railroads or to enclose small paddocks. A passage from one pasture to another is afforded by a bridge. Posts are set on either side, and a gate closes the passage. Holland contains about six million acres of really good land. The size seems to be no hindrance to progress, as over five millions of inhabitants, noted for their thrift and cleanliness, make their living on this small area. Most of the farms are owned by the men operating them. These energetic farmers keep their places in the best of condition.

A poor farmer is seldom found, as the life of the Hollander has been devoted to the one subject—dairying—and his education has been such as to make him appreciate the importance of thorough, careful methods. His children are well educated, and in some cases are sent to another country to complete their studies. The foresight shown by these people in providing permanent roads, buildings and equipment for their dairy work, and any of their cleanly methods could well be studied and copied on this side of the Atlantic.

Milk production is practically a grass proposition. Ploughs and grain raising are almost unknown in the intensive dairy sections. The farms are about sixty acres in extent, the livestock generally consisting of twenty-two cows, nine heifers, forty sheep, fifteen pigs and one or two horses. Grass grows very luxuriantly, and sometimes difficulty is experienced in curing hay; if it is too wet it is cut and put in the ground or stacked and covered with mud for use as grass silage.

The pastures and meadows require special care. Through the summer the pastures are gone over at frequent intervals, and the cow droppings gathered with shovel and wheelbarrow and placed in piles, thus avoiding the waste occasioned by fouling the grass and the tufted appearance too often seen in our pastures.

During the winter the decomposed heaps are again spread upon the pasture. Besides this, the cleanings from the canals, the mud and rank growth of soft reeds and water plants that are yearly removed when the sides of the canals are cut down, and placed in heaps, and after they are thoroughly rotted are applied as fertilizers to the land.

One of the first things that attracts the attention of the traveler in Holland is the large number of black and white cattle. Successful dairying depends on efficient cows, and properly supplying their wants and treating them kindly. In this particular the Dutch cannot be excelled.

The cows are turned to pasture about May; during the cold damp days of early spring the cows wear blankets to protect them from the weather. They are milked in the pasture, and the milk brought back with a horse or dogs and a cart. At the beginning of November the cattle are stabled.

The winter grain consists almost entirely of oil cake, fed only to heavy milkers in quantities of from two to four pounds a day. The principle feed, however, is hay, each cow receiving nearly thirty pounds daily. The cows are shown every attention. They are carefully curried and their tails suspended by a string from the ceiling so that while the animal has free use of its tail, it can never get into the gutter to be fouled.

Scarcely an hour passes, day or night, that the cows are not visited by an attendant. Holland is often called the cow's paradise, and it well deserves the name. In North Holland the house and stable are under one roof. These homes are models of neatness and are interesting in the extreme. The buildings are commodious, the roof steep, and the eaves rather low, usually not ten feet from the ground. Built of stone or brick, the houses are usually richly and artistically furnished. The stables are directly opposite to what we are accustomed to in America.

A cow stable in America is usually an untidy, uninviting and in many cases absolutely filthy place, where, to the disgrace of civilization, human food is produced. In Holland a cow stable is as clean and carefully cared for as any other room in the house. The Holland stable is large enough for sixteen double stalls, the floor of which is raised about eighteen inches. These cow sheds are artistically decorated during summer, while the woodwork is neatly painted a bright blue.

A RAILROAD DAIRY BULLETIN.

A bulletin issued by the agriculturist of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, F. R. Stevens, gives the result of a careful examination into dairy practice in New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey. Mr. Stevens, in obtaining his facts and figures, has had the assistance of the New York state Department of Agriculture.

It is estimated, he says, that if feed, labor and interest on investment be taken into account, two out of every five cows are kept at an actual loss. The only way in which a dairyman can come out ahead in the long run is to weigh the milk produced by each cow through a period of one year. Then he can get rid of the poor cows and keep the good ones.

In one locality, as Mr. Stevens learned, a certain cheese factory paid a dairy farmer $877 for the product of eight cows in the same year that it paid a neighboring farmer $868 for the milk from twenty-two cows. As the milk was bought by weight this meant that the eight were giving more than the twenty-two. In another locality some herd-owners obtained an average of 300 pounds of butter fat per cow, while others got an average of only twenty pounds.

The bulletin emphasizes the importance of keeping a careful record of the receipts and expenditures in a dairy. In this connection it says:

"The noteworthy absence of any detailed or general bookkeeping on most farms has hidden the constant draft on natural resources to support the herd and the lack of herd records has allowed many robber cows to board at the expense of their dividend-paying stable mates. The greatest source of loss in the dairy industry is the feeding of unprofitable cows."

There are many sensible suggestions in the bulletin of Mr. Stevens. The majority of them, however, should have appealed long ago to the majority of dairymen. The cow that costs more than her keep is a good animal to get rid of at the earliest possible moment for she is a reducer of profit and a continual source of expense to her amiable owner. Whatever may be the virtues of such an animal and we are far from denying that she possesses them, she is not calculated to shine as a member of a dairy herd. She would be of far more use in other spheres of service, but it is not necessary here to specifically refer to them.

THE COST OF FOOD.

This Bulletin has never undertaken to deny that first class food products are apt to cost a little more than inferior imitations or adulterated goods. But the increase is apparent only; the genuine article goes a great deal farther than the poorer one.

There is more nourishment in one pound of first quality food than in double the quantity of adulterated or imitation food. It should require no argument to impress this truth upon the mind of the housekeeper or whoever purchases the food for the family.

The economical instinct cuts a large figure in human conduct. Much has been said recently of American extravagance in connection with the surprising rise in prices. It is true that Americans are very wasteful as compared with the people of other lands, but it is still true that low prices have a charm for the average buyer.

The bargain-seeker is very much abroad in the land, even yet. If you glance at the advertising pages of the newspapers you will not be long in discovering that the modern advertiser invariably lays the emphasis upon the bargains to be found in his stock. There is always a marked reduction in the price of his goods. Everything has been marked down.

It is still true—we wish it wasn't—that the man who is most skillful in presenting the bargain side of his stock in trade is likely to attract the greatest number of patrons. The funny men of the press have long since taken notice of this peculiarity of the American housekeeper and they have coined a great many laughable paragraphs concerning her gullibility.

The head of the household, the housekeeper, whoever buys the family supplies, is still tempted by the siren cry of cheapness in the purchase of articles of food. This is not true of all purchasers. Many have learned their lesson and are now convinced that the best is none too good for the loved ones of their households, so long as they are able to pay the price. They discovered by actual experiment and watchfulness that the thing which costs the least is worth the least.

This Bulletin would not be thought to advocate extravagance or recklessness in the purchase of food. It concedes that it is folly to pay extravagant prices simply for the sake of showing off. But it does hold that imitations and adulterated articles of food are dear at any price.

FOOD VALUE OF SKIM MILK.

When this writer was a boy his grandmother called it "skimmed" milk, and he understood thereby milk from which the cream had been taken for butter-making purposes. He drank a great deal of that sort of milk in those days, but somehow or other it didn't seem to be as blue as the "skim" milk of the present generation. And it was certainly a very wholesome and nutritious food. Nearly every boy's grandmother owned a cow in those days and if one happened to be out of "skimmed" milk, which rarely happened, the others were always able to supply the need of all the lads.

Which may serve as a more or less appropriate introduction to an extract from an article in a food bulletin written by Caroline L. Hunt concerning the "Food Value of Skim Milk." She says: It is natural to ask if skim milk is as valuable a food as whole milk. In answering this question several points must be taken into consideration. Freshness and cleanliness must be considered as well as composition Milk which has been received from the milkman and allowed to stand long enough to skim should probably never be given to children under two years of age. For older people the mere fact of its being old need not be taken into consideration. If skim milk is bought as such, however, it should always be thoroughly cooked, unless it is known to have been handled carefully and to be clean. So far as its nutritive value is concerned it has a trifle more protein, volume for volume, than whole milk, the per cent. being 3.4 instead of 3.3.

Skim milk seems to some people rather thin for use as a beverage, but others value it for this quality. If it is allowed to stand until it sours and is then churned or beaten until the curd is broken up into small particles, it makes a familiar and wholesome drink, often used under the name of buttermilk, for much of the commercial buttermilk is thus made from skim milk, some cream or butter fat being sometimes added. For cooking the lack of fat and any consequent lack of flavor can be easily made up, as butter or less expensive fats can be used with it. Pork and bacon fat make a particularly savory addition.

In the very interesting experiment of serving penny luncheons to anemic children in the Boston schools, one of the combinations of food that it was found possible to sell for the low price of one cent was skimmed milk and bread and butter. In an experiment in Birmingham, England, where an effort was made to serve food economically to underfed children, cocoa made with skimmed milk was served.

Thus it appears that skim milk is still almost as good as it was in the days when our grandmothers gave it to us by the crockfull.

ABOUT HIGH PRICES.

Former Governor Edward C. Stokes, of New Jersey, discussing the question of high prices of food products, thus delivers himself:

"No consumer loves high prices. They are the delight, however, of every producer, and as we all are producers, except the idle, the pauper and the helpless, each person strives to get for his product, whether it be labor or goods, as much as possible. One thing we cannot do—sell our own goods at high prices and buy our neighbor's cheaply at the same time. We must give and take on this question. The free trade theory has the postulate, 'Buy in the cheapest and sell in the dearest markets'—a happy condition if it could be realized. Unfortunately, that economic maxim is a theory and not a condition; for the moment we all become purchasers in the cheapest market the prices rise, and the moment we all become sellers in the dearest market the prices fall, and the free trade dream is therefore, never realized. Advancing civilization brings increased expenses. It doesn't cost the savage as much to live as it does you, but you would not change places. He has no schools, few clothes, no music, no art, none of the refinements or graces of life. Reform costs money. Honest elections, as conducted under our election machinery of today, are more expensive than the old methods where fraud was easy, but no one would advocate a return to the old system. So you pay for what you get and you get what you pay for. Unless there is an abnormal scarcity of production the cost of living will be no greater than what the average man can pay for."

That's a very optimistic and hopeful view of the high price situation which New Jersey's ex-Governor presents. Many will affirm that it is a sensible presentation of the problem of high prices. They will hold that high prices bring high wages so that the situation is all right after all. On the other hand, some will argue that incomes of the worker have not advanced proportionately with the increased cost of food. They will contend that the worker is not able to buy as much food or as substantial clothing for his family as he did in other days.

Nevertheless the fact remains that the American people are at this present moment the best fed people in the world. It doesn't take the newcomer long to realize that America is indeed the land of promise and that its people have very little of which to complain; we mean very little real trouble or privation.

THE NEW AGRICULTURE.

Nothing is more intimately associated with man's welfare than the weather, and yet, agriculturally speaking, it is becoming less and less a matter of supreme importance, remarks the National Herald. The corn crop of the United States for 1910 is 3,121,381,000 bushels, as compared with 2,772,376,000 bushels in 1909, and that in spite of the fact that 1910 has been a freak year in its meteorological conditions. This gain of nearly 350,000,000 bushels of corn celebrates the triumphs of improved farming methods over adverse weather conditions. It is also in the nature of a fulfillment of the prophecy made by Secretary Wilson several years ago that there would be no more general crop failures in this country. Any optimist could have made the statement, it is true, but the words of the secretary were based on a thorough knowledge and appreciation of the many changes that had taken place in the methods of crop production.

The assurance of fairly good crop yields, even under unfavorable conditions, has come to pass through the widespread education of the farmer, who has been taught what to do and what not to do. One of the great factors responsible for increased yields is the way in which the soil is prepared, so as to conserve the moisture in the ground for use during periods of drought. Within the last few years this has become a distinct field of study and investigation and is known as "dry-farming," whereby immense areas in the semi-arid regions of the west have been converted from barren desert into fertile fields of wheat and corn. Another great stride has been made through the use of selected seed in planting. Formerly the farmer shelled his corn as he came to it, but he has come to learn that nubbins produce nubbins. Still another strong link in the chain is found in the increased tendency to the raising of diversified crops in sections formerly devoted to a single staple. This has helped more than anything else to bring about prosperity in some districts, more especially in the Southern states, where King Cotton now lords it over a multitude of lesser princes.

ROTTEN EGG ABUSES MUST END.

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, of the Department of Agriculture, at Washington, in an address at Cooper Union, New York, on "The Importance of a Fresh, Clean Food Supply in Cities," showed how unnecessary was the traffic in rotten eggs. In referring to this subject he said:

"City people cannot realize the joy and pleasure of going into the garden and picking vegetables fresh from the vine or stalk and then preparing them for food. That is something which is impossible for you. One of the most important foods is eggs, fresh eggs. I understand you have a great many of the other kind here. There is only one way to tell a bad egg, and that is by breaking it gently. It is difficult for you to go into the barn and get a fresh egg. If you have never experienced that sensation I cannot tell you what a fresh egg is.

"Eggs as you all know, are more abundant in the spring than at any other time of the year, and they should be cheapest at that time. But it has got to be that the egg merchants corner the supply in the spring and store them so that the market may not be flooded and the price decrease. Eggs are a fragile article, and naturally in handling them some of them become cracked. But eggs are eggs, and they are named according to their state of evolution. The cracked egg if stored too long becomes decayed and is called a rot, and the good egg if kept too long under proper atmospheric conditions commences to evolve into an animal being and is called a spot.

"Now, rots and spots are a regular article of commerce. I have no objection to a man eating a passe egg. I am a prohibitionist in that respect, but there are hundreds of thousands of these rots and spots. Where do they go? They cannot be sold direct to be boiled and fried and scrambled. You would taste them. Again I repeat, where do they go? They go to the baker and are made into the cakes you eat. These are abuses which must come to an end. The Federal Department has seized tons that have been shipped from one state to another, but we can do nothing to prevent the industry within your own state and city. That is for you to do.

"There is no reason for this industry in rots and spots and checkers—fresh eggs that have been cracked and from which rots and spots evolve—can be preserved in a perfectly wholesome state if taken in time. They can be broken and frozen and so transported that when thawed they will be in a perfectly wholesome state, or they can be dried into powder. Frozen and dried eggs are a legitimate article of commerce. But you cannot make a good egg out of a rot or spot. All perishable food can be shipped in a proper and wholesome form if the right precautions are taken.

WORKING OF FEDERAL FOOD LAW.

Judge Hollister in the district court at Cincinnati, Ohio, recently fined the Frank Tea & Spice Company, of that city, $200. The information charged the firm with having adulterated and misbranded a so-called lemon extract. The company through its senior member, Jacob Frank, plead guilty and Judge Hollister promptly imposed a fine, and costs. He stated that there are too many cases where business people endeavor to comform to the letter of the law without observing the spirit of it. The same firm, after a hearing was found guilty of having violated the Federal law in selling adulterated white pepper, and Judge Hollister assessed a fine of $50 and costs against the firm. In the last case the company filed in the court a motion for a new trial.

BAD CURRANTS AND RAISINS.

Charles D. Woods, Director of the Maine Agricultural Experimeent station, states that out of 82 packages of currants and raisins examined only three weighed a pound net. Many of the packages, especially the currants, contained an inexcusable amount of dirt. A small number contained live worms or waste matter of insects. Some brands, according to Dr. Woods, contained grossly misleading or untrue statements on the labels. No prosecutions are to be made at this time, as this is the first time the Maine authorities have taken up the subject. Later on the matter is to be gone into again. Shippers and dealers corresponded with have agreed to correct the faults as far as possible.

DEALERS IN ROTTEN EGGS GO TO JAIL.

The sentence imposed upon two prominent produce dealers of Philadelphia some time ago by Judge Barrett will have a good effect. These men had been selling unwholesome and decomposed eggs, better known as "rots" and "spots," to unsuspecting customers. This was a flagrant violation of the law. This rotten egg act was enacted by the legislature of 1909 for the purpose of checking a growing and a very nauseous evil. Naturally, the act contains some drastic provisions.

In the case under consideration Judge Barrett sentenced the two men to imprisonment in jail for a certain period. They were perfectly willing to pay a fine and neither they nor their friends could exactly realize that they were going to undergo the humiliation of a term in prison. Efforts were made, of course, to evade the penalty, but in vain. The sentence of the court stood and the law was vindicated. Men who are guilty of palming off upon an unsuspecting public decayed or decomposed eggs or other articles of food deserve no consideration either from the courts or the public.

The Bulletin sincerely hopes that the sentence imposed in sending these two prominent business men of the city of Philadelphia to jail will never have to be repeated. It hopes this sentence will prove a sufficient warning to others who might be tempted to commit the same or a similar offense. Men who are doing business with the public by way of selling food commodities might just as well understand that the laws are going to be enforced and that this egg act will be enforced relentlessly upon all who are detected violating its wholesome provisions. Rotten eggs cannot be sold in this Commonwealth without bringing down upon the head of the seller the penalties prescribed by law.

As already intimated, strenuous efforts were made to secure a modification of the sentence in one instance. A special meeting of the Produce Exchange was held and a scheme originated and promoted to secure a reduction of the sentence from imprisonment to the payment of a fine. Special counsel was employed and a strong appeal made to Judge Barrett. The court heard all the pleas presented as well as the claims of the defendant. The statement of the agent of the Pure Food Bureau was likewise listened to. At the conclusion Judge Barrett stated that he saw no reason why he should change his mind or modify the sentence.

Some years ago Judge Barrett sent several milk dealers to jail for using embalming fluid in the milk they sold. That practice is not indulged in now.

THE PRICE OF BUTTER.

The discussion given to the subject of the cost of living has directed more or less attention to the Federal oleomargarine tax and the price of butter, says E. K. Slater, secretary of the National Dairy Union. People who are in favor of repealing the present oleomargarine law have taken advantage of the situation to loudly condemn as "undemocratic" and "un-American" this "burdensome tax on a pure wholesome and nutritious food product."

They conveniently forget to explain that over 97 per cent. of the oleomargarine put upon the market is taxed at only one-fourth of a cent a pound. They do not explain that only that oleomargarine that is artificially colored is taxed at ten cents per pound. Even if it were all taxed at ten cents per pound it would have absolutely nothing to do with the price of butter after the latter reaches thirty-five cents a pound retail. It costs about fourteen cents a pound to produce the very best grade of oleomargarine. Add to this a ten cent tax and the cost of production would be twenty-four cents. The product could be retailed at thirty cents at a handsome profit to manufacturer and retailer.

Looking at the question from any viewpoint it is clearly seen that the oleomargarine law has absolutely nothing to do with the price of butter.

The dairy interests of the country are not enjoying any benefit through oleomargarine legislation except as the integrity of the industry is maintained. In this every honest citizen should feel a keen interest. He should also understand that the effort put forth by the manufacturers of oleomargarine to secure legislation which will make it easy for men to commit fraud in selling oleomargarine is not inspired for "love" of the "poor man who wants a cheap substitute for butter."

The whole proposition may be thus summed up: Oleomargarine is now made to smell and taste something like butter. The manufacturers and a few retail dealers want the privilege of putting it upon the market so that it will look like butter, thus making it easy to commit fraud.

Every good citizen should be interested in pure food legislation and the oleomargarine law is just such legislation.

THE DAIRY COW.

The dairy cow does more than bring financial success to the dairy farmer, says the National Dairy Union. She makes him a better citizen than he would otherwise be. Her influence upon home conditions is a most pleasing contribution to those factors which are responsible for the changed conditions which prevail in the farm homes of to-day. Thousands of these homes are now characterized by comfort and happiness where they formerly were blighted by drudgery and unhappiness. Better financial conditions have contributed to this change, and the dairy cow has been in no small measure responsible. She has contributed in still another way. The dairy cow teaches kindness. Her owner soon learns that only by treating her kindly can he secure the highest possible returns from her, and she responds quickly to kind words and proper care. Her disposition is one that the human family might well emulate. She is patient and long suffering, acquiescing mutely in the arrangements made by her owner for carrying on the dairy business, striving at all times to repay him for every effort made for her care and comfort. The members of the family as they come in contact with her and her kindly disposition are influenced for good. As they appreciate the financial benefit to come from caring for her well they take a deeper interest in her. In doing so they unconsciously cultivate those qualities which make them better citizens. The dairy cow—the prototype of man's best friend is wielding a greater influence than she is credited with. She has always been found in the front ranks in the march of civilization and no agricultural country can long prosper without her.

THE UTILIZATION OF WASTE.

To waste is now regarded as a crime against society, remarks the American Grocer. The discovery of how former waste products may be utilized and given commercial value has been an object lesson that has taught the world that nothing should be wasted. As examples we have the wonderful results that have attended the utilization of cotton seed, with the resultant products, the chief of which is cotton seed oil. Other illustrations are the transformations of sludge acid or coal tar into a hundred or more valued commercial products, giving value to every particle of cattle and hogs slaughtered.

This modern fashion of stopping waste has been adapted to food products, and, in many instances, owing to the cupidity of man, waste has been put to a wrong purpose. Articles are manipulated and sold as human food that are without dietetic value. The pure food law is charged with stopping such practices and is doing good work in checking the use of decayed and fermentable matter, as in the case of the seizure of rotten eggs, which properly are used in tanning, but an offense when doctored and used as human food. The preparation of tomato pulp made from rotten fruit, skins and cores, which may properly be utilized as fertilizer, becomes a vile crime against humanity when doctored, painted and sold to resemble goods made from sound, fresh raw material. We trust the campaign against the wrong use of waste and misbranding will go forward with vigor, and that it will command the support of every manufacturer of wholesome food products and of every distributor.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

Report says the New Jersey cranberry crop this year was the largest and finest ever harvested. The berries were larger, better colored and finer flavored than usual.

Rumor makes the supply of tapioca short about 4,000 tons. There is a very active demand for the goods and a still more active market is looked for because of the shortage.

The smallest per capita consumption of coffee is by Japan, that nation of 40,000,000 people using in 1909 less than 160,000 pounds, while the consumption by Cuba, with its limited population, is almost as large as that of England.

Minnesota food officials sent out to canners during the season a warning against the use of "canning compounds." In all vegetables and fruits canned at factories nothing of a preservative nature is used except cane sugar, salt water and proper sterilization by heat.

Grocers of Norfolk, Virginia, are conducting an active campaign for new members of their association and for systematic improvement in trade conditions.

The Iowa State Dairymen's Association held a fine dairy show at Waterloo about the middle of October. It likewise gave a dairymen's and buttermakers' program which proved very interesting and profitable.

Record prices are looked for this season in pickled olives and olive oil, a shortage having been reported from both Europe and California.

The weight system for the purchase and sale of fruits and vegetables is favored by the newspapers of Ohio and various other states. It is predicted that this is the coming method.

Four million dozen eggs are said to be held in cold storage at Omaha, awaiting the time when prices will be advanced owing to the scarcity of the fresh laid article.

It is claimed that in Austria and some other European states the sale of dead fish is forbidden. Fish offered for sale are exhibited in tanks of water, alive, and are taken from the tank as required in a net, weighed and delivered, still flopping, to the buyer.

It is reported that the raisin crop of the world is about 100,000 tons short, as compared with last year. The shortage is attributed to unseasonable weather in all grape-growing countries.

It is a true saying that the world owes every man as good a living as he can make.

We are told that the year 1910, from the opening to the closing of the packing season, proved to be the poorest for many years for canners' crops. Such staples as tomatoes, corn and peas showed a very disappointing yield.

Prices for meat have been advanced again in Germany and the butchers and meat consumers are asking the government to pass relief measures by allowing foreign cattle, sheep and pigs to come in. The consumers also would like to see foreign fresh and conserved meats (corned beef, smoked and pickled tongues, etc.), enter as freely as was the case some years ago.

The loss from condemnations and the economic loss from diseased animals which are not actually condemned in slaughter houses is certainly a factor in the cost of meats at the present time. The bureau of animal industry, it is said, estimates this loss at $24,000,000 annually.

This year has been unpropitious to France from an agricultural standpoint, nearly all the crops of fruits and some of the vegetables being either very short or an entire failure. One who has looked over the field says that potatoes, which form one of the food staples of the masses, rotted in the ground, due to excessive rains and lack of heat. Carrots, turnips and that class of vegetables generally were similarly affected.

The Argentine government is said to be about to enforce a regulation prohibiting the importation into that country of canned goods containing over 1 per cent. of lead inside the cans in soldering, or more than one vent hole. This seems to be directed chiefly towards canned fish, and if the regulation is enforced will mean the prohibition of export business to Argentina from the United States.

The city of Milwaukee has passed a bread law requiring all bread offered for sale at retail in that city to have upon each loaf a printed or written label or wrapper plainly showing in averdupois its weight within twenty-four hours of the time it was baked, together with the name and address of the maker.

The Kentucky Retail Grocers' Association held its fourth annual convention in the city of Louisville in the closing days of October. The delegates pronounced it one of the best meetings the association has ever held.

The law is still a terror to evil doers but a shield and a tower of defense to the innocent.

The unscrupulous dealer who doesn't mind a fine for violating law is not happy when he receives a prison sentence.

The chief purpose of the pure food laws is to prevent imposition upon the consuming public.

Why shouldn't the sale of wormy chestnuts in the season be discouraged? The purchaser has a right to perfect goods.

Even though the genuine article cost a little more than the imitation or adulterated one, the buyer saves money by taking the pure goods.

The situation in most of the states is becoming embarrassing for the manufacturer or dealer who longs to add to his income by cheating the consuming public. The consumer is annually becoming more curious and the law more stringent.

Every grocer should read at least one good trade journal. Two or three of the standard publications would be still better. The country is now well supplied with ably edited publications devoted to various branches of trade. They are doing much good, as a rule.

The genial Dr. Harvey W. Wiley told some of the newspaper people a day or two before Thanksgiving that he had no prohibitions to issue, but would take the lid off and invite every citizen to eat his fill of the Thanksgiving cheer, merely avoiding the cold storage turkey. There is reason to believe that most folks took his advice, at least so far as the eating was concerned.

Our friends on the other side of the big pond have some advantages over Americans, but in the matter of pure and wholesome food for the table of the workingman as well as the rich we are at the head of the procession. We wish them no greater harm than the rapid appropriation of some of our customs and our daily bill of fare.

Patent medicines in great variety appeal to the human family. The Bulletin believes that some of these preparations are quite as injurious to the human system as the doctored food which was so abundant before the enforcement of pure food laws inaugurated a better condition of affairs.

One way to preserve health is to be moderate in eating and temperate in the selection of foods. The average man eats entirely too much for his own good.

The number of grocers who recognize the business gain of keeping the store room neat and attractive increases with each passing year. Painstaking catering to the esthetic sense of the public pays in more ways than one.

The conscientious grocer is usually the best friend of his patrons.

The householder is often tremendously careless about the family food.

The little ones would stay longer in this world—at least more of them would—if knowledge guided by wisdom ruled the conduct of their mothers.

What a heart that man must have who sends out food products which he knows to be dangerous and injurious!

The buttermakers should be protected against unfair competition; they do not object to fair and manly rivalry.

When butter and oleomargarine come into open competition the former wins every time.

There is nothing honest about the methods which seek to substitute for a superior product an inferior one wearing the former's name. It is downright rascality.

The farmers of Pennsylvania have the benefit of a good vinegar law, one intended to encourage the manufacture and sale of pure cider vinegar. They should take advantage of it at the proper season. Grocers, too, should encourage their farmer friends by patronizing them.

In at least one important respect the national food and drugs act has done a great deal of good. It has compelled the manufacturers of patent medicines to modify the language on the wrappers of their compounds, and always in the direction of truth.

Some folks are of the opinion that the soaring prices of pork and its various products will prove a great blessing to many who have hitherto indulged in more pork than was really good for them. Yet it would be difficult to convince lovers of pork that the critics are right.

Enforcement of law means the humiliation and punishment of somebody whenever the statutes are violated, either designedly or carelessly. This is by no means a pleasant task to those officers of the State who are obliged to bring offenders before the bar of justice.

Since the manufacturer knows precisely what ingredients enter into the composition of articles of food sent out by him into the markets of the world, he gets precisely what is coming to him when the federal or state government sends him to prison as a fitting punishment for his sins against the human family. His victims place implicit confidence in his honesty, a fact which should magnify the grade of his offense.

The Retailers' Journal rises to remark that the wise grocer buys, not exactly from hand to mouth, but he buys close to his needs and does not load up on a load of stuff just because there is a free deal goes with the big order. The successful grocer is not above buying a bargain, but he doesn't regard every bargain offered as a safe purchase. He knows a bargain when he sees it, but he does not break his commercial back trying to carry a lot of bargains at the same time.

The Food Commissioner of Missouri has issued a circular strictly forbidding the sale within the limits of the commonwealth of spoiling canned goods and dried fruits by wholesale grocers, brokers, etc., to grocers, peddlers and others. The commissioner designates the reprocessing of canned goods and dried fruits as "a filthy practice." He adds that the department will vigorously prosecute all violators of the law.

Missouri's Food Commissioner says that the "redoping" of dried fruits such as prunes and raisins, which have been on the market and become dirty, filthy, wormy, or buggy, is also a "filthy practice." A mixture of cheap molasses, sweet oil and water is used to give this questionable fruit a marketable appearance. This is regarded as an adulteration.

He is a wise food editor who suggests that the retail grocer who buys packages or canned goods and places them on his shelves without examining the labels is taking unnecessary risks. These goods may violate the law of the state in some way, and yet the grocer would become very angry if he found himself in the clutches of the law, not at himself but at the officers who would be merely doing their duty. The retail grocer should know what he is selling and should be able to answer correctly any question put to him by the housewife without referring to the label in her presence.

Here's another wise suggestion for the grocer: Your wife may not know more about running a grocery store than you do, but the chances are that she knows some things you might appropriate with profit.

The State Food Commission of Illinois is about to enforce regulations regarding the handling and preservation of oysters from contamination, and the people interested are advised to comply strictly with the instructions sent out last spring.

The Food Commission of Illinois is about to establish a standard on evaporated and condensed milk.

In order to carry out its work more effectively the American Association for the Promotion of Purity of Food Products has decided to incorporate under New York state laws. The organization which is made up of about a score of the country's leading manufacturers is against the use of any preservative in food products; favors uniform legislation throughout the country on subjects concerning the business of its members, and aims to improve the sanitary conditions of factories.

A Boston grocer lately took off an order route, having found that most of the customers had telephones. He spends half an hour each morning telephoning to one after another of the customers. At first the latter did not like it, but now they have become used to it. The plan seems to work pretty well, and the grocer is pleased, as he says he gets the orders much cheaper than heretofore. Some grocers have young lady bookkeepers who know how to use the telephone to great advantage.

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley wants the food and drug law so changed as to cover all advertising of goods which come under the law. Were such a plan adopted Uncle Sam could prosecute all advertisers who make misstatements in the newspapers. Various quacks and manufacturers of adulterated foods and fake medicines have been put out of business by barring their circulars from the mails, but others more powerful, it is said, have survived by placing their advertising in the newspapers.

The New York Journal of Commerce remarks that the trend of the times in regard to the branding of net weights on food packages and containers was shown from a statement coming from an employe of one of New York's large manufacturing jobbers that his firm had already started the reform. This company is marking the net weights on a few products put up in glass jars, and will extend the system as fast as possible to all of its goods. A law to this effect may not be necessary after all. The reform will probably prove so popular that other manufacturers and manufacturing jobbers will have to adopt the practice voluntarily.

The Grocers' Review remarks that the unsatisfactory profits in the grocery business will never be adjusted by increasing the cost to the consumer. The main factor in restoring the business to its proper condition will be found to be in an increased output, for which there are many opportunities, the most prominent of which is offered in frankly educating the consuming public.

The state government of Texas has purchased over 10,000 acres of land on which crops will be grown and looked after by convicts. A good deal of the land has been used for sugar plantations, and the present sugar cane area aggregates about 3,000 acres. This will make the state of Texas the largest sugar planter in the United States. This acreage is to be increased, and the cane will be sold standing to private interests. It is estimated that the state will get $200,000 this year for its cane.

"Any movement made by the State Pure Food Department," remarks The Beverage Trade News, in commenting on an article appearing recently in the Bulletin, "for the protection of the people from impure beverages or medicines will have the hearty support of the Brewers' Association of this State."

State Food and Dairy Commissioner Barney, of Iowa, will ask the Legislature to thoroughly revise the pure food laws of that state. As the laws now stand numerous small appropriations must be made for carrying on the work of the department and the commissioner believes that a general appropriation, covering the yearly needs of the department, would greatly simplify matters and prove more effective in both the results accomplished and the expenditure of the funds.

Officials have been raiding the cider and cider vinegar people of Kentucky who have been guilty of misbranding and adulteration. A number of offenders were brought to book. Cider vinegar appears to be a favorite with pure food adulterators, and retailers should exercise a great deal of caution in buying vinegar or cider.

Forty half barrels of dried eggs were seized by the government officials recently upon charges that the eggs were mixed with deleterious matter. A chemical analysis showed the presence of 20,000,000 bacteria of gas producing character in a quarter teaspoonful of the eggs. The information stated that the eggs were shipped from Topeka, Kan.

Since 1907 the meat exports of the United States have been steadily decreasing. In 1909 this decrease amounted to $11,000,000 less than the exports of 1908. The value of the packing house exports in 1909 was $170,000,000. This showed a decrease of $16,000,000 from 1908, and a decrease of $23,000,000 from the figures of the year 1907.

The great tea consuming countries of the world are China, England, Russia and the United States. Just how much tea is consumed in China it is impossible to tell. It has been variously estimated at figures between 1,000,000,000, and 2,000,000,000 pounds. Great Britain consumed in 1909 283,000,000 pounds, Russia 140,000,000 pounds, the United States 100,000,000 pounds. During the past quarter of a century the consumption of China tea in Great Britain has steadily decreased, being replaced by India and Ceylon teas. In the United States there has been a steady increase in the use of India and Ceylon teas. Russia, however, still clings to China tea, although in later years there has been a greater use of the India and Ceylon teas.

About five hundred grocers of Columbus, O., have begun a new system of selling by weight the products usually sold by measure. There are about six hundred grocers in that city and it is expected that as a result of the success of the new method that all the rest will soon adopt the plan. The wholesale dealers have joined in the movement but the commission houses are holding back as yet, as they claim they are compelled to buy from the producers by measure.

A California judge has given the following definition of what he considers a fresh egg:—"If the white does not cling to the shell, if it is not shrunken to exceed a quarter or an eighth of an inch, if the yolk is in its place, if the air cell is not darkened or discolored and the white exhibits the natural freshness of the egg when first laid, then the egg is fresh."

SUMMARY OF CONTENTS.
